When James A. Garfield was president of Oberlin college, a man brought for entrance as a student his son, for whom he wished a shorter course than the regular one. "The boy can never take all that in," said the father. "He wants to get through quicker. Can you arrange it for him?" "Oh, yes," said Mr. Garfield. "He can take a short course; it all depends on what you want to make of him. When God wants to make an oak He takes a hundred years, but He takes only two months to make a squash."

INDIANA DEMOCRACY OPENS BATTLE HERE

MR. ADAIR IS HEARD IN MILITANT KEYNOTE

Democratic State Campaign Gets a Notable Start in Big Gathering With Barbecue at Robison Park.

Congressman Adair's address delivered at Robison park Saturday afternoon, will be found in full on page 14 of The Sentinel.

Congressman John A. M. Adair, democratic candidate for governor, was greeted by a large and enthusiastic crowd at 2:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon, at Robison park, when he arose to deliver his keynote address of the democratic campaign in Indiana. The occasion marked the opening of the campagin and was one of the most notable events of its knd that the party has ever held in the Hoosier state.

Following the speech-making a reception will be held for the democratic state candidates, nearly all of whom were in attendance. Then comes the big barbecue.

The morning hours were devoted to the arrival of visiting delegates from all parts of the state and at noon about one hundred democratic editors partook of a sumptuous dinner at the Hotel Anthony, followed by short addresses by Mr. Adair, Carl Germer, of the Auburn Courier, J. W. Adams, of the Columbia City Post, and George Bittler, state treasurer.

Many Democrats at Park.

Thousands of democrats were at the park when Mr. Adair arose to speak. He discussed democratic issues pretty thoroughly. He told them "the coming campaign means more to the American people than any contest in which we have entered in a quarter of a century. He declared that "we must decide in November whether we will go back to the republican panics, when factories were closed, workingmen were idle and business was paralyzed, or whether we will continue to enjoy under Woodrow Wilson the greatest degree of prosperity our nation has ever known."

"The most remarkable thing in connection with state and national politics," he said, "is the fact that neither of the keynote speakers of the republican state convention or the republican national convention offered any criticism of the constructive legislation passed by our party in the state or nation—legislation under which we are more prosperous than ever before, and legislation no part of which any party will dare tell the people they will repeal."

Discusses State Issues.

Mr. Adair referred to the excellent service to the people of Indiana through the public service commission of Indiana, through the vocational education law, through the workmen's compensation law, through the fire marshal law, through the public printing law, which saves $50,000 a year to the state by providing competitive bids and dividing the contract into classifications, through the inheritance tax law, the registration law and arbitration law. He declared the republicans have no issue in this campaign.

Mr. Adair was in good voice and good spirits. He is making a strenuous campaign and Friday was nearly overcome with the intense heat. Immediately upon his arrival in Fort Wayne Saturday morning he went to his room in the Hotel Anthony and rested, denying himself to callers until time for the editor's dinner.

Very Much Alive.

Indiana democracy is very much alive, judging from the amount of enthusiasm displayed at the park and the tremendous outburst of applause that greeted Mr. Adair. His reference to President Woodrow Wilson was also an occasion for prolonged applause.

In every respect the meeting was

BOY OF 17 TRIES TO WRECK A TRAIN

George Gotzman is Arrested for Placing an Obstruction on Track.

George Gotzman, 17, who gave his address as 4567 West Fourty-Sixth street, Cleveland, was bound over to the circuit court of Kosciusko county on a charge of placing obstructions on a railroad track.

Gotzman was arrested by Nickel Plate Detective Bunk, Friday evening, after a day of anxiety in which Gotzman and two youthful companions played the roll of petty bandits. The lads first broke the lock on a hand car and dragged the car upon the tracks, near Tippecanoe. A farmer saw the boys pushing the car along the tracks and telephoned the railroad station. Bunk was notified and started on the trail.

Later in the day the youths placed several brake shoes and other objects on the track near Sidney. A freight engine, drawing only a caboose, went bumping over the obstructions. It is a miracle that the train was not wrecked, members of the crew say. The men looked around for the boys who had tried to wreck the train. Gotzman says they were hiding in a nearby corn field all the time.

The boys started towards Sidney. They met Detective Bunk. The lads ran. Bunk caught Gotzman. The other two youths, Edward Hanes, 15, and John Feezer, 14, both in knee trousers, fled into a woods.

Bunk organized a posse of Sidney citizens. They scoured the woods and all surrounding fields in vain. No trace of Gotzman's companions has been found. Gotzman was brought to Fort Wayne and arraigned in police court. The crime was committed in Kosciusko county and so Gotzman was bound to courts there.

"We just did it for fun," Gotzman said when asked why they put objects on the track. "We were just knocking around over the country."

INSPECTION OFFICER HERE MONDAY EVENING

Capt. Clarence Deems, jr., Sixth field artillery, U. S. A., has wired to Capt. John C. Scheffer, commanding officer of the local artillery organization, Battery D, that he will arrive in Fort Wayne on Monday morning. Federal inspection of the battery will take place Monday evening and Capt. Scheffer is sending out urgent notices to all members of the organization to be present on that evening.

Capt. Deems was instructed Friday by the adjutant general at Indianapolis to inspect the Fort Wayne battery. Word was received from the general to this effect asking that Capt. Scheffer arrange the date.

The local officers are confident that the sending of the federal inspector to Fort Wayne signifies that the battery is soon to be ordered to report at Fort Benjamin Harrison.

VESEY IS APPOINTED.

W. J. Vesey, Jr., of this city, has been appointed a member of the advisory council of the Indiana Coliseum club from Allen county.

TROOP CAMPS STORM SWEPT

Guardsmen's Headquarters in Pathway of Tropical Hurricane.

70-Mile Wind There Carries Everything Movable Before It.

El Paso, Texas, Aug. 19.—With army wireless reports stating there had been comparatively little damage and no known loss of life in the Brownsville district, chief anxiety centered early today on the situation at Corpus Christi and that vicinity as a result of the tropical storm which struck the Texas gulf coast yesterday morning. The only loss of life so far reported was in the sinking in the gulf of Mexico of the small steamer Pilot Boy, plying between Galveston and Corpus Christi.

The vessel carried a crew of thirteen, only three of whom have as yet been reported saved. These three were washed ashore alive at Port Arkansas, Texas.

Last Wires Go Out.

The last telegraph wires into Corpus Christi failed at 2:40 o'clock yesterday afternoon and the last telephone line went out shortly before 7 o'clock last night. Last reports from Corpus Christi placed the velocity of the wind at seventy miles an hour and it was stated the storm was expected to increase in intensity until midnight, when the crest would be reached. Nothing later has been heard.

The storm had abated somewhat at Brownsville at 11 o'clock, according to wireless reports to army headquarters, the only means of communication with that city. The messages stated, however, another storm was reported as approaching from an easterly direction. The storm played havoc among the army camps in the Brownsville district, practically half of the tents having been blown down by the storm, and loss of considerable army equipment was reported.

In Public Buildings.

Fully thirty thousand national guardsmen and regular soldiers, it was stated, were sleeping in public buildings in Brownsville last night. The guardsmen principally affected were those from Illinois, Iowa and Virgina. Their camps were either destroyed by the wind or flooded with water from a four and one-half inch rain. Fear was entertained that immense quantities of army stores and supplies would be ruined.

Last reports from Corpus Christi stated the storm had carried almost everything movable before it, leaving in its wake dozens of demolished summer cottages and thousands of dollars of damage in the business section. Many small craft in Corpus Christi bay were thrown high on the beach, it was said. Railroad property, however, was said to have not been greatly damaged and reopening of communication by rail at

GOING TOO FAR NORTH TO HELP INDIANA FOLK

Atmospheric High Jinks in Northwest Will Not Lower Heat Here.

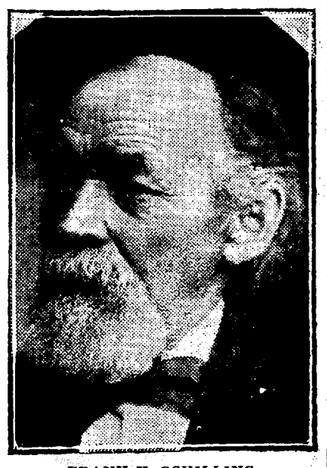
Indianapolis, Ind., Aug. 19.—The atmosphere disturbance in the northwest, which it was hoped would cause relief from the present hot wave in Indiana, may pass too far north to do much good. Observers at the local weather bureau say that relief may not come until next week. The forecast was for the present hot wave to continue over tomorrow at least. The temperatures over the country are reported 10 to 12 degrees above the average for the time of year. The low in Indianapolis was 76 at 6 o'clock this morning. At noon the mercury stood at 91 and was still going up.

WILL UNDERTAKE LONG SWIM

Nearly Fifty Miles in Route of Two Eastern Experts.

Provincetown, Mass., Aug. 19.—From the tip of Cape Cod to Nantasket beach, a distance in an air line of about 38 miles, is the long swim which will be undertaken tonight by Henry Sullivan of Lowell, and Charles Toth of this city. The men will start their race at 6 p. m. It is figured that allowing for the action of the tides, the actual distance to be covered if either of them is successful, will be nearly fifty miles. Both men are experienced long distance swimmers.

Another Pioneer Who "Votes 'er Straight"



FRANK X. SCHILLING.

Frank L. Schilling is a democrat. He is 92 years old. He lives at 1001 West Jefferson street. This pioneer resident says he has always worked for the democratic ticket and it is no departure for him to vote a straight ballot. He has reaffirmed his stand for democracy.

The pioneer is a war veteran and likes to see fighting blood in a president. "How will the parties line up this fall?" he was asked. And his answer was, "You can't tell."

Mr. Schilling has resided in Fort Wayne a greater part of his life. For two years he lived at Wheeling, W. Va., but during all this time he has been a democrat.

ATHLETIC BURGLAR UNDER HEAVY BOND

Jacob Woods is Captured After Breaking Into Shields' Store.

Zouave like, Jacob Woods, 35, laborer, from South Whitley, used a pineapple crate to aid him in scaling the side of the brick wall until he could reach the sill of a little window in the store of the Shields Clothing company, 722 Calhoun street. The window is twenty feet from the alley.

Woods broke the window. He climbed down into the storeroom, tramping shirt boxes and leaving his shoemarks on shelves as he wormed his way to the floor. He took a large leather suitcase and loaded it with clothing. He opened the cash register and found but fifteen cents. He took those. Then he made his exit by the rear door.

That was about midnight and Watchman Ed Brockmeyer found the open back door half an hour later. He called Manager Rinehart, of the Shields company, and notified the police. Rinehart missed the suitcase and two suits of clothes. He gave an accurate description of the suitcase.

Officer Cantwell and Brockmeyer hurried to the Nickel Plate railroad station where they found Woods on the platform. They identified him by the suitcase. He had purchased a ticket for South Whitley and was waiting for a train.

"I guess the jig is up," were his first words.

In the suitcase were two suits of clothes, several neckties and a $4 hat. He waived examination in police court Saturday morning and was bound over to the circuit court under $1,000 bond.

ENGINEERS LEFT FOR ANGOLA TO APPRAISE

Engineering corps under direction of D. K. Van Ingen, head engineer, who have been in Fort Wayne for ten days getting appraisement of New York Central railroad properties for the interstate commerce commission, left Saturday morning for Angola, where they will remain for ten days in the same work.

The private car of the engineers will be ready for occupancy when they start work at Angola. While in this city the engineers had quarters at the federal building because their car was up for repairs. Out of Fort Wayne twenty-eight miles of track was appraised. The engineers have 400 miles of track to appraise on the main and spur lines of the New York Central between Fort Wayne and Jackson, Mich., before Jan. 1, 1917.

SCHERER WILL NOT GIVE UP

WILL MAKE APPEAL TO SUPREME COURT

Two Conflicting Sections of Law Are Cited by Convicted Official.

Henry P. Scherer, Wayne township trustee, has refused to surrender office.

He stated Saturday that he would not give up his office until proceedings in quo warranto had tested the law as to his right to retain office pending appeal of his case to the supreme court. Scherer was voted guilty of misappropriating township funds by a circuit court jury. Judge W. H. Eichhorn, of Bluffton, entered judgment on the verdict Friday, declaring Scherer's office vacant.

Hamilton Is Named.

Allen Hamilton was appointed by the county commissioners to be Scherer's successor. He had not filed his bond of $1,000 early Saturday. Mr. Hamilton called at the office of the township trustee Friday evening and Saturday morning, but until his bond is approved he is not regularly in office.

State Is Through.

Frank A. Emrick, state's attorney, said Saturday that the prosecution had done its work. It is necessary for Mr. Hamilton to make a demand for the office. Judge Eichhorn did not give definite interpretation of the law governing holding of office pending an appeal of a case of a person charged wit ha felony, but his judgment on the verdict declared Scherer removed.

Basis of Scherer Claim.

The following is the law (Sec. 9663, Burns' Statutes, 1908) upon which Scherer bases his right to hold office: "In case any state, county, township, municipal or other public officer shall be convicted of felony, the office held by such officer shall be vacated by such judgment of conviction and the vacancy existing therein shall be immediately filled by appointment as provided by law, provided that in case of an appeal to the appellate or supreme court, said office shall not be vacated pending such appeal."

Another Section Shown.

Section 9660 of Burns' Statutes, 1908, says: "Appeal to Supreme Court—From a judgment of removal an appeal may be taken to the supreme court, but until such judgment is reversed the defendant is suspended from his office. Pending an appeal the office must be filled as in the case of a vacancy." This section was passed in 1897, and the former section in 1899. Mr. Scherer asserts the quo warranto proceedings must decide between the two sections.

COMMITTEE VISITS CANTON, O., Y. M. C. A.

The building and site committee for Fort Wayne's new Y. M. C. A. building returned Friday from Canton, O., where they inspected a new $198,000 Y. M. C. A. structure. The ground for the Canton building cost $19,000 and the equipment $25,000.

In many ways the building and site committee was impressed with what it saw. The main part of the Canton building is nine stories high, and there are about ninety dormitories. The structure is modern as to swimming pool and gymnasium.

While in Canton the Fort Wayne men visited the new auditorium which seats 4,000 and in which winter lecture courses are given under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A. Last year a lecture course was put on including six features for $1.50.

GERMAN CROWN PRINCE HAS NOT BEEN WOUNDED

Paris, Aug. 19.—The report that the German crown prince, Frederick William, is wounded and is in a hospital at Verdun, is authoritatively denied. The report that he had been wounded is based upon Zurich dispatch to the Italia, of Milan, saying that a Swiss officer, returning from the German frontier, was told by a German officer that the crown prince had been wounded in the head and one of his legs by splinters of a shell and that he was being treated in an ambulance [illegible]

ROADS' PRESIDENTS AS YET UNYIELDING

"If Strike Comes, Public Will Know Where Responsibility Rests," Wilson's Declaration to Them.

Washington, Aug. 19.—After an hour's conference with President Wilson today the 33 railroad presidents left the white house without giving any indication that they had abandoned their stand for arbitration but with assurances that the negotiations were not ended.

The railroad executives gave no final answer to the president's proposals but will deliberate on them today and see President Wilson again probably Monday.

In his address to the officials president Wilson said: "If a strike comes the public will know where the responsibility rests. It will not be upon me."

The president informed the officials that they were discussing an impractical thing in the present crisis when they mentioned arbitration, for the employes would not accept arbitration and he had no way of forcing them to accept it.

Speaks for Whole Public.

President Wilson declared he was the spokesman for 100,000,000 people, every one of whom had a deep interest in the present situation. His only object, he said, was to avoid a strike with its consequent disaster to the nation.

As President Wilson spoke to the officials he paced up and down before them in the blue room. Several times he emphasized points with a clinched fist. He spoke solemnly, often paused and faced them as he asked that they accept his plan.

Were Equally Solemn.

The railroad officials were equally solemn and Mr. Holden told the president they realized the seriousness of the situation.

"We must face the naked truth in this crisis," said the president. "We must not discuss impractical things. We must get down to a basis on which the situation can be solved."

While President Wilson was conferring with the executives he made public a stateemnt outlinging his plan and declared it seemed to him a "thoroughly practical and entirely fair program and I think the public has a right to expect its acceptance."

One ray of hope that it might induce the railroad managers to make concessions stood out in a suggestion that the interstate commerce commission might determine whether it would be right to increase freight rates to meet the added compensation to employes.

The President's Statement.

The president's statement follows:

"I have recommended the concesison of the eight-hour day—that is, the substitution of an eight-hour day for the present ten-hour day—in all the existing practices and agreements. I made this recommendation because I believe the concession right. The eight-hour day undoubtedly has the sanction of the judgment of society

FOUR SPEECHES ON MR. HUGHES' PROGRAM TODAY

Republican Nominee Busy Every Minute at San Francisco.

San Francisco, Aug. 19.—Charles Evans Hughes, republican presidential nominee, has a busy day of speech making before him here and at Oakland today. In addition he is expected to continue conferences looking to the restoration of harmony between California progressives and republicans.

His program called for four addresses, three in this city and one at Oakland. At 11 o'clock this morning he spoke at the Union Iron works, from 12 to 2 he was the guest at luncheon of the Commercial club and at 2:30 the nominee will address the California country newspaper men's conference.

This afternoon at 3:30 o'clock Mr. Hughes will address a mass meeting at the Oakland auditorium. At the conclusion of his address across the bay the nominee will return to San Francisco and remain at home until [illegible]

TEUTON LINE AGAIN BROKEN

Russians Cut Way Through and Make Advance Northeast of Kovel.

Today's War News Given in Summary

The Russian drive on Kovel has been successfully resumed, Petrograd announces today. After having been held up for some time along the Stokhod General Brussiloff's forces have broken through the Austro-German lines about forty miles northeast of Kovel at Czerwiszcze, making a notable advance, according to the official statement. Although there has been heavy fighting in this Volhynian region during the last fortnight the main Russian effort in this period has been exerted in Galicia in a drive for Lemberg from the east and southeast. This offensive movement has shown signs of a temporary slackening during the last few days and it now appears that the Russian thrust at Kovel, a vital point in the Teutonic defensive line because of its importance as a railway center, is again being given precedence by the Russian chief command.

On the western front heavy fighting continues in the Somme region and at Verdun. North of the Somme the entente allies, after their gains of yesterday, when they scored successes at several points between Pozieres and the river, are busy withstanding counter attacks. The French report today declares the Germans were repulsed repeatedly after violent fighting.

Northeast of Verdun the Germans have been forced out of the remainder of the ruined edge of the village of Fleury, which they occupied, Paris announces. Stubborn fighting is continuing along this sector of the Verdun front.

Southeast of Gorizia the Austrians are determinedly facing the Italians and have now begun counter attacks in efforts to prevent a further advance of the Duke of Aosta's armies towards Triest. Today's bulletin from Rome announces the prompt checking of an attack upon the left wing of the Italian positions on the Carso plateau.

The sinking of the Italian passenger liner Stampalia, a steamer of 9,000 tons, which has been plying the route between New York and Italian ports, is reported from London. Private advices indicate that the steamer may have been recently requisitioned by the Italian government.

Petrograd, Aug. 19.—(Via London, 2:46 p. m.)—The Russians have broken through the Austro-German lines on the Stokhod river in Volhynia and have made a considerable advance, it was announced today.

The break in the Austro-German front was made in the region of the village of Czerwiszcze, forty miles northeast of Kovel.

Gen. Funston Advises Withdrawal of Troops

Washington, Aug. 19.—While Secretary Baker and other war department officials refuse to confirm or deny reports that Maj. Gen. Funston has recommended immediate withdrawal of Gen. Pershing's expedition from Mexico, there were indications today that such a message had been received. Maj. Gen. Bliss, chief of staff, who returned yesterday from the border, conferred several days with Gen. Funston and inspected Gen. Pershing's lines in Mexico. Secretary Baker conferred with Gen. Bliss yesterday and later saw President Wilson.

Gen. Bliss is preparing a report on the mobilization of the national guard and it is considered possible he may have joined Gen. Funston in urging that the troops be withdrawn from Mexico as the concensus of military opinion appear to be serving no useful purpose as at present disposed. The withdrawal of the troops is the first subject to be taken up by the joint international commission.

MOOSE TO INITIATE 300 IN THE WOODS

Annual Picnic Will Be Held August 27 — Other Lodge Doings.

Something new and original has been planned by the officers of the Fort Wayne lodge, No. 200, Loyal Order of Moose. On Sunday, August 27, the annual picnic of the order will be held at Radhert's grove, at which time it is planned to initiate three hundred candidates. The initiation will take place at 11 o'clock in the morning in the shade offered by the trees of the woods.

Allen Martin and Isadore Sorg have been named captains of two teams which will engage in a tug of war. Other entertainments and amusements will also be furnished. A bountiful breakfast will be served from 6 o'clock in the morning until 12 at noon, and a dinner will be served from noon until dark.

William Trickett Giles, of Mooseheart, Ill., supreme secretary of the order, will be present at this annual event.

Ask City to Honor Dead.

Lawton Camp, No. 35, United States war veterans, appointed a committee at a meeting held Friday evening which will draft resolutions and present them to the mayor and officials requesting them to have the flags of the city lowered to half mast when a veteran of the civil war or Spanish war passes away. The committee is composed of Edward Cook, S. S. Kelker, Henry Guyer and John H. Johnson.

Woodmen Picnic Today.

Edward's camp, No. 3127, Modern Woodmen of America, gave its annual picnic Saturday afternoon in Swinney park. A large crowd took part in the joyful occasion. Prizes were offered to the winners in the various contests. Refreshments were served on the grounds.

Grotto Outing Sunday.

Members and wives of Cadessia Grotto, No. 50, will go to Tri-lakes Sunday, where the annual outing and picnic will be given. Automobiles will leave Court street at 8:30 o'clock in the morning and carry people to the famous lake resort. A program of events has been planned.

Yeoman Picnic.

The three homesteads of the Brotherhood of American Yeomen will hold their annual picnic at Robison park Sunday, August 27. Ex-Governor Clark, of Kansas, will be the speaker of the afternoon. Following the program a competitive drill will be given. The various homesteads over the entire state will send representatives. A basket dinner will be served at noon. The executive committee, composed of five members from each of the three local homesteads, compose the comittee on arrangements.

GRAND JURY ORDERS PROSECUTOR EJECTED

Sheriff Marches J. Frank Mann from Jury Room at Muncie.

Muncie, Ind., Aug. 19.—Prosecutor J. Frank Mann was led out of the grand jury room yesterday by Deputy Sheriff Clinton Stradling, after the grand jurors had refused to permit him to conduct an investigation and had ordered him from the room. Prosecutor Mann refused to go until he was escorted by the sheriff.

Although Special Prosecutor Wilbur Ryman, who was active in the graft charges against Mayor Rollin H. Bunch and other city officials, was appointed special prosecutor by Judge Frank Ellis to investigate matters pertaining to the prosecutor's office, he nevertheless commenced an inquiry regarding the issuance of retail saloon licenses by the county commissioners.

Charles H. Mitchell, manager of the Delaware hotel, of this city, it is alleged, has made public statements that it "cost him $500 extra" to get his license, and he was haled before the grand jury to explain his statement.

The session of the jury was called by Ryman, and Prosecutor Mann went to the court house yesterday morning, entered the grand jury room and announced his willingness to proceed with any investigation the grand jury desired to make. Judge Ellis was called in and he prevailed upon Mann to leave, but Mann stuck, with the statement that he was the regularly elected and acting prosecutor, and that he did not intend to leave until forced. The grand jury then voted to exclude him and the sheriff was called to enforce the order.

advanced over a section two miles long and 200 to 600 yards deep from Highwood to the junction point with the French forces, the war office announced today.

British naval aeroplanes raided German ammunition stations at Lichtervelde, in Belgium, thirteen miles southwest of Bruges, yesterday, causing large fires, the war office announced today. Forty-eight bombs were dropped from a height of about 3,000 feet. Large fires were afterward observed.

"All the machines returned safely," the official report says.

AUSTRIANS RAID AVLONA.

Make Successful Air Attack on Point Held by Italians.

Berlin, Aug. 19.—A successful air raid on Avlona, Albania, held by the Italians, is reported in an Austrian admiralty statement today. It says:

"On the night of Aug. 14-15 definite hits were obtained on a shore battery and on the barracks, a camp, a storehouse and a ship. Numerious fires broke out."

Naval aeroplanes, with the aid of torpedo craft and motor boats, made an attack on the Austrian seaport of Triest on the morning of Aug. 14, says an Austrian admiralty statement today. Several of the rading craft were brought down and although a number of bombs were dropped, little damage was done, it is declared.

An Italian statement on Aug. 15 reported a raid by Italian and French naval aeroplanes and other air craft on munition factories and the hangar at Muggia, near Triest, which was declared to have caused numerous destructive fires. The French lost one aeroplane, but otherwise all the squadron returned safely to its base, the statement asserted.

CAPTURE REMAINING RUINS.

French Occupancy of Fleury, on Verdun Front, Now Complete.

Paris, Aug. 19.—(Noon.)—The remainder of the ruins of the edge of the village of Fleury, on the Verdun front, was captured last night by the French, the war office announced today. The battle continued violently all night long and the French won their way forward foot by foot.

German counter attacks were made repeatedly on the Somme front. The statement says the Germans were repulsed after violent fighting, leaving fifty prisoners in the hands of the French.

Sub-Lieutenant George Guynemer, of French flying corps, whose exploits have won him a reputation as one of the most daring of French aviators, is again mentioned by the war office in today's statement. On Aug. 8 he won his fourteenth adversary.

ITALIAN STEAMER SUNK.

Liner Stamphalia is Sent Down by Torpedo From Submarine.

London, Aug. 19.—The Italian steamship Stampalia, of 9,000 tons gross, which plies between New York and Italian ports, has been sunk, says a dispatch to Lloyds'.

The Stampalia, a passenger liner in common with other Italian liners, mounted guns for protection from submarines. The last report of her movement was her arrival on July 30 at Genoa from New York, so that she apparently was sunk on the return voyage to the United States. She was commanded by Captain Lavarelle.

The Stampalia has accommodations for about 1,700 passengers. On her recent voyages from Italy to New York passenger traffic has been light and the agents in New York of the line said today she probably carried a comparatively small number of passengers. A crew numbered about 250.

No word had been received in New York by the agents of the line of the reported sinking of the Stampalia at the time of the arrival of the London press dispatch. The Stampalia first appeared in New York as an armed steamer in February last, arriving from Genoa with two 3-inch rapid-fire guns mounted on her aft deckhouse. Washington was notified and on being informed that the guns were to be used for defensive purposes only instructed the collector of the port of New York to grant clearance papers.

On arriving at New York on March 24 the Stampalia said a wireless warning had been received soon after leaving Genoa that a submarine was lying in wait for her off Sardina. Instead of sailing north of Sardina and the north shore of the Mediterranean, which before that time had proved the safest route, she went south of Sardina and through the strait of Bonifacio, between Sardina and Corsica.

Several armed Italian steamships have reported sighting submarines in the Mediterranean and in some instances being pursued by them and firing on them. Italian naval gunners were detailed to service on armed passenger vessels to operate the guns.

When the Italian steamship Re d'Italia arrived in New York Aug. 6 from Genoa her captain reported she had fired on three submarines in the Mediterranean. The steamship was pursued for seven hours and passengers said they believed one of the submarines had been sunk.

The New York agents for the Stampalia said today that two weeks ago they had received a cable message advising them that all sailings of the steamship had been canceled. They express the opinion on this account that the Stampalia had been requisitioned and was in the service of the Italian government. In this case it would have no passengers on board.

MR. ADAIR IS HEARD IN MILITANT KEYNOTE

fully up to expectations, the program being carried out as per schedule. It could not have been otherwise, however, with District Chairman Martin H. Luecke in charge.

The barbecue will start at 4:30 o'clock. A man experienced in staging barbecues is in charge. He was brought here by Mr. Luecke from Arkansas, where democratic barbecues have been the custom for years. It is Fort Wayne's first barbecue, however, and for that reason unusual interest attaches to the event aside from its political features. Ten quarters of beef, 300 watermelons, 3,000 ears of corn, 300 gallons of milk and many other good things are on the bill of fare. Everything was prepared right at the park and under the most sanitary methods. The melted butter is even applied to the ears of corn with brushes that have been thoroughly sterilized.

Began to Arrive Early.

The delegations began to arrive early Saturday, coming from all parts of the state. The following county chairmen outside of the district brought large delegations in special cars: Henry B. Heller, Decatur; A. W. Hamilton, Bluffton; Alfred Davis, Muncie; D. W. Callahan, Winchester; George Hall, Portland; Thomas McCulloch, Anderson; Charles Terrell, Marion.

Portland, the home of the democratic nominee, is well represented. Mr. Adair has been almost a lifelong resident of Portland. He is honored and respected by his home folks, regardless of party affiliations, and they believe he is going to be elected.

Cline Is Not Coming.

Congressman Cyrus Cline has sent a telegram to District Chairman Martin H. Luecke stating his inability to be present. The telegram, read at the meeting Saturday afternoon, follows:

"It is with sincere regret that I am unable to participate with you in opening the state campaign in the Twelfth district, as I had proposed to do. What Indiana is to the nation politically Allen county is to the state—a sure, dependable element in party success. The democratic party enters this campaign with confidence that the people regardless of party affiliation will reward its substantial legislative achievement for the whole people by returning it to power abundant and permanent. Prosperity for everybody and the democratic party go hand in hand."

Chairman Is Here.

Hon. Albert Sahm, of Indianapolis, who was selected to act as chairman of the meeting in the absence of State Chairman Bernard Korbly, who was prevented from participating on account of illness, arrived Saturday morning. Mr. Sahm is an optimistic democrat. He believes that the democratic party is going to win in both the nation and state next November. He is a German and was recently appointed to a place on the national campaign committee. He was postmaster at Indianapolis during the last Cleveland administration, and was at one time auditor of Marion county. Mr. Sahm is an influential member of the German-American Democratic club, of Indianapolis, and is secretary and treasurer of the State Life Insurance company.

Hoffman Is Popular.

There is no more popular person in attendance at the meeting than Hon. E. G. Hoffman, of this city, democratic national committeeman. Everybody knows him apparently, and he knows everybody. Another Fort Wayneite who is popular at the meeting is George Bittler, state treasurer. Mr. Bittler will remain here over Sunday, returning to Indianapolis Monday.

State candidates who were present for the democratic barbecue included: For governor, John A. M. Adair; for lieutenant-governor, Mason J. Niblack; for secretary of state, Homer L. Cook; for auditor of state, Dale J. Crittenberger; for treasurer of state, George A. Bittler; for attorney general, Evan B. Stotsenberg; for supreme court (second district), Douglas Morris; for appellate court (northern division), James J. Moran; for appellate court (first district), John C. McNutt; for supreme court (third district), Charles E. Cox; for supreme court reporter, Philip Zoercher; for superintendent of public instruction, S. L. Scott; for state statistician, S. W. Kahn.

Aided in Reception.

The various branches of the Young Men's Democratic League of Allen County were a prime factor in the reception of visiting delegations Saturday at Robison park. Harry Muller, organizer of the young democrats of the county, sent a letter Friday to 1,000 young democrats of the county asking them to rally to make the barbecue from an entertainment standpoint one of the greatest of its kind ever held. There were many district delegations of young democrats. "The democratic party is the young man's party, the constructive, live party. Wilson is a young man's president," declared Mr. Muller's letter to the young voters.

in its favor and should be adopted as a basis of wages even where the actual work to be done cannot be completed within eight hours.

"Concerning the adjustments which should be made, in justice to the railroads and their stockholders, in the payments and privileges to which their men are now entitled (if such adjustments are necessary) there is a wide divergence of opinion.

"The railroads which have already adopted the eight-hour day do not seem to be at any serious disadvantage in respect of their cost of operation as compared with the railroads that have retained the ten-hour day, and calculations as to the cost of the change must, if made now, be made without regard to any possible administrative economies or readjustments.

"Only experience can make it certain what re-arrangements would be fair and equitable either on behalf of the men or on behalf of the railroads. That experience would be a definite guide to the interstate commerce commission for example in determining whether, as a consequence of the change, it would be necessary and right to authorize an increase of rates for the handling and carriage of freight (for passenger service is not affected).

"I therefore proposed that the demand for extra pay for overtime made by the men and the contingent proposals of the railroad authorities be postponed until facts shall have taken the place of calculations and forecast with regard to the effects of a change to the eight-hour day that, in the meantime, while experience was developing the facts, I should seek, and if need be, obtain authority from congress to appoint a small body of impartial men to observe and thoroughly acquaint themselves with the results with a view to reporting to congress at the earliest possible times the facts disclosed by their inquiries but without recommendation of any kind and that it should then be entirely open to either or both parties of the present controversy to give notice of a termination of the present agreements with a view to instituting inquiries into suggested readjustments of pay or practice.

"This seems to be a thoroughly practical and entirely fair program and I think that the public has the right to expect its acceptance."

Will Make Statement Soon.

The railroad presidents indicated they would make a statement soon. All said that the question was not closed and that the negotiations would be continued.

President Holden, of the Burlington, spokesman for the officials, said no time had been set for them to see President Wilson again, but that it was necessary to confer with the committee of managers, which has the authority to accept or reject plans.

Several of the executives indicated disappointment over President Wilson's statement, but showed particular interest in his mention of the possibility of the interstate commerce commission considering an increase in freight rates.

Talk to Executives.

In his talk to the executives today President Wilson told them they were facing a condition, not a principle. He asked why they should demand arbitration when there was no law for compulsory arbitration and he knew it to be impossible to get a compulsory arbitration law through congress. The employes, he recalled, had consistently refused arbitration and he believed it was impossible to gain it in the present controvery.

"I have been asked to sit as a judge," said the president in substance. I cannot do that. I simply can suggest a plan, a way in which I believe this question can be settled fairly to all sides."

President Wilson urged again that the railroads accept the plan, adopt the eight-hour day, at least temporarily, and then allow the proposed commission to fully investigate the facts. He pointed out that the railroads brought forward one set of statements and the employes another and it was impossible for him to tell which was correct.

Only Equitable Way.

In conclusion President Wilson said he believed his plan was the only equitable way of settling the controversy and that under it both sides would be treated fairly. He considered it useless to discuss the principle of arbitration when it seemed impossible to bring about an arbitration in the present crisis.

Mr. Holden gave President Wilson estimates of the cost of the eight-hour day to the railroads. President Wilson in reply urged that the railroad officials with the committee of managers very carefully consider his plan before giving any final answer. That was agreed to by the railroad executives.

It was learned definitely that in their acceptance of President Wilson's plan the employes made no reservation.

Not Hopeless, but Serious.

One of the railroad presidents said after the conference that he did not consider the situation hopeless, but that it was very serious. President Wilson, he said, had asked for a "showdown" and that the railroad officials would give a final answer as soon as possible.

In spite of tone adopted by some of the railroad officials the belief was current in administration circles that, however reluctantly, the railroads would make some concessions.

After the conference President Wilson telegraphed to a number of presidents of western railroads inviting them to come to Washington.

Summoned to White House.

The railroad heads were summoned to the white house for a conference at 11:30 o'clock. The employes' committee of 640 having voted to accept President Wilson's plan and thereby "put the thing up to the railroads" had another meeting today to talk things over.

Out of the maneuvering of both sides for a position which will enjoy the support of public opinion come many evidences that each is working to organize public sentiment in its favor and make it manifest in a positive way.

Turning to Other Employers.

It was understood today that the railroads are turning to other large employers of labor throughout the country to express their support of the preservation of arbitration as a settlement of industrial disputes while President Wilson and the employes are drawing support from large manufacturing and other interests vitally interested in keeping the railroads open for business, and from those who want to see the movement for the eight-hour day carried a long step forward.

The evidences point to moves by each side to "back fire" the other. The attitude of the railroad presidents to ask for time to consider the president's plan was said to be part of this program.

Hope for Counter-Proposal.

Hope existed, however, in the belief that the presidents might advance a counter-proposal, such, for example, as that they allow the eight-hour day principle but place collateral questions before a board of arbitration instead of the suggested federal commission. This plan, it was pointed out, would conform to the railway managements' insistence on the principle of arbitration.

As yet President Wilson has not mentioned the possibility of government ownership of railroads in case of a strike, white house officials and those who have conferred with him assert. He is said to be determined, however, not to accept from the railway presidents a final rejection of some plan which might be made the basis of an agreement, and still considered appealing to the financiers who control the roads if negotiations with the presidents should fail.

least was expected early today. Other important places isolated by the hurricane include Kingsville, Sinton, Beeville, Harlingen and Alice.

Gov. E. F. Dunne, of Illinois, who had been inspecting the Illinois guardsmen's camp in the Brownsville district, left Brownsville for his home and apparently is marooned on a train somewhere between Brownsville and Houston. His train left Brownsville yesterday afternoon and so far as known has not been heard from since.

DAMAGE WILL BE HEAVY.

Dallas, Texas, Aug. 19.—The tropical storm, which struck the extreme south Texas coast yesterday and last night, inflicting considerable damage in the region between Corpus Christi and Brownsville, passed inland southwest of San Antonio, followed the Rio Grande valley to about Del Rio and then spent its force on the plains of northern Mexico. This was the summary given today by Dr. J. L. Cline, head of the local weather bureau. Atmospheric conditions resulting from the storm promised a heavy rain fall over the western and southwestern half of the state last night.

"There has been considerable damage on the coast, where thousands of acres of land are probably overflowed," said Dr. Cline.

"The worst damage is probably in the immediate vicinity of Corpus Christi."

No communication was possible early today with Corpus Christi, as all the telephone and telegraph wires were still down.

One report received here was that Corpus Christi bay had risen over the causeway connecting the city of Corpus Christi with the mainland.

THIS LITTLE PARAGRAPH

From the Gimlet Strikes Us as Containing Large Gobs of Truth.

"If you have a real good hand-saw that keeps its shape, cuts true and fast and seldom gets dull, you begin to think a good deal of that saw and the man who sold it to you. Just what you paid for the saw is forgotten in a few months—50 cents more or less is unimportant. You know that when you buy another saw, you will buy the same kind if you can get it."

This principle runs all throught business, and was coined into an enduring phrase by E. C. Simmons when he observed that "The recollection of quality remains long after price has been forgotten."

One of the pleasantest features of our work is rendering customers the kind of service that brings them back with their friends.

You will find that Meigs, the Eyesight Specialist, in the Lyric Theater Building, has the shop, the men, and the disposition to keep on delivering good "saws" every day in the week, year after year.

NEWS OF FORT WAYNE'S NEIGHBORS

NEW DIRECTORS NAMED.

Warsaw, Ind., Aug. 19.—Directors of the Winona assembly and Bible conference have been re-elected with Dr. Parley E. Zartman, Dr. Lamber and E. W. Allen as additional directors. The annual meeting was held in Raike's hall at Winona Lake on Thursday afternoon, and Dr. E. S. Scott was made permanent chairman. Dr. Sol C. Dickey, general manager of the assembly, made a report of present conditions and future outlook of the conference. The directors of the assembly are: Marion Lawrence, Chicago; E. O. Excell, Chicago; Rev. W. E. Biederwolf, Monticello; Rev. M. H. Lyon, Winona Lake; Rev. M. B. Williams, Winona Lake; W. P. Carmichael, St. Louis, Mo.; W. D. Frazer, Warsaw; E. A. K. Hackett, Fort Wayne; Rev. I. E. Honeywell, Oak Park, Ill. James H. Matchett, Bourbon; J. J. Humphreys, Van Wert, O.; Rev. A. Judson Arrick, Hamilton, Ont.; Rev. W. F. Irwin, Louisville, Ky.; Dr. H. Lambert, Okmulgee, Okla.; E. W. Allen, Winona Lake; Rev. B. F. Nyce, Muncie; Rev. C. G. Jordan, Volant, Pa.; W. M. Bruning, Evansville. Lloyd D. Claycomb, Indianapolis; Dr. S. C. Dickey, Winona Lake; Dr. P. F. Zartmann, Winona Lake; C. W. Fairbanks, Indianapolis. William Jennings Bryan is president of the new Winona assembly.

SEEKS A DIVORCE.

Montpelier, Ind., Aug. 19.—Mrs. Maggie Murphy, of this city, through her attorneys, Pursley & Peterson, filed suit in circuit court Friday asking a divorce from her husband, John L. Murphy. The complaint sets out that they were married on the 16th of October, 1897, and lived together as man and wife until the 10th of October, 1913. She also alleges that Murphy was an habitual drunkard, spending all of his money for liquor and failing to provide for her, forcing her to support herself by acting as housekeeper, waitress and dishwasher in a restaurant. Inasmuch as she has been disregarded by the defendant the past two years she asks a divorce, attorney fees and other relief. Murphy is said to be in Fort Wayne at the present time.

HURT IN ACCIDENT.

GIRL BITTEN BY A SNAKE.

Decatur, Ind., Aug. 19.—Edwina, age 7, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Wilder, of Monmouth, was bitten on the top of the foot near the large vein leading from the great toe by a large snake as she ran through the gate to the barnyard yesterday afternoon. Excitement ran high for a time, and the prompt action of a sister, Mrs. Fred Nye, in sucking whatever poison might have been in the wound was resorted to as a "first aid" before the arrival of a doctor. The little girl was barefooted. The first intimation of the snake's presence was a stinging sensation similar to a scratch on her foot. Looking, she saw the snake coiled with head uplifted.

MAN WILL BE BURIED.

Auburn, Ind., Aug. 19.—An unidentified man will be buried in the potters' field at Corunna Sunday at the expense of the taxpayers of Richland township, unless someone is found to claim the body of the person killed on the New York Central tracks one mile east of Sedan Thursday afternoon shortly before 4 o'clock. The stranger was walking on the New York Central tracks at the time and was just a mile east of Sedan when he was killed. Two engines coupled together were being sent over the road, and it is possible that he did not hear them coming, although the engineer and fireman say that he seemingly did not heed their signals.

MRS. COOLEY DEAD.

Hartford City, Aug. 19.—Mrs. Robert Cooley, 63, for the past twenty-two years a resident of the old Cooley farm, east of this city, passed away at her home there Friday morning after an illness of less than two weeks with malarial fever. Thursday afternoon, when Mrs. Cooley was visited by the attending physician her condition was announced as much improved and at no time was her condition thought serious. Early Friday morning, however, her condition became suddenly worse and she died before a physician could be called to her bedside.

WARSAW YOUTH ARRESTED.

Warsaw, Ind., Aug. 19.—Charged with stealing automobile tires, Ross Black, aged 14, was arrested Friday morning by Chief C. B. Moon and is being held until he can be given a hearing in the juvenile court. It is said that Black has stolen at least five tires from private garages and sold them. Four of these tires were found at the junk shop owned by Henry Bechtol and located near the Big Four stockyards. The tires were stolen from the garages of John Beagle, Charles Grabner, J. M. Sloan, Conrad's garage and Peter Alexander.

CHARGES CRUELTY.

Portland, Ind., Aug. 19.—Alleging cruel treatment Mrs. Martha Hanes, on Thursday, entered suit in the circuit court asking a divorce from Garfield F. Hanes. The complaint alleges that they were married in April, 1903, and separated in March, 1915. She alleges that he locked her in a room and frequently cursed and abused her and that he is an habitual drunkard. They have two children, Henry E., age 12, and Mary E., age 11. She asks for their custody. The present whereabouts of Hanes is not known.

CASE AT DEFIANCE.

Defiance, Ohio, Aug. 19.—Thursday a sick child was reported with the symptons of infantile paralysis. Friday that child and another were without doubt ill with the dread disease.

The three year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Kroekel, 829 Kinter street, and a boy in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Holzer, 815 Jefferson avenue, are the sick children. Their cases are in the care of the board of health and every precaution is being used that can be to prevent a spread of the disease.

FOR WIFE DESERTION.

Kendallville, Ind., Aug. 19.—Henry Mullen was given a preliminary hearing in the court of Justice E. P. Lash on a charge of wife desertion preferred by Mrs. Artie Mullen. He was bound over to the Noble circuit court under a bond of $500, which he was unable to furnish. He was taken to jail by Sheriff Sawyer. According to the affidavit filed by his wife, Mullen deserted her last September and has been away ever since. Thursday he appeared in the city and was immediately nabbed by the officials.

SHEPHARD IN JAIL.

Columbia City, Ind., Aug. 19.—Walter Shephard is now in the county jail and will remain there eleven days unless some of his friends go to his rescue and pay his fine and costs, amounting to $11. Mr. Shephard was arrested Thursday on a charge of assault and battery brought by his wife, who alleges that he struck her several times while in an angry mood. The case was heard before Mayor F. L. Myers and the fine was set at $1 and costs.

EXPERT AT KENDALLVILLE.

Kendallville, Ind., Aug. 19.—M. L. Fisher, assistant chief of soils and crops of Purdue university, arrived in the city at noon yesterday to spend the afternoon on the course of the Kendallville Golf club. Being an expert on soils and grasses, he is expected to give the greens committee considerable information as to best methods to adopt for the fall seeding and other construction work on the course.

NEW SCHEDULE.

Bluffton, Ind., Aug. 19.—The B. G. & C. Traction company has announced a new schedule effective next Sunday. Cars will leave Bluffton for Geneva at 5:45, 8:00, 11:00, 2:00, 4:00 and 7:00, except on Saturdays, when the car at 7:00 in the evening will be cancelled and an extra will leave at 9:15. The first car will not run on Sundays. The schedule adds to cars in addition to the number included in the old time card.

RAMSEY WILL RECOVER.

Columbia City, Ind., Aug. 19.—John Ramsey, of Thornereek township, who was kicked by a horse above the right hip bone and had a button on his clothing forced through the abdominal wall, cutting a hole clear through the flesh, was resting fairly easy Friday. He suffers considerable pain, but there were no internal injuries and his condition is not serious.

EMERY DUST IN HIS EYE.

Bluffton, Ind., Aug. 19.—Bob Holmes was painfully injured Thursday afternoon while working at his blacksmith shop here, when a piece of emery flew in his eye. He had the emery removed and is feeling much better, although the injury necessitates the use of dark glasses.

BOY BITTEN BY A DOG.

Payne, Ohio, Aug. 19.—Ward, the oldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Key, was painfully bitten on the thigh and hand by a large dog belonging to the street superintendent of the paving gang here. Two long gashes were made by the dog's teeth. The wounds have been cauterized.

FALLS UNDER A WAGON.

Bluffton, Ind., Aug. 19.—Homer, the four year old son of Ervin Dailey, who lives west of Toesin, was run over by a spring wagon yesterday afternoon and seriously injured. The lad went to climb onto the wheel of his father's wagon when the horses started unexpectedly.

JUBILEE AT ASHLEY.

Ashley, Ind., Aug. 19.—A harvest jubilee and booster day will be held in this city, Saturday, August 26. There will be many excellent attractions. The Ashley band accompanied the Ashley K. of P. quartette to Helmer Wednesday evening.

SOME BIG MAN.

CONGRESS OF OLD LADIES, ITS LIGHTS AND SHADOWS

Life is a strange mixture of light and shadow. These two seem to be constantly intermingling, bringing us joys and sorrows. In the midst of pleasure, when the sun seems at high tide, the clouds arise and envelope us in partial darkness. Again, when the sun is hidden and the heart is sad, the clouds melt away, bringing us the light of noon-tide.

Robison Park will soon have as its special guests, those about whom the shadows of old age are falling. With whitened hair, infirm step and faltering voice, they are approaching life's sunset hour. To them, the things of youth have passed away. Even the children seem changed, for they so often pass them by unnoticed. As the shadows of eventide play about their heads, their hearts are often sad. They crave to be shown that we love them still; that we do respect and honor them. They need to see again that even the shadows of age will vanish before the light.

Every old woman, 75 years of age or older, is invited to Robison Park on Wednesday, August 23rd. They shall be the park's special guests. We want them to forget the shadows, to renew their youth and to be girls again. They shall carry the flag in grand parade, as did the white-robed maidens on Girls' Day—the flag for which many of them sacrificed and gave their loved ones in '61. We want you to help honor them. We want you to show by your presence and by your friendly smile and word of kindly greeting, how much you respect the heroic patience with which they have surmounted all life's obstacles. We want to drive away every shadow and bring back to them for a day, the light of youth and happiness.

Welcome to Indiana Democracy

Fort Wayne accounts herself highly honored today as host to many of the prominent leaders and thousands of the rank and file of Indiana democracy, gathered in this goodly city for the formal opening of the state campaign and for the pronouncement of the keynote address of Hon. John A. M. Adair, democratic nominee for governor. Fort Wayne is immensely gratified as well at the opportunity to throw open her gates to this representative Indiana citizenry, and she bid her guests a most cordial welcome.

There was something especially felicitous, too, in the selection of Fort Wayne for the opening of the campaign by Indiana democracy. This has long been accounted a democratic stronghold. Allen county has been a bulwark of strength for the democratic party in Indiana—the home of a militant majority which has been proud to subscribe to democratic tenets, and which is equally proud to see in party accomplishment and in the fruition of governmental ideals a splendid justification of its faith. The achievements of the democratic administration of Indiana affairs, notably in the last two administrations, have been such as to challenge the admiration and win the plaudits of the people of this state. The enactment of needed legislation of prime importance, the payment of the state debt and the development of broader governmental activities in response to an enlightened conception of governmental service has been an outstanding factor of democracy's service to the people of Indiana during the past eight years.

And now, on the eve of another contest at the polls, Indiana democracy goes before the people to render an account of its stewardship. With a splendid state leader in the person of Hon. J. A. M. Adair, and behind him an equally strong and capable list of candidates for other places on the state official roster, there is every reason for the confident expectancy of popular approval at the polls in November. It is under these most felicitous circumstances that Fort Wayne extends her hand in welcome to Indiana democracy today.

Chairman Hay, of the House military committee, who was recently appointed to a judgship by the president, clearly proposes to run true to form so long as he is in congress. As a trouble-maker Mr. Hay has frequently risen to heights that command attention if not admiration, and he has followed the president's veto of the army appropriation bill by the introduction of a new measure in which the proposed revision of the articles of war has been completely eliminated. This has been one of the features of the bill on which the administration has insisted, but as forced through the house it contained a provision held to be in the interest of certain retired officers who were "at outs" with the army and are only awaiting immunity before airing their grievances. It's going to mean a fight, but Mr. Hay might as well begin to prepare right now for a licking.

Statistics on the volume of money in the United States hsow that we now have a total of $4,471,595,052 as aaginst $3,997,368,468 a year ago. On the basis of one hundred million population, that's just $44.71 for each individual, or an increase of $4.74 since last year. As soon as some other investigations are out of the way, an inquiry as to where you got that $4.74 might not be out of order.

The president may or may not succeed in averting the threatened general strike on the railroads, but it must be admitted that he is exerting every effort to assist the opposing forces in reaching an amicable agreement and to avert the break. If worst comes to worst, it will be through no failure of the president to do everything humanly possible to prevent it.

Speaking in San Francisco, Mr. Hughes told California republicans and moosers that he was in no wise concerned in the factional breach that tore things wide and utterly prevented anything like a merger of the party elements there. Mr. Hughes realizes that he has trouble enough of his own in this campaign, without taking on those of the other fellow.

Dispatches from the Texas border bring the news that Kid McCoy, former pugilist, now has a good job driving an automobile for one of the regimental comamnders stationed there. At least Mr. McCoy seems to have finally found a place in which his services are of some real value to humanity.

The Muncie grand jury, which has just been summoned for a new session to look into affairs there, has begun proceedings by throwing the prosecuting attorney out of the grand jury room. Altogether this appears to be a rather promising indication that things are soon to be doing.

STRANGE WAYS OF OFFICIALS

(Pittsburg Dispatch).

Doing queer things appears to be a habit with a good many of the immigration officials and those on the Canadian border, in Vermont, seemingly try to keep up the record. A few days ago some nurses from Ottawa, Ont., who had been engaged by a New York hospital to help fight the infantile paralysis epidemic, were stopped at Alburg, in the Green Mountain state, and refused admission to the United States under the alien labor act. The authorities at the Canadian capital intend to make representations to Washington respecting the treatment accorded the nurses, who, they declare, were on a mission of mercy for which they had volunteered. There was no question of the terms of the law being trespassed.

The nurses say that when they reached the border they were dragged from their berths and put out into the rain. Apparently there was no distinction between them and undesirable aliens with a criminal record or likely to become a charge upon the country. They returned to Ottawa as soon as they could and announce that, even though a change of regulations be made which would permit them to give their help in fighting the epidemic, New York or any other American community is likely to do without their services.

It seems strange that, even though the local officials in this case did not feel they were permitted to exercise their discretion and decide that the nurses were not alien contract laborers, the higher authorities could not have taken action before the arrival of the nurses that would have given them entry without trouble. The New York epidemic was serious enough to engage the attention of the federal government and the immigration authorities knew what the nurses were coming for. Such incidents are not likely to increase either the friendship or respect of our neighbor for us. All the foolish things are not being done in war-crazed Europe.

RALSTON INVITES PRESIDENT.

Urges Hi mto Speak in Indianapolis on Highway Day.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 18.—Governor Ralston, of Indiana, has invited President Wilson to go to Indianapolis on centennial highway day, Oct. 12. The committee which is arranging for the day's ceremonies also is anxious to have Vice-President Marshall speak on that day. It is not known what the president's answer will be, but it is not thought that he will accept. The vice-president has advised the committee that he does not know where he will be on that date and hence can make no promises that he will go to Indianapolis.

In his letter to the president, Governor Raslton said: "I know that the demands upon you are greater than any man can meet and that of necessity you have to deny yourself the pleasure of accepting many invitations extended you, but the event in which I am urging you to participate will be an epoch-making one for better roads, and your participation therein will make it historic."

HANDS.

Hands are flat projections on the end of the arms, each divided equally into five spaghetti looking objects called fingers.

When the fingers are bent in and folded (except with pickpockets—they only "bend in" somebody else's pocket) they are called fists.

Hands are the cause of bargain sales, the "slightly soiled" bargains. Some people use their brains to make money, but the majority rely on the hands, as is the case with prizefighters, cartoonists and traffic policemen.

Some fellows have used their hands to make money, but don't try it their way, because you won't get a chance to "see America first."

Hands are also used for talking and ending arguments, that is, some people's idea of ending an argument is to let the hand float up till the other fellow's nose stops it.

Women use their hands a great deal for grasping telephone receivers, diving into purses, powdering noses and doing up hair.

Small boys' hands are never found under water faucets.

GO TO CHURCH SUNDAY

COMPLETE PLANS FOR ANNUAL TRACK MEET

Will Be Held Sept. 4 Under Auspices of Associated Christian Workers.

The Associated Christian Workers of the city have their plans laid for the annual field meet to be held in Foster park on the afternoon of Sept. 4. The young people will have many amusements for the day, as well as fine speaking, a good supper and a general good time.

The program will start at 1:30 o'clock with a grand balloon ascension and continue with track events, water contests, games and music to fill the afternoon. In the evening there will be a big bonfire around which the crowd will roast marshmallows.

Each emmber is cordially invited. Every young people's society of the organization will take part. A silver loving cup will be awarded to the society receiving the highest number of points in the contests. Most of the churches already have their representatives in training.

The track events include 220-yard dash for boys and the field, shotput, high and broad jump, as well as many other events for both boys and girls. There will be a canoe race and other water events, and the local troop of Boy Scouts will build a pontoon bridge across the river.

Aside from the speaking there will be a string orchestra and a male quartet on the grounds to assist in the program. Supper will be held on the grounds.

Men's Class in Charge.

A full attendance is requested at the usual Sunday morning session of the Men's Bible class of the First Baptist church inasmuch as the class is to have charge of the church services after Sunday school and is to sit on the pulpit platform in a body.

The devotional committee has made full arrangements and every member is urged to be present prepared to stay to both sessions.

Baptist.

First Church.

9:30—Our Sunday school is most instructive and interesting. Our men's work and interest with the young people is of note. The children are given especial care.

10:45—The morning worship. This service is in charge of the Men's Bible class and a special program has been arranged by the devotional committee of the class.

6:45—The great meeting of the young people under the lead of the B. Y. P. U. This meeting will be in charge of the missionary committee.

7:45.—The evening service, and which will also be under the direction of the Men's class. A particularly appropriate program has been prepared for this service and no one can afford to miss it. Let us have the church full and thereby show our appreciation to the men.

Wednesday, August 23rd. 7:45—People's prayer hour will be held as usual and led by one of the deacons.

Thursday evening, August 24th. 7:45—The regular monthly business meeting of the Men's Bible class will be held at the church parlors. Several matters of importance are to come up, also the entertainment committee have arranged a good program, so let all the men come out.

Every Friday evening at 7:30 o'clock the Boy Scouts will meet at the church. Clifford Hutchinson, scout master, and Howard Boegli, assistant scout master. All boys who are eligible are earnestly requested to join the band.

Our pastor's address during his vacation is Yorkville, Gull Lake, Michigan, and anyone who can find time to write he will be glad to hear from.

SEEKING BLOOD FROM THOSE WHO ARE IMMUNE

Raising Fund in New Effort to Combat Infantile Paralysis.

New York, Aug. 19.—The organization of citizens to raise a fund of $2,000 to defray the expenses of obtaining blood from persons in this city who have recovered from attacks of infantile paralysis was announced today. From this blood a serum is extracted which is believed by Dr. Abraham Eingher, of Willard Parker hospital, to be efficacious in the treatment of the disease if administered in its early stages.

Efforts to obtain this blood from persons believed to be immune to the disease have been made recently, but this is the first comprehensive plan that has been formulated for that purpose. The movement has the indorsement of the department of health.

The committee of citizens has obtained the names of about seven hundred persons in this city who have had poliomyelitis and with the health department's approval will send letters to them asking them to contribute to the battle against the epidemic.

BROUGHT UNDER CONTROL

Blaze at Franklin Quelled Only After Fight of Many Hours.

Franklin, Ind., Aug. 4.—Fire which for a time threatened destruction of the business district, was brought under control late last night after five business firms suffered losses estimated to aggregate $35,000. Five hundred persons, attending a motion picture show in a theatre near the origin of the fire were gotten out of the building before they were aware of their danger, and without any one being injured. The first started in the building occupied by the Morris five and ten cent store, and it is believed to have been due to defective electric wiring.

The water pressure of the water works company here became so low shortly after the fire started that only one stream of water could be thrown a distance of thirty feet.

Rules for Avoiding Infantile Paralysis

Chicago, Aug. 19.—Doctor Koehler, of the health department, gave out the following precautions to be observed by parents:

Keep your house or apartment absolutely clean.

Go over all woodwork daily with a damp cloth.

Sweep floors only after they have been sprinkled with sawdust, old tea leaves or bits of newspaper which have been thoroughly dampened. Never allow dry sweeping.

Screen your windows against flies.

Do not allow refuse of any kind to remain in your rooms.

Kill all forms of vermin, such as bedbugs, roaches and body lice.

Pay special attention to bodily cleanliness. Take a bath every day and see that all clothing which comes into contact with the skin is clean.

Keep your children by themselves as much as possible. Do not allow them to visit stuffy moving picture shows or other places where there may be a large gathering of children.

Children should not be kept in the house; they should be out of doors as much as possible, but not in active contact with other children of the neighborhood.

Do not take your children with you when you go shopping.

Do not allow your children to be kissed.

It is perfectly safe to let your children go to the parks and playgrounds if only two or three of them play together.

Remember that children need fresh air in the summer time, and outdoor life is one of the best ways to avoid disease.

Keep the milk clean, covered and cold.

Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Comincavish went to Lake Wawasee on Saturday, for a week's outing at the cottage of Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Pfeiffer.

Miss Catherine Stewart, of Brackenridge street, left on Saturday afternoon for Indianapolis and Terre Haute, to visit friends for two weeks.

Dr. and Mrs. John C. Downs have returned to Danbury, Conn., after making a visit of several weeks in this city, including an outing at Leland, Mich.

Mrs. Roy Gwynne, of Tulsa, Okla., is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Wagner, of Euclid avenue. Mrs. Gwynne was formerly Miss Mable Wagner.

Mr. and Mrs. M. W. Fitch are entertaining Mrs. Fitch's brother, William Edward Adams, of Seattle, Wash., who is a lecturer and entertainer of prominence.

Mrs. Howard Augsperger gave a small but very delightful afternoon party on Friday to compliment the guest of Mrs. Arnold Tresselt, Miss Clarissa Seemeyer, of Detroit.

Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Baker and daughter, Cordelia, and Mr. and Mrs. M. G. Brown and family, go to Coldwater, Mich., on Sunday for a two weeks' visit with relatives.

Mrs. O. L. Blakely and daughters, who have been visiting relatives here, Mr. and Mrs. George Evans, of West Berry street, have returned to their home in Franklin, Pa.

Mrs. Harriet Larimore, of West Jefferson street, has returned from a two months' stay at Macatawa Park, Mich., and Mrs. Julia Larimore and Miss Flora Miller have gone to the resort.

Mrs. Mary Luley and daughters, Clotilda and Marie, of Warren, Ohio, have returned home by automobile, after visiting Mrs. Magdalena Luley and family, of South Hanna street.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Oetting, of West Main street, have returned from Meriden, Iowa, where they spent the past month at the home of Rev. and Mrs. Louis Walker. Mrs. Walker will be better remembered as Miss Emma Oetting.

Miss Louise Emmerson, of Northampton, Mass., is in the city visiting with her brother, Harry Emmerson, of Hurd street. Miss Emmerson formerly lived in Fort Wayne and is well known here. She will remain for about three weeks.

A number of young people who enjoyed a picnic supper and a marshmallow bake at Devil's Hollow, on Friday evening, was composed of Misses Phyllis Potter, Mildred Schultz, Bessie Rowe, Alice Wilding and Messrs. Walter Merrill, Ted Jackson, Fred Wagner and Ray Woebbeking.

Mr. and Mrs. Dayton Abbott, of Brackenridge street, are entertaining Mr. Abbott's sister, Mrs. T. B. Clevenger, of North Manchester, and Miss Dailey, of Bluffton. Mrs. Abbott invited a few youny women to bring their sewing and meet the visitors informally this afternoon.

Frederick Romy, of Canton, Ohio, is visiting his brother, R. L. Romy, of 439 East Wayne street, and on Friday celebrated his seventy-first birthday anniversary. A gathering of relatives joined with the visitor in having a pleasant day. Mr. Romy has gone to Niles, Mich., for a week-end visit with a sister who lives there.

A musical evening and other social pleasures were enjoyed by a company of friends who surprised Louis Branning on Thursday evening in honor of his natal anniversary. Miss Florence Roy and Messrs. Miller and Ott furnished music and Messrs. Branning, Lohre, Wutzler and Max and Emil Miller rendered German selections. There were present at this good time the host's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Branning, sr., and Mr. and Mrs. Emil Miller, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Wutzler, Mr. and Mrs. Max Miller, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Foltz. Misses Margaret Miller, Gertrude and Luella Branning, Josephine and Marcella Foltz, Charlotta Miller, Lucile Branning, Angeline and Florence Roy, and Helene Cassidy, of Michigan City; Messrs. Adolph Lohre, Walter and Harry Branning, Eric Miller, Louis, Rudolph, Fred and Lester Branning, Irvin Miller and Mr. Ott.

JENKINS-UNDERHILL.

A small home wedding of the utmost simplicity took place at 11 o'clock Saturday morning in the marriage of Miss Dorothy Underhill, daughter of Mrs. Lillian Underhill, to Charles W. Jenkins, at the residence of the bride's aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Allen J. Vesey, in Maple avenue. Only relatives and a few personal friends of the bride and groom were present at the wedding. Rev. Edward W. Averill, of Trinity Episcopal church, of which the bride is a communicant, officiated at the wedding service. Miss Constance Underhill played the bridal music from "Lohengrin" as the bride and groom entered the living room and Miss Margaret Underhill preceeded her sister. Mrs. Underhill gave her daughter in marriage. The bride wore a becoming gown of white georgette crepe hung over white satin, made with short skirt and with a distinctive feature of a fitchu edge with handsome lace about the neck. The bride wore a veil that fell to the bottom of her skirt and was gathered to a cap of lace, the latter being a fine old piece belonging to the bride's mother. The bridal bouquet was a nosegay of white asters, pink rosebuds and forget-me-nots in a lace paper holder. The house was simply decorated with garden flowers of pink and white coloring. As soon as the bride and groom had received congratulations the wedding breakfast was served. A number of personal friends of the bride's younger sister assisted in serving, as a bit of pretty attention they wished to show the bride. These young girls were Misses Dorothy Wilding, Jeannette Boshler, Winifred Bicknell, Fannie and Rose Goldberger. The bride and groom will be at home after the first of October at 454 Kinnaird avenue, where they are going to housekeeping. The bride will wear a blue silk suit with black velevt brimmed hat for the few days she and the groom are to be out of town. The bride has been a teacher of art in the Fort Wayne high school and she has many friends who well appreciate her many fine qualities of young womanhood. Mr. Jenkins' former home was in Newcastle, Pa., but his position as civil engineer of the maintenance of way department of the Pennsylvania has given him a location in this city for a year or two. Guests from away included Mrs. Cecil Hall, of Berkeley, Cal., and Mrs. Bertha Jenkins and Miss Elizabeth Jenkins, of Mahoningtown, Ohio.

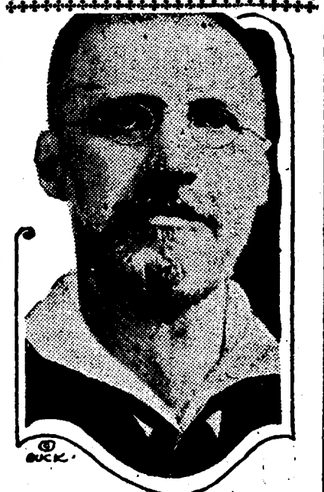
Is Sport Shirt to Join the Monocle?



SIR C. A. SPRING RICE

Is the sport shirt to join the monocle as a fad with the English?

Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, British ambassador to the United States, wears a sport shirt. And Lady Spring-Rice doesn't mind. In fact, she approves, it is said.

Also, Washington society is taking up the sport shirt. White shoes, white trousers and white sox are worn with them.

MAN WHO NEGLECTED CHILD GOES TO JAIL

Charge Against Andrew Cooper for Taking Auto Dismissed—Other Cases.

George Wehrmeister, carpenter, was fined $10 and costs and sentenced to 100 days of road work because he has failed to support his small child. He allowed his wife to be turned from her home because he would not pay rent, testimony showed.

Cooper Case Dismissed.

Andrew Cooper, 20, the young man who came to Fort Wayne for a visit, after being married in Chicago, will not be tried for taking a joy ride in an automobile belonging to Mrs. Mary Arter, 522 Superior street. Mrs. Arter refuses to prosecute the case since Cooper settled all damages by paying $15. Mrs. Arter asked that the case be dismissed.

Fined for Loitering.

Hazel Beard, 16, and Dorothy Lambert, 17, two girls who were slightly injured two weeks ago when the motorcycle on which they were riding with a young man was wrecked, were in police court charged with loitering. They were standing in front of a saloon on Spy Run avenue late Friday night drinking beer with Clarence Delagrange, 23, and Louis Luley, 19, when arrested. The girls were bound over to the juvenile court. They had been warned several times to stay off the streets at night, Matron Winch testified. The two young men were fined $10 and costs each. They will serve out their entire sentence in jail they say.

Other Police Court Cases.

Cases against Francis Swinney and Caroline Swinney, charged with failure to cut weeds on their properties, in the west end, will be brought up Tuesday morning. The prosecutor said he wanted to be sure that the land belonged to the Swinneys, as there seems to be dispute as to the property ownership.

Surety of the peace cases against Tony Roebuck and Charles Roebuck were dismissed. The surety cases had been filed after the trial Friday, when the young men were fined for assaulting A. L. Naminski, in a saloon brawl. Naminski said he feared they would attack him again. The young men say they have no such intentions.

John Hagan, 71, will be tried on a public intoxication charge Tuesday morning. He was found "down and out" on the sidewalk of Columbia street Friday afternoon.

"I've been drinking a long time and that is the first time it ever got me down, judge," the aged man told Kerr. His head was bandaged as a result of his striking his forehead on the sidewalk.

Fred Walters will be tried Tuesday on a drunk charge. John Shelby, colored, convicted on a drunk charge, was released.

Resinol Soon Healed It Entirely

Mar. 28: "I had a severe case of eczema on my head. My scalp itched and burned and was full of scabs, and when I scratched that would of course pull off the scabs and left my head very sore. The irritation was something awful. I could not keep my hands out of my head. My hair became very dry and harsh and did not feel like there was any life in it. The first application of Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap soothed the scalp wonderfully, and after using one jar of Resinol Ointment and three cakes of Resinol Soap my head is entirely cured—I can rest peacefully and there is no more itching. My temples were almost clean of hair and now they are covered thickly. I must say Resinol is simply wonderful for almost any kind of skin trouble. It does all you say and more." AT THE MAJESTIC

"Truxton King" at the Majestic Again Tonight.

Truxton King, the gallant hero, and Lorraine Tullis, the engaging heroine of George Barr McCutcheon's latest novel about the Graustark country, are to be visualized upon the stage. Miss Grace Hayward, an actress and writer, had dramatized the story of "Truxton King" and the play is at the Majestic in this city tonight.

Mr. McCutcheon made of the adventures of Truxton King an entertaining book and the dramatist is said to have made an equally good stage story of them. Its romance is said to have been prettily delineated and ample opportunity given to convey the thrills that are welcomed by most of our theater-goers. The United Play company, which is directing the tour, announces a high-class company.

AT THE PALACE

GANGWAY FOR VAUDEVILLE.

Fort Wayne's Favorite Pastime Ready for Action.

Vaudeville, the mulligan stew of the amusement world, in which if you don't like one thing you are sure to find something you do like, is back in our midst for with the coming week the New Palace will be thrown open to an eager public before whose eyes will be unfolded one of the snappiest bills the New Palace's own booking agents could bring together.

Imhoff, Conn and Corene of Sergt. Louder fame will feature this premier bill of the season in their brand new sketch, "The Pest House," an absurdity that runs on high speed every minute. Harry von Fosson, the prince of monologuists, will be back with a list of new songs, parodies and comical sayings. This is Mr. Fosson's final appearance in vaudeville as he leaves Wednesday night for New York city to join the "Watch Your Step" company. Anna Vivian's troupe of sharpshooters will demonstrate their uncanny skill with the target rifle and pistol in a novel shooting act that will open the bill. As pretty a pair of girls as lovelorn hearts ever sighed over, the Misses Mellen, are on this program in their dainty ensemble of singing specialties. Mareno, Navarro and Mareno will close the bill with an amazing equilibristic turn, while Mack and Irwin will be sandwiched in just where their amusing gags are calculated to raise the most joy.

This bill will run four days, closing Wednesday evening to give way to the bill headed by James H. Cullen, the man from the west, which will open Thursday afternoon. The New Palace has arranged a scale of popular prices for the 1916-1917 season that is even lower than last year's bargains.

IN AUTO MISHAP.

E. I. Lewis, staff correspondent of the Indianapolis News, and his wife, in an auto, left the Everett Lake road, six miles out of the city, Friday night, and hung over a culvert, but were unhurt. Bad roads, Mr. Lewis said, caused the accident. The machine shot into the grass by the side of the road and thence to the culvert, after striking a bad portion of the road. Mrs. Lewis was at the wheel and was learning to drive.

Winter Clothes Will Be Gay

(By Betty Brown.)

Autumn will bring no relief to color blind eyes! From flambouyant sports clothes we will skip to flambouyant-er fall coats.

Here's a modest model in mustard color broadcloth—gay as a primrose, and snug as a blanket. The two-toned gray buttons, and the gold brown velvet and fur collar add brightness.

It's a forerunner, they told me at the Chicago Garment Manufacturers' Fashion show, of the gay plumage even the least of us will be wearing in the winter. The shawl collar and deep cuffs indicate we will be comfortable as well as gay. The front belt and pouch-like pockets decorate many new overcoats.

SENTINEL REPORTER VISITS LOCAL MOVIE, BUT HE LEAVES IN DISGUST

Conversation of Two Women Proves Too Much for Him and Little Claymore's Question Were Too Numerous — It Happens Every Day.

I sailed along before the first cool breath of August. The uncertain current of humanity carried me to the leeward to the mouth of a movie-house harbor. I reefed sail to take my bearings.

Above were the gleaming lights and vaulted, tinseled arches. Fairy arms of bronze figures stretched out to me. I forgot the port to which I was bound when I pulled on my shoes after supper. I followed the measured tread of the funeral-like procession which filed before the glass-covered billboard. I had seen a rogues' gallery once.

But I liked the angle at which the hero leveled his revolver and the heroine wore her snowshoes well. Also the girl in the ticket office counted her change and tended to her own business.

Then again the blazing title of "The Whiskered Whirlwind," or "Where It Listeth." In three sections. It seemed especially timely. So timely I could imagine the plot. There would be fond hopes, greedy desires, leaving a good home, a wild rampage through the golden west, an attempt to run a big bluff on a strong voice, the voice would break, the tide turn, humanity would be aroused, then the November snowstorm, blasted hopes and retirement to the quiet fireside. It would no doubt be a huge pageant built along a campaign failure.

I bought my ticket after the girl had ordered me to step aside twice in order that she might see that I was not working a smuggling game. The paving stones resounded and I marched into the inky blackness where exit lights and electric fans made me think of the hissing serpents and flickering flames that Milton tells about.

I stood and blinked my eyes till the man at my left elbow said, "Tickets, please" three times. I poked the pasteboard out into the darkness and experienced a sensation much like the first jerk of a six-pound bass when I was relieved of my voucher. Towards the dancing screen I went, for it was the only ray of light. I barked my shins on chairs and gained six yards through a wristwatch brigade before I was downed. With two steps to the right I dropped into a seat exhausted.

Soon the mist had risen from my eyes and I discovered that the second attempt of Algorell to make love to Queenoria was on. Interest collected.

Couldn't See a Thing.

"This way, this way, oh, I can't see a thing," came a screechy voice. I thought everybody knew that people could not see when they tumbled down the aisle of a picture showhouse. I looked up. A big woman with a wabbly hat was drawing an anchor in the form of a small boy. She turned into the aisle directly behind me and shook two rows of seats. As a poor third came a tall, flaxen-haired maid with no hat.

"Be careful, Claymore," both women called to the child. He clambered over the seats. He bumped his toe and yelped. I missed one attempt of Algorell's to kiss Queenoria.

"I hope this one ends nice," exclaimed the young one. I had just observed that the hero lost one of his gloves.

Then came the lurid red flash which denoted that there would be a shift in the canvas scenery.

"When does the circus come to town, ma" inquired Claymore.

"I don't know: look at the pretty woman," mamma urged.

"Well, can I go to the circus when it does come?"

"Oh, I thought it was going to be Mary Pickford or Theda Bara and here it is Pauline Fredrick," said the miss, who was a little north by northeast at my rear.

"Maybe she will not be in the next part," came from the older one.

"She always stays through a whole show when she starts," was the discouraging reply.

"Look what big hands the woman's got," piped Claymore.

Scene Shifts.

Now the scene shifted to the far north. Snowflakes bigger than hen eggs pelted down on the hero, who staggered ere he had gone ten steps from his cabin door. He had been "mixing them," I guess.

"Isn't it great, Mrs. Gratz?" from miss.

"It is swell, Miss Schnell," from the other side of Claymore.

"He is so brave, but I am afraid he can never keep going."

"He wants revenge."

"Is that Charlie Chaplin?" interrupted the lad.

"You keep still and watch the pictures. Look now at the dogs."

"Are they like will be in the circus?"

"I don't know, but be still. Say, Nellie, this must be the picture Hazel told me about only the dogs died and there were seals and everything in that. This looks like the fellow she said, though."

"Maybe."

"We will wait and see if there is a big bear in the next one and one man shoots himself. I bet it will be the same one."

"Oh, see the man look cross-eyed," clamored Claymore.

"Be still; he's hurt," explained the mother.

"Where's he hurt?"

"Sh—keep still."

"Isn't that true to life?" exclaimed the young one as the fur-clad Walahough, the brave guide, looked over the icy peaks apparently for a passing sail.

"It is so real."

"Will that funny thing be in the circus, mamma?"

Leap of 2,000 Miles.

A leap of two thousand miles followed the next flicker on the screen. The villain had been pushed over a three-hundred-foot ice cliff. The division title was "Look Before You Leap."

In northern Virginia was the new continuation of love and hate. White-pillared mansions, feudal in their magnificence, rose in the distance. There were cotton fields. It was the picture of prosperity in the late years since war times have lost their memory. The show of pomp was there. The occasion demanded it. The "mister" entertained.

"Look at that hat," excitedly said the young one, as an attractive daughter of the southland was handed from a limousine.

"Say, that dress looks like Clara's," put in the other. "Only, of course, it cost more. And did you see the new one Grace has? It is made of that new stuff. I think she is a fright in most anything."

"Jest look at the jitneys," screeched Claymore as the row of cars rolled before the great door.

"Oh, my, do keep still; you will drive me crazy," begged mamma.

"Well, is that man who helps everybody out the mayor or something?" insisted the son.

"I don't know, but if you don't keep still you will not go to aunty's tomorrow."

"I don't want to go to aunty's; I want to know if I can go to the circus. Gee, look at the fat one," and Claymore pointed in the direction of the screen.

"I hate to bring Edwin with me; he talks so much."

"Oh, look at that," and there was a gasp for breath at the northeast. "He will kill himself. It must be a mistake."

"I bet it is a dummy," for Claymore's mother was skeptical.

"I don't know. I have heard of men falling like that."

"I wonder did he cork himself like uncle always says."

Claymore, you little rascal," with some fierceness. "Look at her trying to save him from disgrace. She is certainly loyal."

"It is queer that two men should love a woman so," philosophized the young one.

The Pretty Lady Cries.

"Mamma, the man is making the lady cry," claimed Claymore. "I looked around. I could not help what was written on my face. I missed the few words written on the screen at that time. There was no use anyway. I fumbled for my hat.

"This is not the show I had heard about," the large one admitted. "The villain does not die in that one."

"What does the villain die for?" asked the son.

"Well, Mrs. Gratz, you can't help it. Look at the steamboat, Claymore."

"Which one?"

Maybe I was hasty in flight. I wanted air. The last heard was—

"He is disturbing the whole theater in the midst of the show."

EDITOR'S NOTE—How many persons of the thousands of consumers in Fort Wayne pause to consider how the milk or butter used on their tables daily is produced? How many housewives look deeper than the cream line—and the price in the bottle of milk delivered to their doors to determine the quality of the contents? How many realize sufficiently that healthfulness in the household in a great measure depends upon the purity of the milk supply?

These and many other phases of the milk situation in Fort Wayne are dwelt upon in the following interesting article written for The Sentinel by Stuart T. Todd, expert milk sanitarian, who has just completed for The Sentinel a ten days' sanitary survey of the dairies and milk plants supplying Fort Wayne consumers. His observations are based upon actualities and comparisons upon intimate knowledge of existing conditions in sixteen states and more than 100 cities which he has investigated with the support, co-operation and endorsement of numerous health departments, well known milk authorities and leading newspapers in every city.

BY STUART T. TODD.

In selecting the family's milk supply every housewife should religiously insist upon three requisites from her dealer:

First—Absence of visible sediment in the bottom of the bottle. The presence of sediment of any description in the bottom of a bottle of milk denotes carelessness and unclean methods in its production or handling, or both. If a dairyman hasn't respect enough for his customers to remove the foreign substance from the milk he delivers, his product is unsafe and he is unworthy of your patronage.

Sanitary Equipment Needed.

Second—Modern facilities and sanitary equipment. While it is true that a good quality of milk can sometimes be produced amid unclean and insanitary surroundings, the customer is taking greater chances with the health of the family than the price she pays for the milk justifies. If she desires a cheap milk and refuses to pay a reasonable price for an article that she knows to be safe, then she may expect to be given a quality of milk that conforms exactly to the price she pays. The cream line cannot under any circumstances be taken as a criterion of the quality. The cream line may be deepest on an article of milk that is polluted with disease-breeding bacteria.

Third—Delivery of all milk and cream in sterilized bottles. Bulk milk or "dipped" milk is a menace to health and should be prohibited—and fortunately is prohibited from sale in nine-tenths of the cities of the United States ranging in population from 10,000 upwards—by stringent laws requiring the bottling of all milk for human consumption on the producing premises or in a sanitary milk plant built and maintained in conformity to established rules of sanitation.

Vital to Safe Milk.

All three of these rules are absolutely vital to safety in a city's milk supply. The absence of any one of the three cheapens the milk and puts the burden of responsibility upon the customer instead of upon the dairyman where it rightfully belongs. Because any housewife who will condone sediment, who will not pay enough attention to her milk supply—the food very often which she feeds her baby—to determine the character of the surroundings under which her milk is produced and handled, is jeopardizing not only her health but that of every one of her loved ones.

The housewife is the final arbiter of the character of the milk she serves on the table—or to her infant. For it is a fact that a city's milk supply is exactly what that city makes it through the demand made upon the dairymen by the consumers. Milk will not be made any better than the public demands or that it pays for.

One of Cheapest Foods.

Milk is one of the cheapest foods on the market. It is also one of the most easily digested. It is very nourishing and the ways in which it can be used are innumerable. One quart of good milk costing eight or ten cents equals in food value:

Two pounds of salt codfish; three pounds of fresh codfish; two pounds of chicken; four pounds of beets; five pounds of turnips; 1-3 pound of wheat flour; 1-6 pound of butter; 1-3 pound of cheese; 3-4 pound of lean round beef; eight eggs; two pounds of potatoes; six pounds of spinach, seven pounds of lettuce or four pounds of cabbage. To these may be added, one pint of oysters, 4-5 pounds of loin of pork and 3-5 pound of ham.

The price of these foods will range between 20 and 24 cents—averaging approximately 22 cents. For almost the same money more than two quarts of milk at 10 cents could be purchased and three quarts of milk at 8 cents, in other words the consumer gets nearly three times the food value in milk than is obtained in the average food on the market.

Yet milk is practically the only article of food which has not risen in price in the last two years—in fact, Fort Wayne is obtaining a milk supply at approximately the same figure it paid for it five or even ten years ago. And this also in direct face of the fact that foodstuffs for cattle have almost and in some instances more than doubled in price; the value of dairy cows has increased from one-third to one-half more and the sanitary requirements of health authorities has added an additional burden of expense to the dairyman.

Must Get Fair Price.

A dairyman cannot afford to equip his plant or farm with even reasonably sanitary appliances when he is retailing his product for seven or eight cents a quart. When it is realized that it costs at a minimum figure six cents a quart to deliver milk in Fort Wayne even under existing conditions—which unfortunately are far from good in the main—it may readily be seen that the profit of one or two cents a quart is not any more than sufficient for the dairyman to eke out a mere existence without putting any of it into equipment to safeguard his product.

Fort Wayne's milk supply is not on a par with the progressive spirit of the city exhibited in almost every other way. It is not entirely the fault of the dairymen. The consumer bears nearly an equal responsibility, for if insistence were made on a better supply, the dairymen would furnish it. Unfortunately lack of intelligent inspection in the past has permitted the dairy industry here to deteriorate rather than keep step with the march of the city's progress.

A remedy for existing conditions is in sight. Within the past few weeks the city health department has appointed Dr. Paul C. Kucher dairy and food inspector. As yet he has had insufficient time to overcome the degeneration permitted in the past, but is fast regenerating the industry.

One of the great obstacles which must be overcome here is lack of proper facilities of handling the product by the individual dealers or producers. In the majority of instances only the crudest equipment is maintained and this oftentimes is neglected until the milk is contaminated every time it passes over or through what little equipment is maintained. I have found dairies running in direct violation of the city ordinances, not in one, but in several instances—one in particular handling his milk in a house attached to a horse stable and with doors opening from the one into the other. Under the city ordinance this is positively prohibited, yet more than 200 gallons of milk daily is delivered to homes in this city after being bottled amid these insanitary surroundings.

There are too many small, irresponsible dealers in the business for the general welfare of the industry here. Fort Wayne boasts as many individual dealers as does the average city three times its size. In the past anyone, with or without equipment of the most insignificant sort, could enter the milk business as a final resort to a bread and butter existence. The result has been that there are innumerable small dealers selling from 15 to 30 gallons of milk, who in the very nature of the extent of their business, cannot afford to equip their places with sanitary arrangements for handling the milk.

Regulation or Pasteurization.

There are just two avenues toward a better milk supply in Fort Wayne—either more stringent regulations and a greater insistence upon equipment and surroundings, which, if enforced, will compel the smaller dealer to equip his place as well as the larger one, or compulsory pasteurization of all milk delivered in Fort Wayne. Unless the city can afford to hire a sufficient inspection corps to make at least monthly inspections of all dairies and dealers and see that the product is up to a high standard in its raw state, compulsory pasteurization is the only outlet.

Until any city's inspection department is permitted a free hand in the exercise of his duty to require the standard of milk, his efforts will be nil and the city's milk will continue to be bad. If Dr. Kucher is permitted to proceed as his better judgment dictates, he will clean up the milk supply of Fort Wayne and place it on a par at least with any city in Indiana. He has the confidence of the dairymen and by professional and technical training is well fitted for the position he occupies.

That Fort Wayne's mortality record is low; that there are few cases of typhoid during the summer months; that more babies do not die during the hot weather is apparently not due to the general milk supply of the city, but more probably to the incessant watchfulness and deep concern of Dr. J. H. Gilpin, secretary of the city health board, and his assistants. That they are doing their work well is evidenced by the lean mortality record. With a general house cleaning in the milk industry even this record would undoubtedly be reduced and Fort Wayne would rise to a higher plane in the opinion of those contemplating making this city their homes. For the milk supply is one of the first features investigated by any family when changing locations. By it, to a very great extent, a city is known to the outside world. So its importance cannot be over estimated.

Found Some Good Dairies.

In the ten days I have been in Fort Wayne I have visited practically every dairyman supplying milk to Fort Wayne. Some of these—a comparative few, unfortunately—I have selected for recommendation to the milk consumers of the city. In every instance I have made a personal inspection of the premises, investigated the methods used and the product as it is delivered to the customer. In practically all instances Dr. Kucher has accompanied me. I can unreservedly recommend every dairyman appearing on the "Quality Selected Sanitary Dairy Page" as being representative of the highest class market milk producer, whose product I believe to be safe for general uses. For infant feeding no milk should be used, not even certified, without a physician's prescription. Promiscuous feeding of babies on milk that is good enough for family use is dangerous in the extreme.

I have been compelled to reject many more dairymen for representation on the dairy pages than I could accept, for various reasons—either their places were insanitary, their methods improper, their product contained visible sediment or otherwise was not worthy of recommendation, they were delivering milk below a normal price, thereby not giving themselves sufficient profit to install the necessary equipment to produce a good article of milk, or for other similar reasons I did not wish to recommend the product. I believe it is the duty of every housewife to investigate for herself the source of her milk supply. If they would do it in Fort Wayne there either would be a revolutionary upheaval in the milk industry or many dealers would be compelled to quit the business through lack of trade.

Butter and ice cream are two commodities that daily dress almost every table in the city. These, like milk, carry bacteria in large quantities unless manufactured under proper conditions. Fortunately Fort Wayne possesses butter and ice cream factories the equal of any anywhere. Their methods, equipment and surroundings invariably are in strict accordance with sanitary requirements and their products of a high character.

Precaution Necessary.

This is a season of the year when every housewife should take every precaution she knows to safeguard her milk supply. Milk carries more germs than any other article of food. It is more susceptible to contamination than any. Consult with your health department often regarding your milk. Ask your physician always how to feed the baby and never use milk that might be left in the baby's bottle from one feeding to be mixed with fresh milk for the subsequent meal. Never replace the cap removed from a bottle of milk. Instead invert a clean drinking glass over the top of the bottle and always keep it cold. It is far better to place the bottle of milk with the ice than in the bottom of the refrigerator.

And above all get the best supply obtainable at the price you can afford to pay. It is better to pay a little more for your milk and cut your meat bill or other household expense proportionately to get the better grade. Cheap milk is poor economy, but it helps support the undertakers and medical fraternity.

BIG SUMMER TRAFFIC ON NICKEL PLATE

August Promises to Smash All Previous Records in Freight.

If the present movement of freight over the Nickel Plate continues until September 1, August, 1916, will have established a new record, for the business was never better in that month than it has been so far this year. This has been the cause of hiring several new men, instead of laying off or "setting back" those already in the service. Some of the engineers who were promoted last winter, in accordance with the custom during the season of heavy traffic and reduced train tonnage, and put back to firing because of the falling off of traffic, have been recalled to the throttle side of the cab and new firemen have been hired. Fireman E. M. Doty was "marked up" to the extra engineer list yesterday and J. Dunlap, A. W. Perry, D. C. Weiss and R. Broo were employed as new firemen.

WRECK DELAYS TRAINS.

The westbound Manhattan Limited, on the Pennsylvania, was over two hours late when it reached the city today. The delay was caused by a journal under a boxcar east of Orrville burning off and blocking the tracks. The three Cleveland sleepers which become a part of the limited at Orrville were sent on through on the limited's time, reaching Chicago on the "dot." The other portion of the train came two hours later.

MANY GOING TO DETROIT.

Reduced rate tickets to Detroit, on account of the annual convention of the American Veterinary Medical association, were placed on sale by the Wabash this morning and will continue on sale until and including Monday, the 21st. There is a fairly good business, many people not interested in the veterinary association taking advantage of the rate to get to the lake and the resorts near Detroit. The return limit has been fixed for August 20.

TO ATTEND MUNICIPAL CONVENTION.

A. A. Serva, sales manager of the General Electric works, will leave tomorrow for Baltimore, Md., where he will attend the annual convention of the International Association of Municipal Electricians, which will be held two or three days next week.

L. E. & W. OFFICIALS IN CITY.

George Dyer, general superintendent of the Lake Erie & Western road, and A. W. O'Brien, superintendent of the Fort Wayne, Cincinnati & Louisville division, paid this city a visit yesterday afternoon on their tour of inspection They were on a special car which was a part of the regular train going south at 2:30.

WILL RETURN TO OLD HOME.

G. W. Babcock, who came here two or three months ago and took employment in the punch press department of the General Electric works, under Foreman Schwartzkopf, resigned this morning. He has decided to return to Toledo, his former home, where a good position awaits him.

OFF ON AUTO TRIP.

Chief Clerk D. E. Guy, of the Wabash division storeroom, and Mrs. Guy and daughter, Clara May Guy, were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Zeigler on an automobile trip to Clear Lake. They left for that resort this afternoon and will return Sunday evening.

TRANSFERRED TO DAY FORCE.

T. W. Bauer, a machinist at the Pennsylvania shop, who has been working with the night gang, has been transferred to the day force. He will now have charge of the automatic machine work.

CALLED TO SISTER'S BEDSIDE.

Mrs. Stephen, wife of Engine Inspector John M. Stephen, of the Pennsylvania shops, received a message last night informing her that her sister was dangerously ill at Harrisburg. Mrs. Stephen left for Harrisburg today.

PENNSY SHOP OUTPUT.

Eleven engines were repaired and made ready for service during the past week at the Pennsylvania erecting shop. The engines which were turned out were Nos. 7288, 9988, 9042, 7082, 7091, 9978, 9204, 7773, 7414, 9026 and G. R. & I. engine No. 96.

WILL BE A SCHOOL TEACHER

Eunice Miner, for some time employed in the small motor department of the General Electric works, has resigned. She has gone to take a short course in a training school and will then engage in teaching school at Argos.

INDUSTRIAL NOTES.

A. E. Mills, engineer on the G. R. & I., is sick and off duty.

Pennsylvania Engineer N. E. Nestel is spending a few days at Tri-Lake.

I. Sorg, a blacksmith at the Pennsylvania shops, is off duty because of sickness.

J. C. Vonderan, a shop hand in the Pennsylvania paint shops, is sick and off duty.

J. H. Smith, yard engineer on the Pennsylvania, is off duty because of sickness.

F. Lentz, a toolmaker in the Pennsylvania blacksmith shop, is sick and off duty.

G. N. Van Osdale, a passenger engineer on the Pennsylvania, is off duty because of sickness.

J. Kalliker, a blacksmith at the Pennsylvania shops, is unable to be at work because of sickness.

F. E. Crawford, freight engineer on the Pennsylvania road, is unable to report for work on account of sickness.

Carl Walker is a new employe in the small motor department of the General Electric works.

W. E. Wartenbee, blacksmith at the Pennsylvania shops, is going to Warsaw, Ind., to spend a few days.

Henry Epple will spend next week at Lake James. He is employed at the General Electric works.

W. Recht, a tender repairman at the Pennsylvania boiler shop, is off duty on account of sickness.

C. R. Kaufman machinist helper at the Pennsylvania erecting shop, is off duty because of sickness.

Engineer J. A. Klug, of the Pennsylvania, is taking a week's vacation which he will spend at Snow Lake.

C. B. Watterson, a blacksmith at the Pennsylvania shops, is off duty suffering from a slight burn on his leg.

J. J. Guiff, of the paint shop of the Pennsylvania, is off duty attending to some personal business.

W. J. Koch, of the Pennsylvania paint shop, is off duty in order to attend to some personal business.

F. C. Schultz, a blacksmith helper at the Pennsylvania shops, is off duty because of an injury to his foot.

M. B. Didion and S. W. Knapp, machinist helpers at the Pensylvania erecting shop, are on the sick list.

Paul Richter and J. K. Smith, machinists at the General Electric works, are going to Blue lake to spend a week.

M. Wefel, a boilermaker at the Pennsylvania shops, will spend the next week with his family at Lake James.

J. J. Jahn, blacksmith heiper at the Pennsylvania blacksmith shop, is unable to be at work because of sickness.

W. L. Wilt, who had been east on business for the Pennsylvania motive power department, arrived home this morning.

Miss Mary Lulu Hausbach, daughter of Wabash Machinist Michael Hausbach, has gone to Detroit to spend a week with friends.

E. H. Rehling, a machine operator in the Pennsylvania blacksmith shop, is off duty because of the sickness of his father.

C. Decker and R. J. Sorg, tender repairmen at the Pennsylvania boiler shop, are going to Atwood, Ind., to spend a few days.

After an illness of a week, Dudley Johnson, a transformer winder, resumed work at the General Electric works this morning.

Miss Mary Slater, of the small motor department of the General Electric works, will go to Lake James tonight to stay a week.

Kenneth Timmons, messenger in the engineering department of the General Electric works, is off duty on account of sickness.

George Jenson, a stenographer in Master Mechanic E. E. Griest's office of the Pennsylvania, will spend the coming week at Rome City.

L. D. Nordstum, of the engineering department of the General Electric works, will complete his vacation today and be "on the job" again next week.

C. Hess, a machine operator in the Pennsylvania blacksmith shop, is going with his family to the northern lakes to spend a week's vacation.

O. J. Farnan, a machinist in the Pennsylvania lathe shop, is starting on a vacation of two weeks, which he will spend in Wisconsin.

Miss Ella Hartwell, of the small motor department of the General Electric works, will be the guest of friends in Chicago next week.

T. W. Demarest, superintendent of motive power of the Pennsylvania, went to Chicago this morning to look after some railroad business.

M. H. Sorg, a boilermaker at the Pennsylvania shops, is going with his family to Grand Rapids to spend a few days.

Herbert Daseler, clerk in the Bass foundry office, has resigned his position and will work in the trainmaster's office at the Pennsylvania.

D. Miriagta, a laborer in the Pennsylvania erecting shop, has returned from Youngstown, Ohio, where he has been for the past week.

This morning William Rayhouser and William Hess, of the small motor department of the General Electric works, left for Crooked lake in an automobile.

W. E. Hickey, a machinist helper in the Pennsylvania boiler shop, is undergoing an operation for the removal of his tonsils and will probably be off duty for about a week.

E. R. Saffen, clerk to General Foreman B. F. Sarver, of the Pennsylvania boiler shop, is going on a vacation of a week, which he will spend on a farm near Sherwood, O.

E. C. Danes, of the maintenance of way department of the Wabash, was in the city today looking after some work the department has been engaged in.

Jack Leedy, clerk in the machine room at the General Electric works for Foreman William Wehrs, rounded out a vacation term tonight and will be at his desk again Monday.

Yard Engineer John W. Sanburn, of the Nickel Plate, who was off duty two or three days on account of having some visitors from Indianapolis, resumed work this morning.

Capt. and Mrs. O. C. Meyers left last night for Mackinac, where they will spend a part of his vacation term. Captain Meyers is fuel clerk at the Pennsylvania motive power office.

Norman Houck, clerk for Foreman Joseph Schwartzkopf, of the punch press department of the General Electric works, left yesterday on a two weeks' vacation trip.

Pennsylvania Trainmaster C. L. Hamilton and his family left early this morning for Chicago. They will return tomorrow evening. The trip is being made in Mr. Hamilton's automobile.

Miss Carrie Burke, stenographer for R. O. Orff, of the receiving department of the General Electric works, will enter upon a two weeks' vacation Monday. During Miss Burke's absence, the duties of her office will be performed by Miss Margarite Sorgen, of the receiving department office.

M. L. Schram, a laborer at the Pennsylvania machine shops, suffered an injury to his finger yesterday which will force him to be off duty for several days. The injury was caused by a piston rod falling on his finger.

L. H. Shields, of the production department office of the General Electric works, leaves tomorrow for Carthage, N. C., to spend his two weeks' vacation term. Mr. Shields formerly resided in Carthage.

A. L. Hadley, of the Engineering department of the General Electric works, accompanied Mrs. Hadley, who came down for a short visit to their cottage at Clear lake this morning, making the trip in an automobile.

William Heine, a flue welder in the Pennsylvania shops, has resigned and accepted a position with the National Supply company, on Columbia street. He worked at the Pennsylvania shops for five years and a half.

Earl Ehrhart, clerk for Purchasing Agent F. I. Brown, of the Pennsylvania, left this morning for Orrville, O., where he will look after some business for the company and incidentally visit his brother over Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Peter Goda will go to Detroit this evening and after a few days "taking in" the pleasures of the parks will leave on a trip to Mackinac, making the latter part of the trip over the "inland route" of lakes.

Machinist Thomas Hayes, of the Wabash shops, will spend Sunday at Rome City, where his parents have a cottage.

J. L. Welk, general boiler inspector of the Wabash, headquarters at Decatur, Ill., was here today on business for the company.

Fred G. Duryee, chief wireman at the General Electric works, who was operated upon Thursday evening for appendicitis, is doing well, the surgeon and hospital attendants say, and there is every reason to believe he will recover. Mr. Duryee is at the Lutheran hospital.

The Lake Erie & Western road has made arrangements for another excursion to Cincinnati August 27. The train will follow the same schedule that has been used in the past, leaving here at 12:30 and arriving at Cincinnati at 6:30. Returning, the train will leave Cincinnati at 6:30. There will be a baseball game between Cincinnati and Brooklyn, besides the numerous other attractions of the Ohio city.

GEE WHIZ, BUT IT IS SURE HOT.

New York kiddies, scooting from tenements made almost unbearable by the terrific heat, are here shown standing in line awaiting their turns at a drinking fountain. Most of the time the kiddies are penned in unkempt tenement halls on account of the infantile paralysis epidemic, but occasionally they run off to a fountain or play spot.

They are (top) Ingeniero Alberto J. Pani, general manager of the constitutionalist railways of Mexico; (center) Luis Cabrera, president of delegation, and secretary of finance and public credit, and Ignacio Bonillas, sub-secretary in charge of ministry of communications and public works.

EDITOR'S NOTE—How many persons of the thousands of consumers in Fort Wayne pause to consider how the milk or butter used on their tables daily is produced? How many housewives look deeper than the cream line—and the price in the bottle of milk delivered to their doors to determine the quality of the contents? How many realize sufficiently that healthfulness in the household in a great measure depends upon the purity of the milk supply?

These and many other phases of the milk situation in Fort Wayne are dwelt upon in the following interesting article written for The Sentinel by Stuart T. Todd, expert milk sanitarian, who has just completed for The Sentinel a ten days' sanitary survey of the dairies and milk plants supplying Fort Wayne consumers. His observations are based upon actualities and comparisons upon intimate knowledge of existing conditions in sixteen states and more than 100 cities which he has investigated with the support, co-operation and endorsement of numerous health departments, well known milk authorities and leading newspapers in every city.

BY STUART T. TODD.

In selecting the family's milk supply every housewife should religiously insist upon three requisites from her dealer:

First—Absence of visible sediment in the bottom of the bottle. The presence of sediment of any description in the bottom of a bottle of milk denotes carelessness and unclean methods in its production or handling, or both. If a dairyman hasn't respect enough for his customers to remove the foreign substance from the milk he delivers, his product is unsafe and he is unworthy of your patronage.

Sanitary Equipment Needed.

Second—Modern facilities and sanitary equipment. While it is true that a good quality of milk can sometimes be produced amid unclean and insanitary surroundings, the customer is taking greater chances with the health of the family than the price she pays for the milk justifies. If she desires a cheap milk and refuses to pay a reasonable price for an article that she knows to be safe, then she may expect to be given a quality of milk that conforms exactly to the price she pays. The cream line cannot under any circumstances be taken as a criterion of the quality. The cream line may be deepest on an article of milk that is polluted with disease-breeding bacteria.

Third—Delivery of all milk and cream in sterilized bottles. Bulk milk or "dipped" milk is a menace to health and should be prohibited—and fortunately is prohibited from sale in nine-tenths of the cities of the United States ranging in population from 10,000 upwards—by stringent laws requiring the bottling of all milk for human consumption on the producing premises or in a sanitary milk plant built and maintained in conformity to established rules of sanitation.

Vital to Safe Milk.

All three of these rules are absolutely vital to safety in a city's milk supply. The absence of any one of the three cheapens the milk and puts the burden of responsibility upon the customer instead of upon the dairyman where it rightfully belongs. Because any housewife who will condone sediment, who will not pay enough attention to her milk supply—the food very often which she feeds her baby—to determine the character of the surroundings under which her milk is produced and handled, is jeopardizing not only her health but that of every one of her loved ones.

The housewife is the final arbiter of the character of the milk she serves on the table—or to her infant. For it is a fact that a city's milk supply is exactly what that city makes it through the demand made upon the dairymen by the consumers. Milk will not be made any better than the public demands or that it pays for.

One of Cheapest Foods.

Milk is one of the cheapest foods on the market. It is also one of the most easily digested. It is very nourishing and the ways in which it can be used are innumerable. One quart of good milk costing eight or ten cents equals in food value:

Two pounds of salt codfish; three pounds of fresh codfish; two pounds of chicken; four pounds of beets; five pounds of turnips; 1-3 pound of wheat flour; 1-6 pound of butter; 1-3 pound of cheese; 3-4 pound of lean round beef; eight eggs; two pounds of potatoes; six pounds of spinach, seven pounds of lettuce or four pounds of cabbage. To these may be added, one pint of oysters, 4-5 pounds of loin of pork and 3-5 pound of ham.

The price of these foods will range between 20 and 24 cents—averaging approximately 22 cents. For almost the same money more than two quarts of milk at 10 cents could be purchased and three quarts of milk at 8 cents, in other words the consumer gets nearly three times the food value in milk than is obtained in the average food on the market.

Yet milk is practically the only article of food which has not risen in price in the last two years—in fact, Fort Wayne is obtaining a milk supply at approximately the same figure it paid for it five or even ten years ago. And this also in direct face of the fact that foodstuffs for cattle have almost and in some instances more than doubled in price; the value of dairy cows has increased from one-third to one-half more and the sanitary requirements of health authorities has added an additional burden of expense to the dairyman.

Must Get Fair Price.

A dairyman cannot afford to equip his plant or farm with even reasonably sanitary appliances when he is retailing his product for seven or eight cents a quart. When it is realized that it costs at a minimum figure six cents a quart to deliver milk in Fort Wayne even under existing conditions—which unfortunately are far from good in the main—it may readily be seen that the profit of one or two cents a quart is not any more than sufficient for the dairyman to eke out a mere existence without putting any of it into equipment to safeguard his product.

Fort Wayne's milk supply is not on a par with the progressive spirit of the city exhibited in almost every other way. It is not entirely the fault of the dairymen. The consumer bears nearly an equal responsibility, for if insistence were made on a better supply, the dairymen would furnish it. Unfortunately lack of intelligent inspection in the past has permitted the dairy industry here to deteriorate rather than keep step with the march of the city's progress.

A remedy for existing conditions is in sight. Within the past few weeks the city health department has appointed Dr. Paul C. Kucher dairy and food inspector. As yet he has had insufficient time to overcome the degeneration permitted in the past, but is fast regenerating the industry.

One of the great obstacles which must be overcome here is lack of proper facilities of handling the product by the individual dealers or producers. In the majority of instances only the crudest equipment is maintained and this oftentimes is neglected until the milk is contaminated every time it passes over or through what little equipment is maintained. I have found dairies running in direct violation of the city ordinances, not in one, but in several instances—one in particular handling his milk in a house attached to a horse stable and with doors opening from the one into the other. Under the city ordinance this is positively prohibited, yet more than 200 gallons of milk daily is delivered to homes in this city after being bottled amid these insanitary surroundings.

There are too many small, irresponsible dealers in the business for the general welfare of the industry here. Fort Wayne boasts as many individual dealers as does the average city three times its size. In the past anyone, with or without equipment of the most insignificant sort, could enter the milk business as a final resort to a bread and butter existence. The result has been that there are innumerable small dealers selling from 15 to 30 gallons of milk, who in the very nature of the extent of their business, cannot afford to equip their places with sanitary arrangements for handling the milk.

Regulation or Pasteurization.

There are just two avenues toward a better milk supply in Fort Wayne—either more stringent regulations and a greater insistence upon equipment and surroundings, which, if enforced, will compel the smaller dealer to equip his place as well as the larger one, or compulsory pasteurization of all milk delivered in Fort Wayne. Unless the city can afford to hire a sufficient inspection corps to make at least monthly inspections of all dairies and dealers and see that the product is up to a high standard in its raw state, compulsory pasteurization is the only outlet.

Until any city's inspection department is permitted a free hand in the exercise of his duty to require the standard of milk, his efforts will be nil and the city's milk will continue to be bad. If Dr. Kucher is permitted to proceed as his better judgment dictates, he will clean up the milk supply of Fort Wayne and place it on a par at least with any city in Indiana. He has the confidence of the dairymen and by professional and technical training is well fitted for the position he occupies.

That Fort Wayne's mortality record is low; that there are few cases of typhoid during the summer months; that more babies do not die during the hot weather is apparently not due to the general milk supply of the city, but more probably to the incessant watchfulness and deep concern of Dr. J. H. Gilpin, secretary of the city health board, and his assistants. That they are doing their work well is evidenced by the lean mortality record. With a general house cleaning in the milk industry even this record would undoubtedly be reduced and Fort Wayne would rise to a higher plane in the opinion of those contemplating making this city their homes. For the milk supply is one of the first features investigated by any family when changing locations. By it, to a very great extent, a city is known to the outside world. So its importance cannot be over estimated.

Found Some Good Dairies.

In the ten days I have been in Fort Wayne I have visited practically every dairyman supplying milk to Fort Wayne. Some of these—a comparative few, unfortunately—I have selected for recommendation to the milk consumers of the city. In every instance I have made a personal inspection of the premises, investigated the methods used and the product as it is delivered to the customer. In practically all instances Dr. Kucher has accompanied me. I can unreservedly recommend every dairyman appearing on the "Quality Selected Sanitary Dairy Page" as being representative of the highest class market milk producer, whose product I believe to be safe for general uses. For infant feeding no milk should be used, not even certified, without a physician's prescription. Promiscuous feeding of babies on milk that is good enough for family use is dangerous in the extreme.

I have been compelled to reject many more dairymen for representation on the dairy pages than I could accept, for various reasons—either their places were insanitary, their methods improper, their product contained visible sediment or otherwise was not worthy of recommendation, they were delivering milk below a normal price, thereby not giving themselves sufficient profit to install the necessary equipment to produce a good article of milk, or for other similar reasons I did not wish to recommend the product. I believe it is the duty of every housewife to investigate for herself the source of her milk supply. If they would do it in Fort Wayne there either would be a revolutionary upheaval in the milk industry or many dealers would be compelled to quit the business through lack of trade.

Butter and ice cream are two commodities that daily dress almost every table in the city. These, like milk, carry bacteria in large quantities unless manufactured under proper conditions. Fortunately Fort Wayne possesses butter and ice cream factories the equal of any anywhere. Their methods, equipment and surroundings invariably are in strict accordance with sanitary requirements and their products of a high character.

Precaution Necessary.

This is a season of the year when every housewife should take every precaution she knows to safeguard her milk supply. Milk carries more germs than any other article of food. It is more susceptible to contamination than any. Consult with your health department often regarding your milk. Ask your physician always how to feed the baby and never use milk that might be left in the baby's bottle from one feeding to be mixed with fresh milk for the subsequent meal. Never replace the cap removed from a bottle of milk. Instead invert a clean drinking glass over the top of the bottle and always keep it cold. It is far better to place the bottle of milk with the ice than in the bottom of the refrigerator.

And above all get the best supply obtainable at the price you can afford to pay. It is better to pay a little more for your milk and cut your meat bill or other household expense proportionately to get the better grade. Cheap milk is poor economy, but it helps support the undertakers and medical fraternity.

August Promises to Smash All Previous Records in Freight.

If the present movement of freight over the Nickel Plate continues until September 1, August, 1916, will have established a new record, for the business was never better in that month than it has been so far this year. This has been the cause of hiring several new men, instead of laying off or "setting back" those already in the service. Some of the engineers who were promoted last winter, in accordance with the custom during the season of heavy traffic and reduced train tonnage, and put back to firing because of the falling off of traffic, have been recalled to the throttle side of the cab and new firemen have been hired. Fireman E. M. Doty was "marked up" to the extra engineer list yesterday and J. Dunlap, A. W. Perry, D. C. Weiss and R. Broo were employed as new firemen.

WRECK DELAYS TRAINS.

The westbound Manhattan Limited, on the Pennsylvania, was over two hours late when it reached the city today. The delay was caused by a journal under a boxcar east of Orrville burning off and blocking the tracks. The three Cleveland sleepers which become a part of the limited at Orrville were sent on through on the limited's time, reaching Chicago on the "dot." The other portion of the train came two hours later.

MANY GOING TO DETROIT.

Reduced rate tickets to Detroit, on account of the annual convention of the American Veterinary Medical association, were placed on sale by the Wabash this morning and will continue on sale until and including Monday, the 21st. There is a fairly good business, many people not interested in the veterinary association taking advantage of the rate to get to the lake and the resorts near Detroit. The return limit has been fixed for August 29.

TO ATTEND MUNICIPAL CONVENTION.

A. A. Serva, sales manager of the General Electric works, will leave tomorrow for Baltimore, Md., where he will attend the annual convention of the International Association of Municipal Electricians, which will be held two or three days next week.

L. E. & W. OFFICIALS IN CITY.

George Dyer, general superintendent of the Lake Erie & Western road, and A. W. O'Brien, superintendent of the Fort Wayne, Cincinnati & Louisville division, paid this city a visit yesterday afternoon on their tour of inspection They were on a special car which was a part of the regular train going south at 2:30.

WILL RETURN TO OLD HOME.

G. W. Babcock, who came here two or three months ago and took employment in the punch press department of the General Electric works, under Foreman Schwartzkopf, resigned this morning. He has decided to return to Toledo, his former home, where a good position awaits him.

OFF ON AUTO TRIP.

Chief Clerk D. E. Guy, of the Wabash division storeroom, and Mrs. Guy and daughter, Clara May Guy, were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Zeigler on an automobile trip to Clear Lake. They left for that resort this afternoon and will return Sunday evening.

GEE WHIZ, BUT IT IS SURE HOT.

LLANO GRANDE WAS IN PATHWAY OF BIG BLOW

Camp Where Fort Wayne Soldiers Are Stationed Suffers Somewhat.

San Antonio, Texas, Aug. 19.—The West Indian hurricane passed through Brownsville without serious damage and no fatalities, according to a wireless report to Fort Sam Houston here, today. The troops were reported busy reconstructing their camps, which suffered heavily in the terrific gale.

At Llano Grande, a Minnesota guardsman suffered a broken arm. The mess house of the First Iowa regiment band collapsed with four men it and one was slightly injured.

Every tent in the camps of the Third Texas infantry and the Twenty-sixth United States infantry at Harlingen was blown down and the camps were flooded. The troops spent the night in town.

The Illinois camps around Brownsville suffered the most, due to the fact that the guardsmen had frame tents.

At the height of the storm, General James Parker, the veteran cavalry commander, and his aides, rode through every camp, making a tour of inspection. They found several new mess buildings levelled, acres and acres of fallen and twisted tents and nine warehouses in a sea of mud and water.

Nearly all the Iowa troops stuck to their camps. This was true also of the New York guardsmen at McAllen, although according to a land wire message from Harlingen, the latter lost more than half their tents.

Brownsville was still without telegraph and telephone communication at noon.

TAKE WAGON LOAD OF CIGARS IN DAYLIGHT

A wagon load of choice cigars and cigarettes were carted away from the store house of Frank Gocke, wholesale dealer, 933 East Wayne street, within a stone's throw of the police station, in broad daylight Friday. The theft was committed between 1 and 2 o'clock Friday afternoon when a man backed a spring wagon up to the building and loaded on several boxes of cigars.

Gocke had been away from the place but an hour when he returned at 2 o'clock and found $400 worth of tobacco missing. There was the tracks in the soft pavement where a horse and small wagon had backed to the curbing. Police were notified.

A partial description of the man who committed the theft has been furnished by a citizen who chanced to be passing when the wagon was being loaded. Police think they will capture the daring thief as it will be a difficult matter to dispose of the large quantity of loot. No arrests were made Saturday, however.

CITY HALL NEWS.

Will Paint Hospital.

Work of painting the isolation hospital and making other minor improvements aboutthe place will be started next week, the board of works has ordered.

Busy on Sewers.

Laying sewer pipe across the St. Mary's river near the gas company property on Superior street, to connect the Spy Run sewer with the intercepting sewer, was started Friday by the C. E. Moellering company. Work of tunneling beneath the Wabash track at Warren street for the completion of the Warren street sewer was begun Friday by the Sheets Construction company. The sewer pipe will be thirty-seven feet below the rails. It is hoped to have the east end of the sewer finished in six weeks.

The Grosjean Construction company is building two miles of sewer on State boulevard from the St. Joe river to Anthony boulevard.

A trench machine is digging four miles of sewer in the Weisser Park addition for J. E. K. France.

Will Bid on Reservoir Roof.

A Cleveland contracting firm, through one of their representatives, asked permission Friday to bid on the roof which may be placed over the reservoir. Members of the board of works think there is no doubt but that the reservoir can be covered for less than $8,000. They expect to pass on the method to be used for purifying the city water supply next week.

BUILDING PERMITS.

Permits to build were granted the following Saturday: Franklin Realty and Building company, 1210 East Lewis street, frame residence, $2,900; Clarence Miller, 602 Leith street, residence, $4,000; William L. Griebel, 1315 East Washington street, remodel dwelling, $700, and to Franklin Realty and Building company, 3122 Webster street, residence, $3,000.

WORKING ON TUNNEL.

The Moellering Construction company has started work of building the retaining wall beneath the New York Central railroad tracks at Osage street. The heavy wall, to hold back thirty feet of earth, will require several days in erection.

BIRTH RECORD.

EACH FILE SUIT ASKING DIVORCE

First Herman Then Anna Schmeling Bring Action for Separation.

They both want divorces.

Friday, Herman filed suit against Anna Schmeling for a divorce. Saturday Mrs. Schmeling asked a decree of divorce in a bill filed in superior court.

Mrs. Schemling says she was married Dec. 18, 1915, and separated from him August 7, last. She charges cruelty, and asserts he struck her daughter. Limited separation is asked and support money. Macbeth & Hogg are attorneys for the plaintiff.

Ellen Morris has been granted a divorce from Ben Morris.

Elizabeth Aaron has been awarded a divorce decree from William Aaron.

Scholarship Awards Made.

Seeks a Divorce.

Irene Koons has filed suit in superior court for a divorce from Arthur F. Koons. They were married June 11, 1900. Custody of a daughter is asked. Cruel and inhuman treatment and failure to provide are alleged.

Case is Continued.

The case of Timothy McGrath et al. against the city of Fort Wayne et al. for an injunction designed to prevent the location of an incinerator in Bloomingdale, has been continued in the superior court for further evidence. The suit involves the advertising for bids for the work without naming the place at which the incinerator was to be built. Later it was decided to build the incinerator in Bloomingdale and persons of that locality objected.

O'Brien-McDuffee.

Miss Mentor Caroline McDuffee and Mr. Byron O'Brien were united in marriage by Rev. James Lawburg at the Methodist parsonage in Churubusco. Both bride and groom are residents of Eel River township. The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. G. McDuffee, and she has taught school very successfully in Churubusco and Eel River township. The groom is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles O'Brien, and has taken his bride to his home to live.

DISEASE STATUS HOLDS.

Little Change Noted at End of Eighth Week of Plague.

New York, Aug. 19.—The end of the eighth week of the epidemic of infantile paralysis was marked by no material change in its development. During the week just passed the disease has neither advanced nor receded to any extent. During the twenty-four hours ending at 10 a. m. thirty-six children were killed by the plague and 134 new cases were reported to the health department, as against thirty-two deaths and 125 new cases reported yesterday.

TWO FALSE ALARMS.

Police were investigating cases of two false fire alarms which routed central station firemen out at 2 o'clock on both Friday and Saturday mornings and sent them flying down West Main street. The two fake calls came from the region of the St. Joseph hospital. Police think they were turned in by the same person. It is a practical joke which police take most seriously. If the culprit is caught he will be heavily fined. The law exacts a severe penalty in such cases, as lives of firemen and the fire horses are endangered at each breakneck run.

Robert J. Gaskill, chairman of the executive committee of the International Association of Municipal Electricians, will leave Sunday for Baltimore, Md., to attend the convention of that organization.

FLOWER SHOW TO BE ELABORATE AFFAIR

Electric Novelties Will Give It Features of an Exposition.

Lilies and roses, in their most delicate tints, will be displayed electrically at Fort Wayne's first annual flower show to be held on September 6 and 7, in the inclosure just east of the Majestic theatre, on Berry street.

Several thousand electric light bulbs of the most fantastic creations will be furnished for the show by the National Cash Register company, of Dayton. The bulbs have been formed into shapes of beautiful flowers and glow of the light within brings out the fine colors. Among the variety of objects represented by the new form of electric lighting will be apples of several varieties and big homely pumpkins. The electric display, which is being furnished free, will be something new for Fort Wayne.

Power for the electric displays at the show will be furnished free by the city lighting plant. John Wessel, superintendent of the plant, has assured the committees in charge of the event.

Beauty of the show will be added to by displays by all Fort Wayne florists. The local dealers will give special instructions on the kinds of plants which should be planted in fall and winter. Many varieties of hedge will be shown. Winter window boxes will be displayed. One object of the show is to stimulate interest in "year around" decorating.

Work of decorating the large inclosure for the show will start this week. Booths are to be installed for the several wards and attractiveness by arrangement will be sought after.

Thousands and thousands of cardinals, pansies, shasta daisys, astors and snap dragons will present their smiling faces at the show. They will be the bright fruits of a summer's work of little hands. Many of them, and some of the most beautiful, will have spent the summer near rough board fences and under clouds of drifting smoke. This should only add to their beauty. The result of their attractiveness at the show is expected to give the children new enthusiasm for beautifying work next year.

Many Different Varieties.

The variety of flowers to be displayed, for a great many will not know the names of half of them, is largely to the credit of Mrs. Fred McCulloch. It was through her efforts that flower seeds were secured by children at reduced prices. She had slips of paper distributed among pupils and orders for the flowers written on the sheets. By buying in large quantities the flowers were delivered at the lowest possible price.

The final judgment on back yards and improved lawns by the committee of fifty women at the close of the beautification campaign, was virtually finished Saturday. A few isolated properties are to be inspected Monday. A meeting of the whole committee will be held next week in the court house and the winners decided upon. Prizes will be given out the last day of the flower show.

Special credit has been voted Mrs. Josephine Nesbitt, head of the beautification work, by the committee. Her ceaseless energy is largely responsible for the spirit with which the young contestants have stayed with their work, they say. In most cases there has been a constant growth since the children signed up for the contest.

The Tenth ward also receives special mention by the committee members. Children of that ward as a whole have stayed with their work most faithfully. There has been marked improvement in homes of each of the 500 boys and girls of the ward who started in the beautifying work last spring.

UNION WAITERS REFUSE TO SERVE HUGHES FEAST

Balk at Open Shop Card in Window Where Luncheon Was Given.

San Francisco, Cal., Aug. 19.—Union waiters refused today to serve a luncheon given to Charles E. Hughes, republican presidential candidate, at the San Francisco Commercial club because the club exhibits in its window an open shop card as a part of a fight being made here by the chamber of commerce upon the closed shop. For the Hughes luncheon a request was sent by the club management to the waiters' union asking for sixty-five waiters, but this was refused.

The Pacific Coast Waiters' association backed up the action of the local waiters and pickets were sent to the Commercial club entrance to warn union waiters away. One of the large downtown open shop cafes sent its entire crew to the relief of the Hughes luncheon.

NO TRUTH IN GERMAN PUNITIVE CAMP RUMOR

Berlin, Aug. 19.—"From a competent authority we hear," says the Overseas news agency, "that there is no truth in the reports that the German military authorities have established punitive camps for restraining Germans and that among others the entire staff of the Volks Zeitung, of Leipsic, has been interned."

A report that the German military authorities had established a punitive camp for "troublesome Germans," was received in London in June 29 from Berne. It was said in addition to the staff of the Leipsic Volke Zeitung, whose members were to be interned until the end of the war, four prominent socialists were to be confined in the camp.

GALLINGER WANTS TO KNOW.

Washington, Aug. 19.—Senator Gallinger today introduced a resolution directing the chairman of the federal trade commission to inform the senate at once by what authority George Rublee now is a member of the commission. Action was deferred until Monday.

Senator Gallinger after a long fight based on personal grounds, prevented Rublee's confirmation and he has been serving without compensation since March, 1915. A bill to provide compensation for Rublee's services up to the time of his rejection last June is pending in the house.

USED A TOY REVOLVER.

Terre Haute, Ind., Aug. 19.—A toy revolver, of the kind used to squirt liquid, was the weapon said to have been used by two masked robbers who held up Nick Casper, night clerk of the Sandison hotel, early today. They got $2.10. Two men giving the names of Al Jackman, 24, and Henry Tunnicliff, 26, were arrested, charged with the robbery. Casper was compelled to enter a closet and the door was locked.

CALLS HUGHES' TALKS QUERULOUS CARPINGS

Has Shot Bolt and Failed to Hit Bull's Eye, Says Champ Clark.

Brunswick, Me., Aug. 19.—Champ Clark, speaker of the house of representatives, opened the campaign in Maine for the democrats today in a characteristic speech in which he told of the accomplishments of the administration and congress under the leadership of President Wilson. He also took note of the campaign tour that Charles E. Hughes is making in behalf of his candidacy for the presidency. Mr. Hughes, he said, had thus far made enough speeches to enable people to form judgment as to his opinions on current issues and in the speaker's opinion, "he has shot his bolt but has failed to hit the bullseye."

Mr. Clark said in part: "Judge Hughes has made enough speeches in this campaign to enable intelligent persons to form something approximating a correct judgment as to his opinions on current issues. He has shot his bolt but failed to hit the bullseye.

"It was universally conceded by both friends and foe that his speech at Youngstown, O., in 1908 was far and away the greatest republican speech made that year. Comparing his speeches since he was nominated for president with his strong Youngstown speech, one is forced inevitably to one of two conclusions. First, that his pen and tongue have lost their cunning measurably, or second, that he has nothing to urge against democratic accomplishments or to propose as republican policies, should republicans by some miracle win the house, the senate and the presidency.

"His speeches may not be unfairly summe dup as 'querulous carpings' at the splendid record of the democratic congress and administration. Here and there out of a vast multitude of things he finds a few of minor character which he deems unsatisfactory to him, which, even if wrong, have no more to do with the tremendous problems with which a mighty people are wrestling than have the potato vines of Aroostook county, Maine, to do with the majestic flow of the Mississippi river."

JOHNSTON BEATEN BY JAPANESE CHAMPION

National Tennis Title Holder Goes Down Before Oriental Expert.

Newport, R. I., Aug. 19.—William M. Johnston, the national tennis title holder, was defeated by Kumagae, the Japanese champion, today in the final match of the singles tournament for the Casino cup. Score, 6-1, 9-7, 5-7, 2-6, 9-7.

The match was one of the hardest fought contests ever seen on the Casino courts, both players using every atom of tennis strategy and skill at their command. Kumagae's superiority in play in the opening round was unquestionable for the national champion was apparently unable to handle the swift, accurate strokes of his opponent.

The next set was also a victory for the Japanese but Johnston was now playing in something like his top notch form and sixteen games were necessary before the Tokio champion emerged a winner.

Continuing his brilliant play in the following set, Johnston won 7 to 5 and in the fourth seemed to have the Japanese at his mercy, allowing him only two games. The gallery looked for a victory for Johnston in the fifth and deciding set but Kumagae had something in reserve and his endurance gave him the victory.

EPIDEMIC IS GAINING.

New Record for Fatalities Is Set in Philadelphia.

Philadelphia, Aug. 19.—Infantile paralysis made a new record for fatalities in Philadelphia when reports to the health bureau showed eight deaths and three new cases from midnight to noon today.

Dr. Samuel G. Dixon today placed a ban on the shipment of bodies of infantile paralysis victims through or into Pennsylvania from other states.

DETECTIVE IS UNCERTAIN.

Sends for Burroughs Officials to Take Look at Suspects.

Cleveland, O., Aug. 19.—Detective Rick, of the Detroit police department, today failed to identify three men taken from the freighter Indus this morning as the auto bandits who three weeks ago robbed the Burroughs Adding Machine company pay automobile of $32,000. Rick was not satisfied with his own conclusions, however, and sent for Burroughs officials to come and see the prisoners.

JUDGE NORTONI AT WORK.

Progressive Takes Charge of Bureau for Democrats.

Chicago, Aug. 19.—Judge Albert D. Nortoni, of St. Louis, formerly one of the leaders of the progressive party in Missouri, and who recently announced his intention of supporting President Wilson, was named today to take charge of the bureau at the western democratic campaign headquarters which will direct the work among the progressives. Judge Nortoni began his new duties here today.

ADAIR TALKS TO THE DEMOCRATIC EDITORS

Short Meeting Follows the Lunch at Anthony Hotel at Noon Hour.

State democracy's keynote preliminary to the barbecue address of John A. M. Adair, of Portland, was sounded on Saturday noon at the Hotel Anthony, when democratic editors of the Twelfth district and the state, democratic state candidates and prominent party workers of Allen and counties in the district sat at dinner. There were 150 democrats at tables and after-dinner speaking was featured by John A. M. Adair, of Portland, candidate for governor; George A. Bittler, state treasurer; Carl Gerner, editor of the Auburn Courier, and J. W. Adams, editor of the Columbia City Post. E. G. Hoffman, democratic national committeeman, presided.

"Democracy can only win in the state this fall if the democratic editors throw themselves into the campaign," declared Mr. Adair. He said the editors and precinct committeemen would swing the election from state officers down.

"When I was asked where I wanted the democratic campaign opened I had no hesitancy in saying Fort Wayne," asserted the candidate for the governorship. Mr. Adair praised the work done so far by the editorial chair and asked a continuation of it.

Bittler Speaks.

"We are going to continue to give the state the kind of legislation it wants," declared Mr. Bittler. "We will re-elect Woodrow Wilson president with all the state and county officers." He asserted the party was pledged to economy and that it was keeping that pledge.

Mr. Adams complimented the work done by the democratic editors and characterized the Hughes campaign as an act of "belly-aching." Mr. Gerner lauded the hospitality of Fort Wayne democrats and said the keynote sounding in this city was notable for democracy.

The state candidates were called into Berry street in front of the Hotel Anthony following the editors' meeting while their pictures were taken. The editors and party workers left at the Harrison street door formed in line and marched to the transfer corner, where Robison park cars were in waiting to transport them to the park.

District Editors.

Democratic editors of the Twelfth district in attendance at the meeting were the following: Lew Ellingham, Fort Wayne Journal-Gazette; Herman Mackwitz, Fort Wayne Freie Presse; John D. Allegar, Monroeville Breeze; Ira D. Rohrer, Grabill Review; Clyde F. Moon, Woodburn News; W. E. James, Harlan Herald; O. H. Ellwood, Lagrange Democrat-Call; Charles W. Manning, Topeka Journal; C. B. Hamilton, Garrett Clipper; Carl Gerner, Auburn Courier; W. G. Hoffer, Auburn Bee; A. S. Powers, Butler Herald; F. B. Leighty, St. Joe News; Clyde F. Welsey, Corunna News; J. W. Adams, Columbia City News; O. H. Downey, Churubusco Truth; John W. Fancett, Angola Herald; A. C. Wolfe, Ashley News; W. H. McEwen, Albion Democrat; W. C. B. Harrison, Ligonier Banner; Charles O. Merica, Kendallville News-Sun; E. W. Hopper, Avilla News; R. C. Eshelman, Wolcottville Herald.

OLIVE BRANCH GROWS FROM PITCHFORK GRAVE

Senator Tillman Speaks in Reply to Charges Made by Mr. Hughes.

Washington, Aug. 19.—Senator Tillman, of South Carolina, one of the southern veterans in congress, today made a speech replying to Charles E. Hughes' campaign references to southern domination of congress, and as the vehicle of expression of unity and good will between north and south referred to his sobriquet, "Pitchfork Ben."

"If I ever did hate the northern people—and I confessed to that the last time I spoke here," said he, "that hatred and partisanship have died out of my heart, and the pitchfork, if it was considered the emblem of it, has long since been buried. From its grave an olive branch has grown and I am tendering the olive branch, claiming to represent the south in doing so, to all northern people.

"I did not earn the name of 'Pitchfork' on account of my partisanship. It was due to the bluntness and frankness with which I spoke."

MORE SPEED RECORDS WERE DUE FOR A FALL

Chicago, Aug. 19.—Nine auto racers are this afternoon to start in the Grand Prix at the Chicago speedway. The race will be run in five twenty-five mile heats with a fifty mile final and $10,000 will be divided among the winning drivers.

Speedway officials, basing their claims on the results of the elimination trial yesterday, declared they expected to see several world records broken.

Louis Chevrolet was forced to withdraw from the race because a connecting rod in his car was broken during a practice spin.

Conference Between Manager Hedley and Employes is Fruitless.

New York, Aug. 19.—The breach between the street car men's union and the New York railways company, threatening a renewal of the recent trolley strike widened today when a conference between General Manager Frank Hadley, of the traction company, and union leaders adjourned without result. The conference was to have taken up various demands of the men, but Louis Fridigervaty, of the union, insisted that it was useless to proceed until the matter of the discharge of fourteen employes over the recent strike was disposed of. This the company yesterday announced its willingness to arbitrate, but the union leaders refused to accept the proposition.

The conference adjourned until next Tuesday. Telegrams were sent today by General Organizer Fitzgerald of the union, to Chairman Straus of the public service commission, and Mayor Mitchell requesting them to return, as the "situation is very serious."

NEGRO STABBED IN FIGHT NEAR DEATH

Man Slashed With Large Knife is in Critical Condition at Hospital.

James McKee, 30, colored, is at the point of death in St. Joseph hospital as the result of a battle with John Dolar and Earl Collins, two negroes, over a ten-cent debt. A fractured skull, as the result of a blow from a brick, and a rent across his abdomen, inflicted with a knife, are the extent of McKee's hurts He may die, hospital attendants say.

Police were called to the corner of Lafayette and Wallace streets shortly ported that a man had been hurt. They ported that a man had ben hurt. They found McKee reclining in a chair in a drugstore at the corner. He was in a semi-conscious state. He was rushed to the hospital.

From people living in the neighborhood police gathered information of the fight between the men, which took place in an alley off Lafayette street. One of the men hit McKee with a brick, police learned. The two men ran when they learned that McKee was hurt, neighbors said. Collins and Dolan were arrested in a Lafayette street saloon. They denied all knowledge of the battle at first. They are held in jail charged with assault and battery with intent to kill.

ESCHBACH TO SPEAK IN CITY WEDNESDAY

Harry G. Hogan, republican Twelfth district chairman, has announced that Harry Eschbach, of Warsaw, chairman of the state republican speakers' committee, will be in Fort Wayne, Wednesday, to attend the Watson dinner to be held at the Commercial club.

The republicans will virtually open the campaign in this city with the holding of this dinner. James E. Watson, republican senatorial nominee, will share the speaking program with Mr. Eschbach, and arrangements are being made for one of the most important meetings of the campaign on Wednesday.

SIZE IS WAIVED.

The United States Navy Will Waive a Point or Two.

J. C. King, chief petty officer in charge of the Fort Wayne navy recruiting station, has received the following order from Lieut. L. H. Comfort, head of navy recruiting for Indiana: "Minors who are desirable for service and are five pounds underweight or one inch under height may be sent in. But they must be very desirable and in perfect physical condition otherwise."

BASEBALL ATHLETICS

EVERYTHING SET FOR SEASON'S BIGGEST GAME

Nate James Coming With Big Collection of League Stars.

Everything is ready for the biggest game of the season when the Fort Wayne City team take on the fast Portland tossers for a nine round go Sunday. The Clearyites fully realize that the team Sunday is the best bunch of players they have had to tackle so far this season and are all primed to the limit.

Nate James is a wise one when it comes to baseball and is showing it by bringing along with him three of the best pitchers in the state. Byrd, a former Chicago Federal pitcher, who is as good as he ever was, is expected to start for the visitors. Just as good as the former leaguer are Walls and Biersdorfer. Biersdorfer is a former Fort Wayne pitcher, playing one season with Babe Meyer's Central league team. He is a pitcher above the average and can be called on at any time to take the game out of the fire if the case is such as it is necessary. Wall is also a Central leaguer, playing at one time with the Dayton club.

Behind these boys will be one of the best infields that can be found around these parts, rivaling Mart Cleary's Devilbiss, Nill, Speedy Weberus and Dornick combination, one of the best semi-pro infields in the country.

Bill Hillinger is taking no chances and is sending in his best to play the invaders. Another attraction will be the popular prices that have made such a hit with the fans this season. Game called promptly at 3 o'clock.

The lineups of the two teams are as follows:

ONE OF THESE STARS IS ALMOST SURE TO WIN 1916 ALL-COMERS' TENNIS CHAMPIONSHIP.

(By Harold Johnson.)

Can the Comet come back?

Tennis devotees are pondering this question on the eve of the all-comers' championship at Forest Hills, N. Y., starting Aug. 28.

With William M. Johnston, present title holder, and two former champs, Maurice E. McLoughlin and Richard Norris Williams, in fine physical trim students of the courts game are stumped in their efforts to predict the 1916 national master of play.

Wherever the net game thrives the impression prevails that a three-cornered battle royal is certain to follow in the big tourney which will bring together all the leading racquet wielders in the United States. Maybe the aggressive Karl Behr or the sensational George Church may come through—other enthusiasts argue.

In grappling the dope on McLoughlin the wiseacres are stymied by a colossal if. The Comet, if in shape, they contend, will give both Johnston and Williams a tough battle. This anxiety about the Californian's condition dates back to last year in the finals for the national title when young Johnston outlasted the conquerer of Wilding, who finished the match on sheer pluck.

McLoughlin simply burned himself up the previous year in defense of the Davis cup.

Johnston stands a great chance of pulling through with another victory. This slim, boyish looking Californian has a wonderful assortment of strokes, particularly a forearm drive and half volley, knows how to play his opponent and never is flustered. His game this season has been up to his standard of 1915.

Williams, champion of 1914, who learned his tennis in England, is one player without a weak stroke. No one can approach his back court attack and his service goes over with a sizzling display of pep. His second ball is always as speedy as his first.

However, Williams with all his playing skill is erratic, a weakness that makes his supporters hesitate about picking him as the next title holder.

SAYS WHITE WILL WIN.

Denver, Col., Aug. 19.—"If Freddie Welsh stays ten rounds he will get the worst lacing he ever got in his life for the next ten from Charley White," declared Nate Lewis, White's manager, Friday. Lewis thus takes exception to the general opinion among fight fans that if his man can win from the champion on Labor day at Colorado Springs, he will have to do it with a knockout.

"If the fight goes to a finish," added Lewis, "Welsh will finish so nearly out that there will be no argument as to who is the winner."

Welsh is a 6 to 5 favorite in the betting and there has been one wager of $60 to $20 that White will knock out Welsh.

AMERICAN PENNANT DRIVE CLOSING UP

New York, Aug. 19.—With their drive toward the American league pennant only started on the home grounds, the Boston Red Sox hooked up with the White Sox again Friday after falling Thursday before the bats of the Chicago crowd, who pounded Carl Mays for seven runs in four and a third innings, and won the third game of the series with the leaders. At the same time in New York, Cleveland was losing to the Yankees, and in Washington Detroit hammered the Senators for a double victory.

Cleveland's loss while Boston also was dropping a game did not lengthen the distance between the two leading clubs and they go back against the same clubs this afternoon with their status unchanged. Three games now separate them.

The remarkable teamplay of the Red Sox, coupled with the long experience under fire of every one of its players, is playing an important part in Boston's fight. Also Carrigan's pitching staff seems to have rounded into shape, and when those hurlers are going right there is little chance to beat them.

Cleveland probably will have the services of Chick Gandil, first baseman, and Bobby Roth, outfielder, again within a few days. Manager Lee Fohl said yesterday. Gandil has been out with a pair of bruised toes and Roth is under suspension. The loss of these two players is noticeable in the work of the Indians. Roth's long drives have been sorely missed and while Ivan Howard has been doing well at first, Manager Fohl declares the machine has been broken and will not be working right again until Gandil is in his accustomed place.

Get-Away Card at Columbus is Tamest of the Week's Racing.

Columbus, O., Aug. 19.—Withdrawals took half the scheduled events of Friday's Grand circuit racing card and the get-away program was limited to the 2:18 pace, won by Miss Rejected in straight heats, and the 2:15 trot that Lindsey won in a five heat contest with Baby Doll. Charles Valentine was the driver of both original favorites.

Linsey, the winner, was the second choice and the only victor of the week for the McDonald stable. Judges unseated Driver Durfee and put Baby Doll in charge of Valentine in the fifth heat. She made the pace for more than half the distance, but tired early in the final quarter. Summaries:

One Minute Talks with Ballplayers

GEORGE DAUSS, DETROIT TIGERS:

"Catchers are often put on the pan for mistakes which cost their teams ball games but there are times when these mistakes are unavoidable. 'Red' McKee, of the Detroit club, made such a mistake recently and the slip-up let Cleveland win.

"Chapman was on first base, one out and Smith at bat at the time. Chapman made a bluff to steal and McKee tore off his mask to see better where he was throwing. In doing so he hit one eye with the mask and temporarily blinded himself.

"[illegible] made a perfect peg, had anyone been [illegible] there. As it was, [illegible] the ball sailed out to center field."

RAY CALDWELL, NEW YORK YANKEES:

"Ordinarily the steamy day is the day for the ball player. When a pitcher begins to grow old he needs the hot weather to get the old soup bone in shape. A young pitcher can get in there every day and get up speed but the veteran can't do it any more. I don't mind the hot weather if it isn't too hot. Sometimes in St. Louis the climate makes you wilt.

"Whom do I consider the most dangerous batter I face year in and year out? I'd pick Bobby Veach, of the Tigers. He always seems to have something on the ball. Ralph Pratt, Yale and Penn star, also Tigers."

RELIGION, TEMPERANCE AND HEALTH

Reduce Diet and Avoid All Heat-Making Foods

Fifth in List of Noted American Health Experts Tells How to Keep Well in Summer.

(United States government figures show disease steals $360,000,000 from the pay envelope of the nation's workers each year. You can help reduce this great theft by following simple rules of health. This is the fifth of five articles written by five of the country's highest health authorities, supplying these simple rules.—Editor.)

overeating or undereating, and from a scientific point of view, are willing to follow the best possible advice obtainable.

The purpose of a select diet during the hot season is to invigorate the individual, to make him abstain from excesses, and particularly to increase the individual resistance to disease.

The first self-evident truth is: The amount of food during the summer months ought to be reduced. This is particularly applicable to albuminoid and carbohydrate foods.

If you eat meat, fish, eggs, etc., begin by REDUCING them for dinner, and leave them out entirely for breakfast and luncheon. These are BODY BUILDING FOODS, but during the summer months there are better ones for that purpose.

Potatoes, sugars, cereals, etc.—HEAT PRODUCING FOODS—are not as necessary during hot weather as during winter. Use sparingly of these foods as well.

The second self-evident truth is: Food during the hot season must be fresh. Preserved or canned food should be reduced to a minimum. Summer is the only season when rich and poor alike have access to fresh milk and milk products, vegetables and fruits. These should be the principal summer foods.

Vegetables, if grown in infected soil, may serve as carriers for typhoid fever germs if not properly washed, and these germs may endure for thirty days under favorable conditions. It is obvious, then, that the greatest care should be taken in the treatment of soils used for production of such foods. Thorough cleansing by the housewife of all uncooked foods used on the table is necessary.

Any person handling these foods either as producer, distributer or preparer, who has ever had typhoid fever, should by a medical examination determine whether or not he is a carrier of this or other communicable disease.

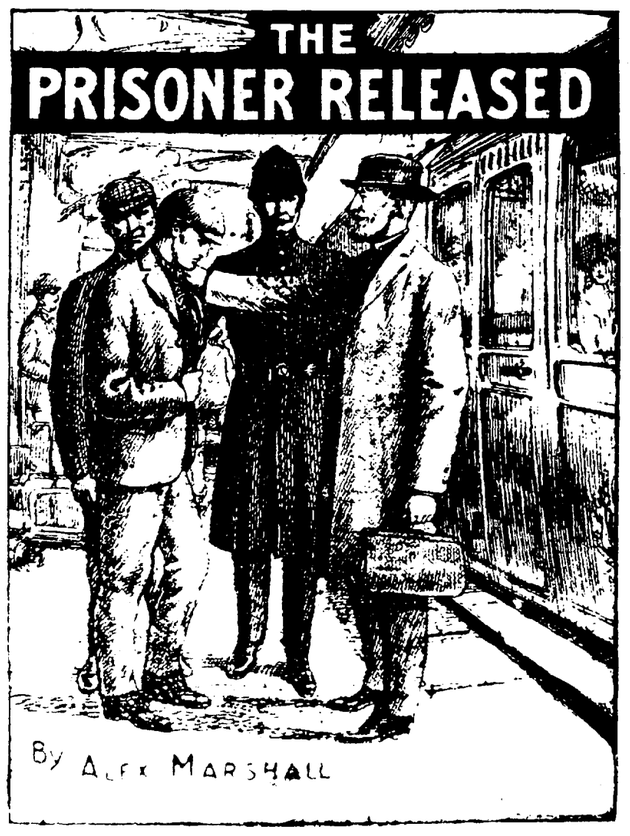
Milk, one of our very best foods, especially in summer requires close scrutiny, and assurance that the manner of handling it has been carried out according to up-to-date methods.

Drink more good, wholesome milk and pure water, with less of the so-called "soft drinks" on the market today.

Careful attention should be give to your diet on summer vacations or picnics. Many an illness can be traced to carelessness in food or drink on these trips.

do not agree on one ideal, infallible diet convenient for all alike.

It is possible, however, to select a diet which will keep in physiologic equilibrium, during the trying summer months, the great majority of people who are willing to avoid the mistakes of



Mr. J. E. Taylor, a well known evangelist, whilst journeying homeward by train became deeply interested in two young men in the carriage who were being taken to Aylesbury prison in charge of a policeman. The younger man, whose name was Saunders, had been sentenced to four weeks' imprisonment for stealing apples, with the alternative of a fine of £1 18s. 4d. Mr. Taylor spoke kindly to the prisoners, who felt keenly their position. On arriving at Aylesbury station the evangelist asked Saunders if he would like to be liberated. "I cannot pay the fine; I have not even fourpence in the world, and I don't know any one that would lend it or get it for me," was his sad reply. "I did not ask that," said Mr. Taylor: "I asked you if you would like to be set free?" "I don't know anyone that I could get the money from, and I have not a friend in the world," replied the prisoner. "That was not what I asked," continued the evangelist; "I asked you if you would like to be free?" Bursting into tears the young man exclaimed, "I would, sir." "Very well, then," said Mr. Taylor, "I will be at the prison within half an hour and have you liberated." The policeman, who was listening to the conversation, seemed sceptical about an entire stranger paying a prisoner's fine, and remarked, "I have often heard of such a thing, but never saw it done."

Meantime Mr. Taylor went home, and shortly afterwards returning with the money went to the prison and asked to see the governor. On his appearance Mr. Taylor said that he wished to see the prisoner Saunders. The governor replied that he could not be seen by a stranger. "I am particularly desirous of seeing him." "No prisoner is allowed to be visited who is only here a month." "But I have come to liberate him." "Then you must pay the fine," said the representative of law. The fine being paid, an officer was despatched to the cell, and on the prisoner appearing the governor said to him, "Walk out; you are free." There was no mistaking the gratitude that Saunders felt toward his liberator. He gave expression to it by laughing and crying and jumping for joy. Seeing a group of persons outside the prison gate, he said to them: "I was sent to prison for four weeks, and could not pay the fine, but this gentleman, whom I never saw before, paid it, and I am free." This incident is a striking illustration of man's state as a sinner, and of God's provision to meet his need. Scripture reveals the fact that we are sinners by nature and practice. "There is none righteous, no, not one." (Rom. 3, 10.) "There is not a just man upon the earth that doeth good, and sinneth not." (Eccles. 7, 20.) Granted at once that some are greater sinners than others. In God's reckoning there are fifty pence debtors, five hundred pence debtors and ten thousand talent debtors. Yet all of us were in the same predicament—we were debtors who had nothing to pay. What, then, is to become of us? There is no use imitating one of old who said to his creditors, "Lord, have patience with me, and I will pay thee all." (Matt. 18, 26.) We cannot pay a farthing of our indebtedness to God; and, besides, future good conduct cannot blot out the past. God's Holy Word declares that "Whosoever shall keep the whole law, and yet offend in one point, he is guilty of all." (James 2, 10.) Many are endeavoring to "turn over new leaves" on the page of their life's history, forgetting or ignoring the fact that it is too late in the day to talk in that way. Everyone of us has been found guilty. (Rom. 3, 19.) and "God requireth that which is past." (Eccles. 3, 15.) Must we, then, receive the wages of sin, which is eternal separation from God in conscious punishment? Thank God, there is no need that anyone should do so, for He has "devised means whereby His banished be not expelled from Him." (2 Sam. 14, 14.) What, then, are the "means" by which a holy and righteous God can justify the ungodly? "Deliver him (the sinner) from going down to the pit; I have found a ransom," (Job 33, 24,) is the message from the throne of the Eternal. What was the ransom of God's provision? "There is one God and one Mediator between God and men, the Man Christ Jesus, who gave Himself a ransom for all." (1 Tim. 2, 4, 6.) Because of what the Lord Jesus did and suffered for us, God can righteously bestow a free and full salvation upon everyone who believes the gospel of His grace.

Saunders was not afraid of spending his term of imprisonment in Aylesbury jail when he knew that his fine was paid by Mr. Taylor. Knowing that the claims of justice had been met, he rejoiced in the liberty that was his. The believer is not afraid of spending eternity in the abyss of woe. The language of his heart is expressed in the familiar lines:

"I want no other argument,
I seek no other plea;
It is enough that Jesus died,
And that He died for me."

If I were called at this moment into God's holy presence, and were asked what reason I could give why I should not be punished for my innumerable sins, the only answer that I could give would be the fact that Christ paid my ransom with His precious blood. God is satisfied with the ransom of His own provision, and I am satisfied with that which satisfies Him.

One remarkable fact regarding the prisoner Saunders is worth mentioning. When he was locked up in the cell he said to the jailer, "You won't have me long here; I shall very soon be off your hands. In half an hour the gentleman will be here to pay the fine, and I will be free." "Will you be free?" queried the jailer; "we shall take care of you for twenty-eight days." Saunders' faith that Mr. Taylor would pay his fine made him happy. Knowing that the Lord Jesus paid his ransom with His precious blood makes the believer rejoice with joy unspeakable. Sinners are not saved through faith in a work to be done by Christ, but through faith in a work already accomplished by Him. The gospel is "good news" regarding Christ's glorious atoning sacrifice. It makes known the blessed fact that "Christ died for our sins, * * * was buried and rose again." (1 Cor. 15, 1-4.) This was the gospel which the apostle Paul proclaimed to Corinthian sinners, by believing which they were saved and justified. Why not now believe "the glad and glorious gospel," which is God's power to the salvation of all who believe it? (Rom. 1, 16.)

On learning that his fine was paid by Mr. Taylor Saunders abundantly expressed his gratitude to his deliverer. Why not now do the same to the Lord Jesus Christ, who at an infinite cost paid the ransom for your deliverance? Don't try to forget your accountability to God. Whether you desire it or not there is a day of reckoning. "It is appointed unto men once to die, but after this the judgment." (Heb. 9, 27.) The ground of a sinner's condemnation is the fact that he does not believe on the Lord Jesus Christ. (John 3, 18.) May you now be enabled to say from your heart, "Thanks be unto God for His unspeakable gift!" When you do so you will be able to join in the grand old lines:

"I do believe it! I do believe it!
I am saved through the Blood of the Lamb;
My happy soul is free, for the Lord has pardoned me.

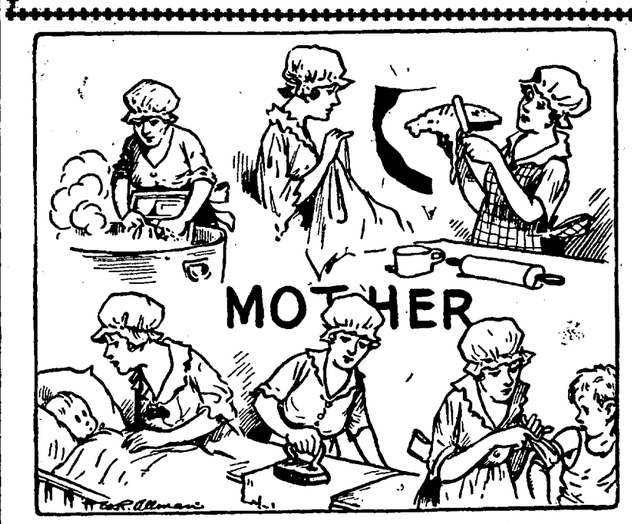
"TRAINED WOMEN."



A club of college women recently established a "bureau of occupations for trained women," meaning a place where college grads could apply for work.

Are we not getting a bit careless in the way we use the words "trained women?" We speak of trained nurses, trained office girls, trained maids as if the rest of our women folks were not of much consequence. We laud the women who train in khaki uniforms.

By all this are we not implying that the untrained woman is a very inferior person?

Now the best trained woman we ever saw was Mother. We used to think that she could do more kinds of things and do them better than any other woman on earth.

But she said Grandmother had her beaten. You could hardly count Grandmother's daily occupations, but she was an expert at them all, as well as at endless small jobs such as smoking bacon, making the boys' shirts with lots of fine pleats in the bosoms, by lamplight, and going to take care of the neighbor woman when the stork came too soon, and the doctor was fifteen miles away, in a time minus telephones and autos. She could quote the classics and teach school to support the small fry while Grandmother and the big boys fought the battles of the civil war.

That was some real training for preparedness!

And then there's our own Little Wife. You just ought to count——

But probably you have a Little Wife of your own. So just check off her claims as a "trained woman."

Life today is about as much of a strain on a woman as was the life of pioneer times. Little Wife doesn't have to "run her own candles," but you'll probably notice that her general training is pretty nearly as strenuous as that of Mother and Grandmother, and quite as valuable an asset as the culture of the modern woman having a special education in one line.

An Allowance for the Husband.

(BY THOMAS L. MASSON.)

Considering the importance of the object to be gained, it seems singular that there has been no general agitation in favor of permitting wives, not only to keep all the household accounts, but to take charge of the entire income and place the husband on an allowance. The objections to this are entirely superficial and not grounded deeply in human experience. It is, in the first place, assumed that because the husband earns the money he is entitled to control it. This would, or might be so if he likewise controlled all of the expenditures. But the reverse of this is true. In every normal family, the husband actually spends very little. Most of this is comprehended under the titles of transportation, lunches and clothes. Most of his recreations, if he is a proper husband and father, are spent with his family.

There is—by some we may admit considered unfortunately—no way in which the husband can buy all the things. This is of necessity a function that must be performed by the wife. As a matter of business, therefore, she should also control the income. The husband should be the consulting partner.

It may be contended that this is derogatory to a man's dignity. Why? On the contrary it is a distinctly undignified proceedings for a man to place his partner in a false position. It may also be argued that women are not competent to control the income. That is pure nonsense. Some women are not competent, just as some men are not. If a woman is not competent, be sure that making her responsible for nine-tenths of all of a household expenditure and then putting her on an allowance, will not tend to make her any more competent. And how about a woman's dignity?

Putting a husband on an allowance sounds rather strange, but that is only because we are not used to it. Besides, it must be remembered that the husband himself would naturally have something to say about the amount. It would be merely an affair not necessarily of arbitration but of sympathetic agreement. There is always a danger of money being considered over important. Its function is purely automatic. It should never obtrude itself. When its automatic action is properly controlled by the only one who can control it properly, then it will not be a source of contention and family embarrassment. —Physical Culture.

"I Have Missed It."

A friend of mine was preaching in a town in New Jersey, and there was a young fellow there, cashier in a bank, whom they tried to get to give his heart to God. He made the excuse that he had to go to New York.

It was in 1888, when they had that famous snowstorm, snow twelve feet deep. He had no other excuse to go than to get away from the meeting.

He was hours and hours floundering his way through the slush and the snow to his armpits to reach his hotel, and when he arrived at the old Astor House, down on Broadway, he was wet and chilled and he could hardly stand.

They summoned a physician. One glance and he said to him: "Have you a mother alive?"

"Yes, sir."

"Wife alive?"

"Yes."

"Where do they live?"

"In—New Jersey."

"I'll send for them."

He looked at the doctor and said: "My God, you don't think it's that bad?"

"Yes, it's bad. Get them here quickly. It's pneumonia. I don't think I can help you."

He turned his face to the wall and said: "I have missed it. I have missed it. I have missed it."

The doctor said: "What do you mean?"

He said: "I had nothing to bring me here. I merely did it to get away from the meeting, and judgment followed me."

His wife and his mother hurried to his bedside, and as they entered the room he faintly whispered, "I have missed it."

They begged, they pleaded, they prayed, and after every entreaty he would respond faintly, "I have missed it." The lamp of life flickered, and as it went out, the last words that fell from his lips were, "I have missed it; I have—" and he gasped and was no more.

It is not necessary to commit some great sin to be lost; just neglect it. Let the merchant neglect his business and he is bankrupt. Let the one who is sick neglect to send for a physician and he will die.—William A. Sunday.

EIGHT LESSONS FROM THE BEE.

1. Bees are early risers.
2. They delight in fresh air.
3. They teach us to be industrious. No bee ever shirks his work.
4. They teach us to be clean. Nothing can be cleaner than the home of the bee.
5. They are very peaceful, and seldom quarrel or fight among themselves.
6. They teach us to be fond of our homes. No bee leaves his home except for a time, if he can help it.
7. They show much sympathy or kind fellow-feeling for each other in distress and will never leave a friend in trouble without trying to help him.

ONLY FOOLS ARE UNAFRAID.

An advertisement of whisky in a New York paper says: "Total abstinence is a form of fear, and fear is the cause of failure."

The New York Tribune suggests that this might be carried a step or two further and applied to smoking opium, snuffing cocaine, looking down the muzzle of a loaded gun, etc.

One of Richard Harding Davis' novel heroes sneers at an experienced old filibuster because he flinches before a leveled revolver.

"Son," said the old man, "when you have smelled as much powder as I have you will have sense enough to be afraid of a gun, too."

Two Young Men

One day recently a young man was recommended by a friend for a position that offered much for the future.

He looked good for that particular job and both his friend and his new employer were glad.

Two weeks later he was summarily sent to the office to get his money. He was fired.

He couldn't put through a morning without slipping out behind the factory to smoke cigarettes and he was caught at it.

Another young man was recommended by the same man for another job.

It was in the office of a large corporation. The man was more cautious this time about making the recommendation too strong.

This young man had only been at work one week when the office manager called up the man who had recommended him and said:

"If you have any more men like the one you sent me, I want them. He is clean cut, attends strictly to business and is WHOLLY DEPENDABLE."

The employing agent at a local automobile factory said the other day that he passes by the applicants with the tell-tale yellow stains on their fingers.

All along the line, business is looking for DEPENDABLE YOUNG MEN today.

The cigarette smoker is not included in the dependable class.

Family Worship —An Incident

Ten years ago I boarded in the family of a pious woman whose husband was not a Christian. There was a daughter of 19, another of 14 and a son of 10. Every morning I heard that humble woman gather her family in the kitchen and read with them a chapter, verse about, in the Bible. Then, as I could not help listening, there was a peculiarity of service that mystified me.

At last I asked one day if I might remain. She hesitated; her daughter blushed, but she said I could do so if I really desired it. So I sat down with the rest. They gave me a Testament, and we read a verse in turn. Then kneeling on the floor, that mother began her prayer audibly, for her dear ones there, her husband and herself; and then pausing a moment, as if to gather energy or wing her faith, uttered a tender, affectionate supplication for me.

She closed and her daughter began to pray. Poor girl; she was afraid of me. I was from college; I was her teacher; but she tremulously asked for a blessing as usual. Then came the other daughter, and at last the son, the youngest of that circle, who only repeated the Lord's prayer, with one petition of his own.

His "Amen" was said, but no one arose. I knew on the instant they were waiting for me. And I, poor prayerless I, had no word to say. It almost broke my heart. I hurried from the room, desolate and guilty.

A few weeks only passed, when I asked their permission to come in once more, and then I prayed, too, and thanked my dear, patient Savior for the hope in my heart and the new song on my lips.—Selected.

HE HAS PROMISED.

Do you believe you are a lost sinner?

Do you believe you cannot save yourself?

Do you believe Jesus Christ can save you?

If these questions are answered affirmatively, very well, then give yourself to Christ, just as you are, and believe that he will receive you and save you, because he has promised to do it.

Federal Law's Effect on State Liquor Laws.

(By Herbert Quick.)

Somehow I hate to be found agreeing with Cyclone Davis, of Texas. I am, however, willing to be with him when he is right.

Davis has introduced a bill to prohibit the United States commissioner of internal revenue from issuing liquor licenses to bootleggers, blind pig keepers and other violators of the liquor laws.

Why should the United States government issue liquor licenses authorizing people to sell whisky in Kansas or Maine or West Virginia?

Everybody concerned knows that these licenses cannot be used except for criminal purposes.

Everybody knows that in taking these license fees the United States government is taking a bribe not to interfere with the violation of state laws.

It becomes an accomplice in the local crimes.

It sells its favor to law breakers.

It does what it would put an individual in jail for.

It compounds felony.

Let us suppose that the government collected a tax on revolvers when carried by private individuals, as it might easily decide some time to do. It would have revenue officers out all over the country to arrest and punish violators of the gun-license law. Suppose that the city of New York, suffering from the murderous activities of its organized gunmen, should pass a law absolutely prohibiting the carrying of revolvers—and that other states were to do the same thing, as they have.

The gunmen would not like to violate the federal revolver license law, any more than they do the federal liquor license law. Being a gunman in violation of state laws is a precarious business—as it should be.

Being a rum seller in violation of state law is precarious and risky—as it should be.

Would it be right, would it even be decent, would it comport with the duty of our government to its people, for the United States government to continue to sell gun licenses in anti-gun-toting states?

"We have the police force with which we might help the states to enforce this law which you desire to violate," says the United States. "Pay us money and we won't help the states!"

Whatever may be one's views on prohibition, no candid mind can deny that this policy is unspeakably shameful!

THE BIBLE.

The Bible is the begetter of life: the uprooter of sin; the revealer of God; the guide of history; the fashioner of law; the friend of science; the comfort in sorrow; the foe to superstition; the text-book of ethics; the star of death's night; the light of the intellect; the enemy of oppression; the strength in weakness; the promise of the future; the pathway in perplexity; the illuminator of darkness; the escape from temptation; the forerunner of civilization; the charter of all true liberty; the inspiration of philosophies, the secret of national progress, the soul of all strong heart life; the steadier in the day of power, the embodiment of all lofty ideals; the guide and hope and inspiration of man; the ornament and mainspring of literature; the molder of institutions and governments; the regulator of all high and worthy standards; the answer to the deepest human heart hungerings.—Bishop William F. Anderson.

LOOK TWICE.

Impulses are immensely valuable assets—some of them. But we can afford to hold them in abeyance long enough to look twice at them. A good impulse will bear looking at twice, and will not suffer seriously by the delay of a few seconds. A bad impulse, on the other hand, needs, ordinarily, only a second look to decrare itself unworthy of being indulged. Our trouble is that we are apt to treat all impulses (except, perhaps, certain religious ones) as worthy of prompt obedience. At least we are quick to obey the impulse to speak harshly, to pass ungenerous judgment, to "get even," as we say. We are apt to honor such impulses almost before they are born. Most of them have no right to be honored thus; and comparatively few of them would be, if we looked at them twice. He must be a pretty mean man who can calmly look a mean impulse in the face and not be ashamed of it.—George Clarke Peck.

Meet Me in Heaven

(Rev. Joseph Wardle, Eighty-two years young.)

I am so glad that I am growing old. I was eighty-two years old May 1, 1916. Each day brings me nearer heaven, and I have blessings now that I never enjoyed before.

After I had prayed at "Billy" Sunday's meeting at Philadelphia, an old soldier rushed up to me and said:

"I must shake hands with you. It is the greatest sermon I ever heard."

"Yes, 'Billy' Sunday preached a great sermon," I replied.

"But it was not what 'Billy' Sunday preached, but what you said in prayer, 'I am so glad I'm growing old,' that struck me. I am now a changed man. Hallelujah!"

The old soldier had shaken hands with God.

I envy no young man. I have safely passed precipices where thousands have fallen over. I do not want to try life over.

I graduated at Garrett Biblical institute in 1861 with Bishop Fowler and Dr. Chadwick.

Oliver, Frances Willard's brother, called on me at college and called me a walking ghost and said I would not live five years, and then would be in heaven.

"I have always greeted the inevitable with joy and am ready for old age and death," I said. "There is a crown on every cross, a sunrise in every tomb, and I hear marriage bells when death invites to God's palace."

I am not rich, but am sending treasures each day and asking everybody to meet me in heaven.

Presidents Grant, Harrison, Cleveland, McKinley, Roosevelt, Taft and Wilson have answered "Yes" to my question, "Will you meet me in heaven?" Many of my darlings are in heaven and I am looking daily over the Lamb's Book of Life and see there recorded these promises and rejoice. Yonder hosts are calling, loved ones beckoning, God and His Son welcome to eternal sunshine, cross, glory and reunions. Meet me there. Yours for heaven. Pray for me.

Keynote Address of Hon. John A. M. Adair Democratic Nominee for Governor of Indiana

The keynote address of Hon. John A. M. Adair, democratic nominee for governor of Indiana, delivered at Robison park Saturday afternoon, was as follows:

"I am not vain enough to believe this tremendous outpouring of the people of this beautiful, progressive and prosperous city of Fort Wayne, together with the multitude who are here from all parts of the Twelfth congressional district, is due to my presence, or that you came for the sole purpose of hearing me deliver the keynote speech of the coming campaign. On the contrary, I know your attendance here today is due to your deep appreciation of the manifold blessings you now enjoy under democratic rule and your willingness to contribute what you may toward the success of the democratic party, to the end that America may remain at peace with all the world and that prosperity may continue from one end of the country to the other.

Success Already Assured.

"My friends, the success of the democratic party is already assured. Our party has been tried under the most unfavorable conditions and has made good both in state and nation. There can be no question about the result in November. I predict now, when the campaign is over and the ballots are counted, Woodrow Wilson and Thomas R. Marshall will be re-elected by the largest popular vote ever given candidates for president and vice president in the history of this republic; John W. Kern and Thomas Taggart will be returned to the senate of the United States; all of our splendid state officials will be re-elected to their present positions, and if you want to see me during the next four years come to the governor's office of Indiana.

"The capacity and the ability of the democratic party to legislate for the people, both in state and nation, has been clearly demonstrated during the past four years. We have merited an endorsement by the people and that endorsement will be freely given at the ballot box next November. If there ever was a doubt of our success, that doubt was removed by the action of the republican national convention held in Chicago a few weeks ago. It was a humiliating spectacle to see the party of Lincoln, unable to point with pride or view with alarm. The marvelous achievements of the Wilson administration having left the republican party without a single issue upon which to wage a successful campaign, that party in its dire distress found it necessary to lay aside its patriotism and its Americanism, while it sought to make an issue out of the foreign relations of the government—an act which will be resented and repudiated by all loyal, patriotic citizens regardless of party.

Contrast at St. Louis.

"How different were the conditions confronting the democratic convention held in St. Louis. What a pleasure it was for our party to point with pride to the constructive legislation in the interest of the American people, passed by the Wilson administration; legislation that the republican party did not dare mention, let alone criticise. What a pleasure it was for our party to point to the fact that peace, plenty, happiness and prosperity prevails from one end of the country to the other and what a genuine pleasure it was for our party to nominate for our standard bearers in the coming campaign the men who made these blessings possible—Woodrow Wilson and Thomas R. Marshall.

Means Much to People.

"My friends, the coming campaign means more to the American people than any contest in which we have entered in a quarter of a century. Our rights, liberties and opportunities are at stake. We must determine at the ballot box in November whether the people are to continue to rule or whether we are to go back to the day of special privileges and be led and controlled by those who look upon government as the means of securing special privileges which will enable them to build up colossal fortunes, wrongfully taken from the people. We must decide in November whether we will go back to the republican panics of 1873, 1893 and 1907, when factories were closed, workingmen were idle and business was paralyzed, or whether we will continue to enjoy, under Woodrow Wilson, the greatest degree of prosperity our nation has ever known. Let us not under-estimate the strength of our opposition. The republican party has within its ranks the multi-millionaires of the country and the special privilege class, who will place at the command of that party powerful trust-owned newspapers and funds without limit, to carry on a campaign for a return of the special privileges they once enjoyed under republican rule. My friends, it is the duty we owe to ourselves, yes, a duty we owe to our state and our nation to put forth every possible effort to bring about the re-election of Woodrow Wilson, to the end that peace and prosperity may continue, the rights of the American people may be protected, both upon land and sea, and that this government may remain what our party has made it—a government by and for the people.

Democracy Meets Responsibility.

"Our party came into power less than four years ago confronted by the greatest responsibilities ever faced by any party in the history of the republic. We have met these responsibilities and solved the difficult problems in a way that has won the admiration of all those who place the welfare of the country above and beyond party success. No man can offer a plausible or sensible reason why our party should not be continued in power both in state and nation. The most remarkable thing in connection with state and national politics is the fact that neither of the keynote speakers of the republican state convention or the republican national convention offered any criticism of the constructive legislation passed by our party either in state or nation—legislation under which we are more prosperous than ever before, and legislation no party would dare repeal.

State Administration.

Every citizen of Indiana, regardless of party, has words of praise for Governor Ralston, for all of our splendid state officials and for the excellent legislation placed upon our statute books by the democratic party. No party would dare propose a repeal of the many constructive measures passed by the democratic legislatures of 1913 and 1915. We have given to the state a public service commission law, which protects the people from the greed and selfishness of mankind—a constructive measure of far-reaching importance. Already under this law several hundred thousand dollars have been saved to the people of the state. We have enacted a vocational education law which is of inestimable value to the boys and girls of Indiana, and is conceded to be one of the most important pieces of legislation passed in the history of the state. We have enacted a workman's compensation law, which is working a great benefit to both employer and employe. Up to this time under this law nearly 5,000 cases have been settled and injured employes are now drawing over $8,000 per week. Working people could not secure this legislation under republican rule and they are not now going to give that party a chance to repeal the law. We have given you a fire marshal law, which no party would dare to repeal—a law under which the number of fires have been reduced throughout the state and the rates of insurance lowered. We have given you a public printing law, which saves annually for the state many thousands of dollars. We have given you a child labor law for the protection of the children of the state; a bureau of inspection law, for the inspection of buildings, factories, mines, etc., for the safety of employes; an inheritance tax law; a registration law; an arbitration law and many other constructive measures, all of which are approved by the people regardless of party; and as a matter of course everybody is pleased over the payment of the state debt, incurred by a republican administration and paid off by a democratic administration under Governor Ralston. The first time in eighty-four long years Indiana has been entirely out of debt and this was accomplished without raising the state tax levy for general purposes. The work of Governor Ralston and all of our state officials has been so good, so wholesome and so far above criticism, that there will be no issues so far as state affairs are concerned. Why should any one, except a republican officeseeker, want a change of administration in Indiana? The fact is, the entire citizenship of Indiana has confidence in the democratic party and that confidence will ripen and grow as our party continues to give the people good, wholesome and progressive legislation.

National Administration.

"We are not only proud of our state administration, but we are likewise proud of the work of our national administration. Woodrow Wilson will go down in history as one of the greatest of presidents. During his administration more constructive legislation in the interest of the American people has been enacted into law than in any other like period in the history of the nation. How thankful we should be that during this period of world-wide war and destruction of life and property we had at the head of this government a man who has kept the rudder true in the perils of a stormy sea. In the midst of universal war he has kept America at peace with all the world. In the midst of universal confusion his brain has been clear, his nerve steady, his heart unshaken from its faith in humanity. Other nations have their heroes of death and destruction; our hero of life and construction is Woodrow Wilson. He has labored to preserve and build up, while others have fought to tear down and destroy. He has striven for peace, but refused to purchase peace at the price of injustice or dishonor. The hope of the world, the hope or democracy, the hope of liberty everywhere, is resting upon America and under Woodrow Wilson this hope will be realized.

Cannonism Destroyed.

"My friends, let me briefly call your attention to conditions as we found them after 16 years of republican rule and the remedies we applied. When we came into power, the House was under the complete control of Cannonism—a vicious system under which no legislation could be considered or voted upon unless the speaker was willing—a one-man power subservient to the dictation of Wall street. Over in the senate we found 38 millionaires and a large number of near millionaires led by an eastern senator who represented the special-privilege class in the United States senate for thirty years. Both branches of government were absolutely controlled by predatory wealth and the beneficiaries of the system were dictating and controlling the legislation of the country. The overthrow of the republican party and the restoration to power of the democratic party has resulted in a complete reformation both in the house and the senate. Now these bodies are made up of men whose hearts beat in unison with the plain people. Cannonism and Aldrichism have been destroyed and both branches of the government are now responsive to the people's will.

Election of Senators.

"For fourteen years under republican rule the people had insisted upon the right to vote direct for United States senators, but the party in power has steadfastly refused their appeal. The rank and file of the republican party wanted this right the same as we democrats wanted it, but under republican control they could not obtain it. This was due to the fact that the wealth of the country had found shelter under the wings of the republican party, was dictating and controlling its policies, and, as these interests knew it was easier to purchase a seat in the senate of a legislature, than it was of all the people, they were opposed to electing senators in that way. The leaders of the republican party were under the complete control of these interests and therefore the people were denied the legislation they wanted. Just as soon as you gave the democratic party a chance to legislate we gave you the right to vote direct for your senators. By so doing we have made it impossible in the future for trusts and combinations to control legislation by purchasing seats in the senate of the United States for their direct representatives.

Income Tax.

"During the sixteen years of republican rule the people regardless of party, insisted upon the enactment of an income tax law that would equalize the burdens of taxations—that would compel the wealth of the country to contribute a fair proportion toward paying the running expenses of the government. This legislation was denied by the party in power and why? Why, because Wall street was opposed to it. The millionaires of the east were escaping taxation under the old republican system and as these gentlemen had been putting up the campaign funds to prepetuate the republican party in power, that party paid them back by shifting the burden of taxation on those least able to bear it. The democratic party said that wealth should bear its share of this burden and as soon as you gave us the power we gave you an income tax law that lifts a burden of over $100,000,000 annually off the shoulders of the average man and places it on the shoulders of those more able to bear it.

The Tariff.

"The republican party fastened on the people a system of tariff taxation which was a burden and an outrage. It enabled a favored few to accumulate tremendous fortunes off the sweat and toil of the plundered millions. Under this vicious system the wealth of the country drifted into the hands of a few men. It was alarming to know that 51 men owned 1-35 of all the wealth of the United States. The democratic party had denounced the system for years, but it was not until 1908 that the people awoke to the robbing that was going on. That year every party in existence declared in their platforms for a revision of the tariff downward. The republican party was successful at the polls, but instead of redeeming its pledge made to the people by revising the tariff downward it violated its promise by revising it upward, thereby adding to the burdens of the people instead of relieving them.

"Men of all parties were outraged by this willful violation of a sacred pledge and at the ballot box in 1910 the people answered President Taft and his party by changing a republican house of representatives with over a hundred republican majority into a democratic house with about 140 majority—the greatest change ever made at any election in the nation's history. Then two years later the republican party was driven from power in all branches of government because of its complete surrender to those who were enjoying a special privilege under the Payne-Aldrich tariff law. As soon as we were delegated with power, we proceeded at once to relieve the people of these high tariff burdens, by enacting the Underwood tariff law, which has been a success from every standpoint. Our republican friends have charged that our tariff law is a failure as a revenue producer, but this statement is not borne out by the facts. Statistics show that the Underwood law is a better revenue producer than the Payne-Aldrich law or the Dingley law, which preceded it. During the first year of its existence it produced more revenue than was needed to run the government and had it not been for the breaking out of the European war, which cut off imports, it would now be producing a surplus of revenue. From October 1, 1913, when the bill became a law, to August 1, 1914, when the European war broke out, it produced revenue amounting to $10,000,000 more than the Payne law produced for the ten months from October 1, 1912, to August 1, 1913. Or take the seven months from January 1, 1914, when all the rates became effective, to August 1, 1914, when the war broke out, it produced $17,000,000 more revenue than the Payne law produced the identical same seven months of the preceding year. Therefore the charge that it is not a revenue producer is absolutely false. Our republican friends also charged that if we revised the tariff downward we would close the mills and factories and throw millions of men out of employment. Their prediction has not come true and they knew it would not when they made it. On the contrary mills and factories are running everywhere, unable to get a sufficient number of men to make the goods demanded for home consumption and foreign trade. The first time in the nation's history there has been a shortage of men to meet the demand for labor. Men are employed everywhere at the highest wages and shortest hours ever received. More than 20,000,000 wage earners have had their wages increased during the past year and more than 5,000,000 workingmen have had their wages raised a second time during the past 120 days. Farmers are getting the highest prices for their products and are more prosperous than ever before. Banks are overflowing with money and our merchants are selling more goods and making more money than ever before. Railway earnings have increased over $60,000,000; the total wealth of the country increased 20 per cent.; our manufactured products have increased 40 per cent.; capital has increased 43 per cent.; wages have increased 54 per cent.; bank deposits have increased over $2,000,000,000 and the balance of trade last year in favor of the United States amounted to the enormous sum of $2,136,000,000. A great wave of prosperity is sweeping over the country from one end to the other, all of which is due to the wisdom of democratic legislation. Who is dissatisfied with this administration? Why should any one seek a change? The manufacturer is not dissatisfied, he is making more goods and more money than he ever made before; laboring men are not dissatisfied, they are receiving the highest wages and working the shortest hours; farmers are not dissatisfied, they are receiving the highest prices for their products they ever received; bankers are not dissatisfied, they have the largest deposits they ever had; merchants are not dissatisfied, they are selling more goods and making more money than ever before; who is dissatisfied? Nobody, except republican politicians who are out of office and want in. Yes, our republican friends admit that prosperity is here, but they say it is due to the war. The fact is, we have lost more business because of the war than we have gained by reason of the war. The International Harvester company and many other manufacturers have lost millions of dollars worth of business because of European conditions. Only 2 2-3 per cent. of all goods now being manufactured is war material and you can eliminate this entirely and still we are making more goods than was ever made before in the history of the country. You can eliminate all the wages being paid to labor for making war material and still we are paying more money to workingmen than was ever paid before. Instead of the European war being a benefit to business, it has been a handicap. Had it not been for the war, business would be still better. Again, our republican friends tell you that depression will follow when the war closes. They say Europe will dump a lot of cheap goods on us to the detriment of our manufacturers.

"The facts are we have successfully competed with Europe when she was at her best. For years we have been exporting about $3,000,000,000 worth of manufactured goods annually, going into all the markets of the world in direct competition with Europe. You can not travel anywhere on earth without coming in contact with American made goods. Go down in Egypt where they are building railroads and you will find the steel rails used were made in Pittsburg, Pa. Go down in the wheat fields of India and there you will find the American self-binder. Go into Europe anywhere and you will find the American made sewing machine, the American made watch, and every well dressed man and woman wears an American made shoe. Let us remember that 94 per cent of everything made in America is made for less money than in any other nation in the world. When Europe was the strongest we have been able to successfuly meet her in all the markets of the world. Now when the war is over and many of her factories are dismantled and destroyed; when 15,000,000 of her best men have been killed and wounded; when 5,000,000 women have been made widows; when 12,000,000 little children have been made homeless and fatherless; when a debt of $30,000,000,000 has been piled upon them for which they will be taxed to pay; when every doorstep in Europe has been covered with blood; when there is no one to compete with except old men and boys, then to say that we will be at their mercy is the plea of the demagogue, an insult to the intelligence of the American people. We now have the markets of the world and we will hold them when the war is over. No nation on earth can compete with us with or without a tariff. The Underwood law is not a free trade measure. It is a protective tariff measure as it now stands. You could go through it and lower the rate from 10 to 20 per cent on practically every item and still it would be a protective measure. It is without doubt the best tariff law ever enacted and no party will dare repeal it.

Non-Partisan Tariff Commission.

"For many years the people have been insisting on the passage of a law creating a non-partisan tariff commission. While the republican party pretended to favor such a law, yet during the sixteen years that party was in control of the government no non-partisan tariff commission was created. This was due to the fact that the beneficiaries of the high protective tariff system were against a tariff commission and this special privilege class controlled the leaders of the republican party. It remained for the democratic party to carry out the wishes of the people by giving them a non-partisan tariff commission. This commission will make investigations and report its findings to congress, so the rates in the Underwood bill can be changed from time to time to suit changed conditions. This legislation practically takes the tariff question out of politics and therefore our republican friends can not make the tariff an issue in the coming campaign. We have settled the tariff question to the satisfaction of all the people regardless of party, and have settled it the way the people wanted it settled.

Currency Reform.

"During the sixteen years of republican rule the people were insisting upon a change in our financial system that would protect them against the methods employed by Wall street gamblers and speculators, who were in control of the money of the country, and who had the power under the old system to bring on panics when it suited them to do so, to fix interest rates and practically control the price of farm and factory products. The republican party promised relief and expended almost one million dollars in making investigations, but gave the country no legislation. This was due to the fact that the old republican system suited the Wall street speculators, and as these gentlemen were in control of the leaders of the republican party, no legislation was enacted. Under the old system the reserves of the banks throughout the country found their way into the Wall street banks and in addition these banks had the deposits of government funds and these two deposits were the source of great profit. They enjoyed a special privilege under the old system which they did not want to give up, and they tried in every conceivable way to prevent the passage of the new currency law, but the democratic party, true to its pledge, proceeded at once to pass a currency law which protects the people against the greed and selfishness of Wall street, has forever made anics impossible and made ample provision for legitimate business to secure all the funds necessary to carry on business for the benefit of those engaged in it as well as for the people generally.

"Under the law Wall street can no longer control the money of the country, fix interest rates and depress the price of farm and factory products. Money panics in the future are impossible under this law. Without doubt the new currency law is the greatest piece of constructive legislation passed in a hundred years and if our party had done nothing else it would deserve to be continued in power by reason of the enactment of this law.

Labor Legislation.

"The just and fair recognition of the rights and demands of labor were completely ignored by the trust-controlled republican party during the sixteen years it held undisputed way. When I first went to congress ten years ago I saw piled upon the speaker's desk petitions said to have been signed by more than 1,000,000 workingmen, pleading and begging for legislation in the interest of those who earn their bread by the sweat of their faces, and session after session I saw these petitions presented only to go to the waste basket with no consideration given them. The party in power was so busy legislating for those who furnished the money to finance their campaigns that they had no time to consider anything in the interest of labor. Just as soon as you gave our party an opportunity we immediately took up and passed the legislation petitioned for by the workingmen of the country and gave to them all the legislation they had been trying to get for sixteen years under republican rule. In fact, the records show that our party has done more for labor, both in state and nation, during the past four years, than was done during the entire history of the republican party. Labor has been unshackled, the toiler no longer made a criminal because he dares protest against injustice—the workman no longer dragged to jail by the iron grip of injunction as a penalty for merely asking for the privilege of living and revolting against the persecution of oppression, the hunger of his home and the starvation of his children. Under democratic rule the rights of labor have been vitalized into law and no longer on the soil of free America is human labor to be treated as a mere commodity We have earned and deserved the support of every workingman in the country and I believe we will get it when the time comes to vote in November.

Pensions.

"The republican party has charged that if the democratic party came into power the old soldiers could not secure increase of pensions. For sixteen years while the republicans were in control the men who fought the battles of '61 to '65 tried in every possible way to secure justice, but failed. Just as soon as you gave us a democratic house we immediately reported out of the committee on invalid pensions, of which I was a member, and passed through the house the most liberal pension bill ever enacted into law in the history of the country. I had charge of the bill on the floor of the house and also served on the conference committee, which reported the bill as it was finally passed. It increased the pension roll $42,000,000 the first year. Following the passage of this law the national encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic, meeting in Los Angeles, California, passed a resolution thanking me for the service I rendered in securing that legislation, and by a vote of that great convention instructed the national commander, Mr. Beers, and the secretary to present a lithographed copy of the resolution to me, which they did at the door of the house of representatives. I speak of this not for the purpose of leading any soldier to believe he owes me anything for the service I rendered in his behalf, but for the purpose of showing that the charges made by our republican friends were false. Now we are increasing the pensions of soldiers' widows from $12 to $20 per month. The facts are, the democratic party has been the real friend of the soldiers. The republican party, in their national convention at Chicago, a few weeks ago, did not even mention the old soldier in the platform adopted at that convention and neither did Justice Hughes mention them in his speech of acceptance. Their love for the soldier is only noticeable on the day of election.

Clayton Anti-Trust Bill.

"During the administration of Theodore Roosevelt and William Howard Taft more than a thousand trusts were formed and all of these trusts were extorting from the American people. No effort was made by the republican party to protect the people against their operations, but as soon as you gave the democratic party a chance to legislate, we passed the Clayton anti-trust bill, which has given the people the relief to which they were entitled. It prevents the creation of illegal trusts, conspiracies and monopolies in their incipiency and before consummation.

"It makes unlawful all discrimination in prices for the purpose of wrongfully injuring or destroying the business of competition. It makes unlawful various monopoly-promoting contracts, holding companies and interlocking directorates. It removes labor from the commodity class and gives the American laboring man the greater measure of industrial freedom for which he has long strived. The republican party stood against this legislation and made every effort it could to prevent the democratic party from giving this relief to the people.

The Federal Trade Commission.

"The federal trade commission act was passed for the purpose of helping business both big and little. It is already rendering a valuable service. The purpose of this law is to bring quick relief against unfair practices, to protect the small business man and the small enterprise against the ruinous, cut-throat competition of the big fellow against the little fellow, and provide a convenient administrative agency to stop unfair practices and to advise business men, and to help them in legitimate enterprise as against predatory and vicious practices. This law is helping bring about the great prosperity we now enjoy and the republican party is on record as having opposed it.

Preparedness.

"Our republican friends were in control of the government for sixteen years and during all of this time made no provision for our national defense. Our army and navy grew weaker under both Roosevelt and Taft. Then as soon as Wilson become president, they began to complain because we were not prepared. If we were not prepared whose fault was it? Theodore Roosevelt has said that it will take ten years to build our army and navy sufficiently to protect us from foreign aggression. If this be true why did he not begin ten years ago while he was president? The fact is our national defense was criminally neglected under republican rule and the task of preparing America to meet aggression from any quarter was left to the democratic party. That task has been met to the satisfaction of the American people. We are building the army and the navy to a necessary strength to properly defend America. We have remedied the wrongs of republican administrations by rehabilitating our national defenses, but the democratic party will not listen to those who would convert this republic into a military camp or into military imperialism. The democratic party will see that America is prepared, but it will be an American preparedness, not European militarism. The question of preparedness, like all other great problems of government, was ignored and neglected by the republican party, but our party has met the responsibility fearlessly and successfully.

The American Farmer.

"The Wilson administration has been a godsend to the American farmer. Agriculture has not been overlooked in our legislative program. The Smith-Lever agricultural extension act, for the systematic promotion of agricultural development, providing demonstrators who go upon the farm teaching methods and farm economies, is proving a great benefit to agriculture. The rural credits law just passed will enable our farmers to borrow money on long time and at a low rate of interest. The new road law giving federal aid in building and maintaining roads means much to the farmer. The agricultural department under new legislation is doing splendid work in the interest of both production and distribution. I shall not take the time to enumerate all the legislation passed by the Wilson administration for the benefit of agriculture, but will content myself with the brief reference to the fact that as a result of this legislation farmers are more prosperous than ever before. We have built up both a home and a foreign market for farm products and I see that they are now quoted as follows: Wheat, $1.38 per bushel; oats, 38c per bushel; corn, 80c per bushel; hogs, 9 to 10c per pound; cattle, 10c per pound; $30@100 for milch cows; $8@10 for sheep; lambs, 9c per pound; calves, $18@23; wool, 40c per pound; butter, eggs and chickens, the highest they have ever been this time of the year, and everything else in proportion. Under such conditions no farmer in his right mind would want a change of administration.

Republicans Without an Issue.

"My friends, I shall not have the time to take up and discuss the many other constructive measures passed by the Wilson administration, but I think I have already gone far enough to convince any fair-minded man that the republican party will not have a single issue in the coming campaign. Let me ask my republican friends here and now what republican candidate for congress would dare stand here and say to you that if elected he would vote to repeal the income tax law? Would he dare say if elected he would vote to take away from you the right to vote direct for United States senators?

"Would he dare say to you that he would vote to repeal the new currency law? Would he dare tell you that he would vote to take away from labor the twenty-four bills we passed in their behalf? Would he dare say to the old soldier that he would vote to take away the increase of pension we gave him? Would he dare say to you that he would vote to re-enact the Payne-Aldrich tariff law? Why, certainly not. No candidate would dare to propose a repeal of this legislation and ask for the suffrage of the people. What on earth will they say? God only knows. They are without an issue and without a candidate who will appeal to the people.

Justice Hughes.

"The first statement made by Justice Hughes, following his nomination at Chicago, shows conclusively that he is not big enough and broad enough for the presidency. In less than three hours after his nomination he issued a statement in which he demonstrated clearly that he placed the success of his party above the welfare of his country. He laid aside his patriotism and Americanism while he found fault with Wilson's policy in Mexico. He offered no remedy or suggested no solution. He did not say that had he been president, he would have done different from what Wilson has done. He did not point out a single specific act of President Wilson which he said was wrong. He only criticized in a general way purely for political purposes. It is unfortunate indeed, that a candidate for president of one of the leading parties would descend to such unpatriotic methods. Such statements coming from the republican candidate for president makes the task for Wilson much harder in Mexico. Mexican newspapers print such statements and as a majority of the Mexican people are ignorant, they are led to believe, and do believe, that the American people are not united—that half of the people of this country are in sympathy with Mexico and this belief encourages them in their hatred of Americans and their desire to destroy American lives and American property. If President Wilson can have the loyal support of the American people he will be able to handle the Mexican situation without involving us in a war, but if Justice Hughes and other republican leaders keep on trying to make a political issue out of Mexico, they will lend sufficient encouragement to Mexican bandits to make peace impossible. If we are finally driven into a war with Mexico the responsibility of that war and the blood of our boys will rest upon partisan republicans who are willing to sacrifice the country's welfare for party success. Justice Hughes was nominated on Saturday and on the following Monday went to New York City, held a conference with leaders there, and the following day Wall street offered to bet large sums of money on his election. It took sixteen long years to break loose from Wall street control and I do not now believe the American people are quite ready to turn this country over once more to these speculators and gamblers. Justice Hughes will not command the vote of the conservative thinking people. His statement that he and Theodore Roosevelt are in hearty accord upon all questions has shaken the confidence of the people in him and has driven away from him the German-American vote. The German-Americans look upon Theodore Roosevelt as their worst enemy and they will not support any candidate who will admit that he and the Colonel are agreed upon all questions. The German-Americans do not want to see Roosevelt made secretary of state, as he is likely to be, if Hughes is elected. Moreover, his opposition to an income tax law and his attitude toward labor while he was governor of New York, shows conclusively that his heart does not beat in unison with the average man and under no consideration will the labor vote of the country rally to his support. The people are satisfied with Wilson; they know he is safe; they know he is fair and conservative; they are not going to change a certainty for an uncertainty.

Foreign Relations.

"My friends, our opposition will try in every possible way to divert your minds from the great achievements of this democratic administration by criticising the foreign policy of President Wilson. It is but natural that we should differ on policies relating to our domestic affairs, but when it comes to our relations with foreign governments, we should lay aside all differences on internal matters, join together as patriots, and, forgetting our partisanship, give loyal support to the president in the maintenance of the honor and sovereignity of our beloved country. I believe the great mass of the American people, regardless of party, share in this national spirit, except those who place party success and personal ambition above the nation's welfare.

"While all of Europe is red with the blood of millions of brave men, her cities filled with cripples, widows and fatherless children, while misery and sorrow have taken the place of happiness and contentment throughout all the belligerent countries, here we are in America, enjoying peace, plenty, happiness and prosperity, and this is due to the patience, the wisdom and foresight of Woodrow Wilson. He has met the responsibilities thrust upon him, not as the president of any political party, but as the chief executive of the American people. How fortunate we are during these trying times to have at the head of this government a man with the clearness of vision, the love of humanity, the tenderness of heart and the unswerving fidelity to America and American institutions possessed by Woodrow Wilson. And yet, Justice Hughes and other republican leaders, without any knowledge of the facts, and without the secret information before the state department, purely for political purposes, lays aside their patriotism and their Americanism long enough to bitterly attack the man who has preserved peace, saved the blood of our boys and made America the home of a happy and contented people. The task of the president is made more difficult by such utterances. Let us hope the American people will rise above partisanship and vie with each other in their loyalty and devotion to America, American institutions and the American flag. I am not here to say whether any mistakes in our foreign policy have been made or not. I do know that none of us are infallible. If you were to ask me whether any mistakes have been made in dealing with foreign nations I would not be able to give you an intelligent answer. While I have been a member of congress for ten years, and believe I am as close to the president as the average member, the facts are nine-tenths of all the information upon which the president and the state department bases their action is secret information that does not come to me, neither does it go to you, and without that information I cannot say, and you cannot say, whether any mistakes have been made or not. But I will tell you what I do know. I do know under Woodrow Wilson we do not have in this country 5,000,000 widows as a result of war; I do know that 7,000,000 of our men have not lost their lives on the battlefield and 8,000,000 of our citizens have not been wounded; I do know that 12,000,000 of our children have not been made homeless and fatherless; I do know that our factories have not been dismantled and destroyed; I do know that a debt of $30,000,000,000 has not been piled upon us; I do know that our cities have not been shot to pieces and destroyed; I do know that peace prevails in this country and that is what I want and that is what you want. I do know that Woodrow Wilson has met the responsibilities in a way which has resulted in peace, contentment, happiness and prospeciay. As long as the result is satisfactory why should we quibble about the question as to whether or not any mistakes have been made. The real question to consider is whether or not a change of administration during this time of world-wide war might not involve us in the struggle and bring about conditions in this country similar to those in Europe. No president in the history of this republic ever faced such responsibilities or had to deal with such trying and perplexing problems as has Woodrow Wilson, and who could have solved them better? He has been charged with the responsibility of maintaining peace and at the same time protecting the rights of American citizens both upon land and sea, and up to this time he has met these conditions to the satisfaction of the great mass of the American people.

Mexico.

"President Wilson has maintained a firm and fixed policy toward Mexico. A policy based upon three considerations. First, that the United States does not covet any Mexican territory and should not wage a war of aggression upon that unfortunate country. Second, that the people of Mexico should be given the utmost opportunity to restore order and establish civil government within their own borders. Third, that the people of the United States are opposed to intervention unless it is clearly evident that no other alternative exists. The president has adhered to these principles with a firmness characteristic of the man. He has not wavered in the slightest degree from his patriotic duty from the first day his responsibility begun. Notwithstanding the fact, that his task has been made exceedingly difficult, through the unjust and unfair criticism of unpatriotic politicians and selfish, grasping millionaire investors in Mexico, yet he has met the situation successfully, compelling Mexico to respect our rights and acquiesce in our just demands. Woodrow Wilson's foreign policy has won the admiration of the world and has added to the statesmanship and glory of our republic.

"The criticism of Wilson's policy in Mexico was first started by three American multi-millionaires who went down into that country during the Madero administration, and through bribery and fraud secured possession of millions of acres of rich and productive lands and a large number of valuable mines and then hurried back to the United States, and through their powerful newspapers tried to force Wilson into a war with Mexico. What for? Not because of their love of the Mexicans. Not because of their interest in America—but for the sole purpose of putting value into their stolen investment and to give them title to property they really did not own. They were willing to sacrifice the lives of 100,000 American boys and incur a debt of millions of dollars for which you would be taxed to pay, in order that they might add value to their questionable investments. Woodrow Wilson had the courage to stand out against these selfish Americans and by so doing our rights have been safe-guarded, our boys have been saved and today the American flag commands greater respect the world over than ever before. It is almost unthinkable that even a republican office seeker would undertake to make a political issue out of the Mexican situation. In doing so he brands himself unfit for public office.

German-Americans.

"Our republican friends are claiming that German-Americans will not vote for Woodrow Wilson. I do not believe it. I can see no reason why he should not have their support. There have been no differences between Germany and the United States except the one question of submarine warfare, and that question was taken up by President Wilson with Germany, following the sinking of the Lusitania. Germany accepted the position taken by President Wilson as being wholly and fully within the law and agreed that thereafter submarine warfare would be conducted accordingly. Wilson accepted in good faith the promise made by Germany and the matter was thought to be closed. A few weeks later another ship was sunk by Germany in violation of international law and in violation of the sacred pledge made to the United States. President Wilson again took up the matter with Germany, and the imperial German government disavowed the act, and once more promised President Wilson that she would abide by the law. Again the president accepted in good faith the pledge made by Germany. Then a few weeks later another ship was sunk in violation of law and again Germany expressed regret and promised President Wilson it would not happen again. The president once more accepted in good faith the pledge made to the United States. Then later on other ships were sunk in violation of law and finally when the little cross steamer Sussex was sunk, which was purely a ferry boat and could not have been used for war purposes under any circumstances, then the president felt that his patience was entirely exhausted. He had given the German government a full year to keep its promises and pledges made to the United States and the president felt that the time had come when he must say to Germany once and for all, that if she did not keep her pledge made to the United States and conduct her submarine warfare within the law, he would be required to sever diplomatic relations. In answer to this ultimatum Germany has again promised to abide by the law and keep her word, and again Woodrow Wilson has accepted in good faith Germany's promise and the matter for the present is closed. While Wilson was exhibiting the greatest degree of patience with Germany, Theodore Roosevelt, a progressive candidate for the presidency; Senator Elihu Root, a republican candidate for the presidency, and practically all of the republican leaders in the house and senate, were severely criticising President Wilson because he did not declare war on Germany. Some of them went so far as to say he should have declared war on Germany almost two years ago when Germany violated the neutrality of Belgium. Had Woodrow Wilson followed the advice of these republican leaders, we would have been in a war with Germany many months ago, and if the United States had entered the war against Germany, that nation could not have held out against the allies for six months. The fact is, Woodrow Wilson is the man who stood between the United States and war with Germany. His refusal to follow the advice of the republican leaders has made it possible for Germany to successfully hold out against her enemies. It seems to me that the German-Americans should feel very kindly toward Woodrow Wilson because of his refusal to follow republican advice and compel them to take up arms against their fatherland.

"Or if I had been born in any of the belligerent nations I would want the nation from which I came to be successful in the war in which it was engaged. But, my friends, I do not question the loyalty or the patriotism of any American citizen of foreign birth. I know if we were to become involved in a war with any nation on earth that every German, every Frenchman and every other citizen of foreign birth would rally as one man under the Stars and Stripes and stand shoulder to shoulder in defense of the country and our flag. The facts are, the foreign relations of our government should never be made a political issue. In such matters every American citizen should give loyal support to the president of the United States no matter from which party he comes. Let me remind you that George Washington was severely criticised in his day and no man up to the present time was ever criticised as was Abraham Lincoln in 1864. Even republicans were bitter in their denunciation of his administration, saying it had been a failure—that he had made one blunder after another, etc. But where would you now find a man who would criticise George Washington or Abraham Lincoln and after the 7th day of November, you might search this country over from one end to the other and you would not find a man who would admit that he ever criticised Woodrow Wilson. All of this criticism is for political purposes only and should not be taken seriously by anyone.

Progressives.

"Our republican friends are claiming the progressives are all going to vote with them this year. I do not believe it. The progressives left the republican party four years ago, not because they did not love the party of Lincoln, but because they believed the leaders of that party were controlled by the interests and because they could not secure the progressive legislation they desired. Who were the republican leaders four years ago? I answer, Barnes, Penrose, Cannon, Smoot, Fairbanks, Watson, New and Goodrich. Who are the republican leaders now? Why, the same gentlemen and all of them, except two, are candidates for office. These gentlemen drove you out of the party four years ago and no one can make me believe an honest progressive in Indiana, who was sincere in his declaration four years ago and two years ago, will now go back and take orders from Fairbanks, Watson, New and Goodrich. No, gentlemen, I have too much faith in the honesty and sincerity of Indiana progressives to believe they will do anything of the kind. They are men of conviction and they have the courage of their convictions. They will vote a progressive ticket or they will vote with us. Our policies and principles are nearer and dearer to them than those advocated by the republican party. They wanted an income tax law and we gave it to them; they wanted currency reform and we gave it to them; they wanted the right to vote direct for United States senators and we gave it to them; they wanted legislation giving relief to labor and we gave it to them; they wanted more liberal pension for union soldiers and we gave it to them; they wanted a tariff law embodying the principle of protection but opposed to extortion and we gave it to them. In fact, there is but little difference between us and these differences can be harmonized. The treatment of progressives by Fairbanks, Watson, New and Goodrich at Chicago four years ago has not been forgotten. Then at the recent convention held at Chicago by these same republicans insult was added to injury. In the face of these facts what progressive could vote the republican ticket and maintain his self-respect?

Candidacy for Governor.

"Now, gentlemen, a word about my candidacy for governor. I want to be your governor, because I believe I can render for you and for the state of Indiana a valuable service. I am basing my campaign for governor on my record as a citizen of Indiana, on my record in the legislature of the state and on my ten years' service in the national congress. When I went to congress ten years ago, I began a fight on the commercial vampires of Wall street, who hung around Washington dictating and controlling our legislation while the republican party was in power. I have contributed my part toward driving them from the nation's capital and taken an active part in all the constructive legislation which has brought so much relief to the American people. Let me assure you here and now that if I am your governor, I will make the same fight against greed and robbery in the state of Indiana, that I have made against it in the national congress. I will protect your rights and give to the people an honest, economical administration of the affairs of state. My highest ambition will be to render a service that will merit for me the endorsement, the confidence and the respect of all the people regardless of party. The laws of the state shall be and will be enforced to the letter. I shall give the subject of taxation special study and consideration, to the end that taxes may be equalized and the burden of taxation reduced to the lowest possible limit. I shall see that our charitable, benevolent and correctional institutions are properly managed and that the unfortunate inmates are cared for in a way that will be creditable to the state. Having in mind the welfare of those who earn their bread by daily toil, I shall urge legislation that will do justice to both capital and labor, to the end that the strong may not trample on the rights of the weak, but that every man may have a square deal and an equal opportunity under the law. I shall oppose special privilege in every form and shall insist on such progressive legislation as the people will demand. I shall stand for clean government and the advancement of civic righteousness in all parts of the state. I shall strive to make Indiana, the model state of the union, where our boys and girls can be reared into manhood and womanhood and sent out in life to bless the world and mankind.

Going to Win.

"We are going to win because we deserve to win. We are united as never before. Our party is closer to the hearts of the American peope than ever before. We enjoy the confidence of very voter in the land who is not blinded with partisanship or controlled by a selfish desire to hold office. If you believe in America, American institutions and the American flag; if you believe in peace with honor and war only when necessary to maintain the rights of America, and American citizens both upon land and sea; if you believe in the sanctity of the home and the liberties of the people; if you want peace to prevail and prosperity to continue vote for Woodrow Wilson, and the democratic ticket.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. George Wass, whose death occurred Saturday evening, August 5, at the Lutheran hospital, was born in this city September 17, 1893. She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. H. Noll, of 1607 East Creighton avenue, who survive her with the husband, two sisters and five brothers, she being the first of the family of eight children summoned from this earth. She was married to Mr. Geo. Wass August 18, 1915, her married life being very brief, but one of much happiness. The deceased was one of earth's noble young ladies; to know her was to love her; she was possessed of moral worth and high ambitions. Her home was one of the prides of her life, having a great desire to constitute one of earth's happy homes. She was a kind daughter and loving wife. She will be remembered by the loving deeds which she hath done. She was a member of the Calvary U. B. church and of the different organizations of that congregation. The funeral services were held at the U. B. church Aug. 8, conducted by Revs. Borkert and Olmstead; interment at Lindenwood, where she was laid to rest beneath a bed of flowers.

Thy will, O God, not ours, be done
Not now but in the coming years,
It may be in a better land,
We'll read the meaning of our tears:

"GARDEN SASS" EDDYTORIUL

Tother day after we had returnd to the Buggle office after we had been down town trying to skeer up a few items for publicashion in this ishue of the Bugle (P. S.—We diddent skeer up enny) we was rejoiced to find on our desk 2 doz ears of green corn on the cob or roasting ears whitch our friend & naber Simon Cooper had left on our desk outen the goodness of his hart with his complyments during our absents.

We tuk the 2 doz ears home and our wife biled the corn for supper whitch constitooted our evg meel almost excloosive as we might say. We are a great hand for corn on the cob & as we set there with our ft under the table acrost from our wife gnawing the corn offen one cob after another with great gusto until we had et 16 ears to our wifes eight ears until we like to bust it ockurd to us that we would dash off a eddytoriul on the important subjeck of "Garden Sass."

Bingville is now right in the most proliffick "Garden Sass" period of the entire yr as we might put it. "Garden Sass" vegetables of all descripshions has matoored & are now at their best so while they last we ort to make the best of em. Most Bingville folks is now livin almost excloosive offen their gardens and as a result they don't haft to lay out mutch if enny money on their tables like what they haft to do during the winter whitch is a great boon.

There is times when the food problem in Bingville is a awful hard one to solve espeshially during the spring of the yr when folks hereabouts has consoomed most of the things they raised for use during the winter and are what you might call "et up close." In other words at that time of the yr we are jest betwixt hay and grass as you might say and its turrible hard scratchin to scratch up three square meels per day.

Therefore we ort to be thankful that our garden crops turnd out so propishus this fall and take advantage of the sitooashion while "Garden Sass" lasts by consooming as mutch as possibil of same.

Some Bingville folks we know is inclined to turn up their noses at a vegytable diet. Take Hank Dewberry for instants. When we told Hank that we had et 16 ears of corn offen the cob at one setting Hank told us hed be ashamed to tell it being as corn on the cob was only fit for horses & cows to ete and as for him hed perfer bacon and eggs or somethink like that. Whitch only goes to show what a tarnashion fool Hank Dewberry is.

SPESHIAL NOTIS TO SIMON COOPER—Thanks exceeding for the 2 doz ears of corn on the cob, Simon. Enny further contribushions of this nachure will be received by us gratis with great cheer.—EDITOR BUGLE.

Lokal Jottings

If you happen to hear of enny "Lokal Jottings" bring them to the Bugle offis and get yourself liberally thanked. "Lokal Jottings" recd by us with great cheer.

A rainfall wouldnt do no partickler harm at this writing. In fackt we need rain, being as we aint had none of same now for quite a spell & as a result the roads is turrible dusty.

Hi Henderson and Anse Smiley got to argyin down to Hen Weathersbys store tother evn as to who could jump the highest, so they went out into the road in front of the store to prove it. Hi sprained his ankel while Anse busted his suspenders and each one maintained that he jumped highern tother one, so they stand right where they was before both neerly busted theirselfs.

Lem Perkins stood in front the lookin glass last Sunday and tride to cut his own hair with the shears so as to avoid paying Harve Hines, our tonsorial barber, a quarter for doing the job. Lem got along first rate until he got about haff through the job when he suddintly & axidentally cut off the edge of his ear whitch bled like everythink so Lem quit in disgust. Lem looks ridicklus with his hair only haff cut, but Harve says it serves him right for being sitch a titewad.

Miss Almira Hobbs, leader of the Bingville church quoir, called at the Bugle offis to have us a nounce that she will sing a speshial solo at next Sunday morning service entiteld "Jerusalem." We are glad to make this a nouncement in advance becuz it will give a opportunity for them who dont desire to have their ear-drums busted and headakes brung on by loud screechin & hollerin to go to service after Almira has sang her speshial solo. We have heard Almira sing speshial solos before now and we know what we be talkin about.

Mrs. Ab Skinner was turrible put out last bake day when she had a jelly cake to fall on her. When she took it outen the oven it was flattern a pancake. Mrs. Skinner says she dont know what made it fall unless it was the jar of her letting the teakettle fall on the kitchen floor when the cake was in the oven.

Hez Andrews says he is expectin a addishion to his fambily of stock out at the barn, being as he is looking for one of his cows to come in fresh now enny time. Hez says after this happy event takes place he will be in a posishion to furnish butter milk and cream to a few families in Bingville who aint got no cow.

Brad Tucker says the intrust on the morgage whitch Cy Hoskins holds aginst his farm comes due now in a few days and being as Brad aint got the necessary funds to pay the morgage he is in a awful swet. As for Cy Hoskins we perdick he will jest let Brad swet and also we perdickt it wont be long before Cy will own Brads farm. Cy Hoskins has akwired quite a number of farms in this manner.

These is all the "Lokal Jottings" we can think of at this writing. If we think of enny more before we go to press look elsewhere for em in this ishue of the Bugle and if you fail to find em youll know we diddent think of enny. That ort to be plain enuff for ennybuddy.

L-O-S-T

While driving home from the co seat last Satterday sometime during the night I went and lost a brand new buggy whip in some manner unknowd to me, or else it dropped outen my hand when I wassent lookin. I dont know jest whereabouts on the road home I lost said whip—if I knowd that I would go and get it. The road all looked alike to me as I druv home last Satterday and to tell the truth I dont know where I lost it. Some fiend in human form might of stole it outen the buggy at the co seat but if so I didnt notis it after I started to drive home. In fackt I diddent discuvver that my buggywhip was lost until last Monday morning. I was sick in bed all day Sunday with a splittin headake and diddent git a chanst to discuvver gnnythink until Monday. Whoever returns said buggywhip to me will be liberally thanked and no questshions asked. BILL HEPBURN.

Handsome Improovement

Simon Cooper, one of Bingvilles most respeckted cittizens, has spunked up and as a result he has made much improvement in his property whitch stands very conspickuous right on the Main st of the town.

For several yrs past there has been several pickets missing offen Simons front fence but he has been to bizzy or dilatory to repair same and they become a turrible eyesore to the entire communitty. Tother day Simon got his saw and hatchet and he made some new pickets and put em on to take the place of the missing ones and not satisfide with that he then jumpd in and whitewarshed the whole entire front fence. Every buddy who goes past now congratulates Simon who sets on his front piazzer on the great improovement whitch he has made and remarks how mutch it adds to this porshion of the residenchial districkt of Bingville. It gives us great pleashure to oolygize Simon on his improovements and we will be glad to speak about other improovements elsewhere in town if our attenshion is cald to same.

Personal Mention

Dad Henderson went squirl hunting one day last wk. but it began to rain and being as there wassent enny cork in Dads powder flask his powder got wet and wouldnt go off in his ole muzzle loader shotgun. After Dad had snapped at 4 squirls without the gun going off he returned home in disgust.

Ben Wade of Snake Bend was a Bingville visiter one day last wk and cald at the Bugle offis to pay us his compliments. Wed a good eal ruther Ben had paid us a doller or two on back subscripshion than his compliments. If compliments was dollers & cents we would be rich beyond the fondest dreams of avyrice.

Hen Weathersby prop of our general store wishes us to inform the general publick that he has laid in a box of fresh salt smoked herring for human consumpshion. Hen says these herrings is very delishus and make a nise lunch with a few crackers to go along with em and a gal or two of water.

Bale Hawkins wore a new pr of boots to church last Sunday and one boot on whitch foot Bale has a bunyon hurt him so that he was in mortal agony all through the sermon and set there with the cold swet runnin down offen his fase and whispern perfanity to hisself whitch was overheerd by them who set near him. After church Bale walkd home wearing the boot that diddent hurt on his foot and tother in his hand. Bale says he calkilates hell haft to git that boot stretchd or else cut a hole into it.

Wes Woodruff our expert hunter & trapper went over to Gootchic Pond last Sabbath fishin and had his foot to slip and fell into the pond & mite of drownd if he haddent been able to swim. As it was he broke his fish pole and got wet to the skin. Well, what can a person expeckt who vilates the Sabbath by fishin on Sunday? This ort to be a sollum warning to Wes.

Eph Higgins our accommodating p. M. informs us that this sticky muggy wether we have been having is awful hard on the stamps he has on hands being as he has to watch em like a hawk to keep em from all gumming up & sticking together. Eph says its a awful chore to haft to see that each stamp is kep alone by itself to pervent it stickin to some other stamp & hell be glad when dogdays is went & gone.

Hoke Smiley says he wishes to goodness that somebuddy would give him a reseat for remooving a wart from his nose. Hoke has been pesterd by a wart on his nose for menny yrs and being as its right in front of his fase & eyes as we might say he says he almost went cross-eyed lookin at the blamed thing. If enny person knows how to remove a wart from the human nose kindly confer with Hoke.

Little Sammy Jones was tuk turrible sick with vilent pains to his stummick and Doc Livermore our human speshialist & veternary had to be sent for. Sammy admitted that he had spent 15 cts whitch he had ernd by running ernds for Granny Simpson for a lb of candy at Hen Weathersbys store and had et every bit of same hisself. No wonder Sammy was sick. A lb of candy would make a growd up person sick let alone a 10 yr old boy. Sammy is better at this writing.

Subscribe for the Bingville (paying cash strickly in advance) Bugle and if you do that you will have the satisfackshion of knowing that you are helping along a good cause—in fackt we might say you would be helping along a almost lost cause and still be telling the truth.

SNAKE BEND

Bill Hinckley says he dont calkilate his potater crop is a going to amount to mutch. Bill says that the gorrammed potater bugs not only et offen the tops of his potaters as fast as they come up but not satisfide with that they dug down and et the potaters also. As a result Bill says his potaters is small and excedding few to the hill. If Bill had of kep bizzy pickin potater bugs instid of setting in the shade and restin whilst they was eating his potaters he would of had a bigger crop praps.

Sam Henderson while bilding fence last wk near stepd on a black snake four ft long and kild it but the experients made Sam so nervus that he stopd bilding fense and went home in deep disgust. Sam says he hates snakes so bad that hed go five miles outen his way to avoid one or walk 10 miles to git a chanst to kill one.

Hiram Butterworth of Bingville who is also one of the Deacons and a stanch piller in the Bingville church was a visitter here tother day and stayed to dinner with his old friend Phin Wilkins. Phin and Hiram spent most of the day in Phins celler where it was cool beside a barl of hard cider and as a result when Hiram started to drive home he diddent drive enny too straight.

Mrs. Gideon Small had quite a calamitty to happen to her recent. Mrs. Gid was biling off some soft soap in a kettle outen doors when the kettle upset and spilt all the soap whitch was a total loss. Mrs. Gid was turrible put out being as she had been saving up fat to make that soap with for several munths. SCRIBBLER.

OLD TYPE FOR SALE

How are you off for old tipe? The reason we ask this questshion is that whilst rummaging around in the Bugle offis tother day we suddintly come acrost a box containing about 50 lbs or more of odds & ends of old tipe whitch we had throwd into it from time to time during the past several yrs.

Being as this old tipe aint of enny use to us we have desided to sell it to the general publick inclooding them as might desire old tipe for enny purpose whatever.

There is a great menny uses we can think of to whitch you could put this old tipe. For instants you could melt it up into rifle bullets if you so desired. And if you diddent so desire then you could melt it into paper weights, or door weights. There aint nothink will do quite so good a job at holdin down vallybie papers on a windy day as a chunk of lead. On tother hand you might make it into weppings of self defense which would come in handy when you woke up and found a burgular in the house.

We will let this tipe go at the rate of 5 cts per lb as long as it lasts. 1st come 1st served. It cost us several times this mutch per lb and we dont know of nothink that weighs so heavy to the lb as a lb of tipe. If you buy this tipe youll haft to carry it home yourself.

NEWS AND VIEWS OF THE FARMER

ARE YOUR CHICKENS DOING WELL?

Mr. H. L. Kempster, of the Missouri College of Agriculture, Gives Some Very Valuable Suggestions as to the Care of Chickens During Warm Weather—A Ration That Pays.

H. L. KEMPSTER.
Missouri College of Agriculture.

If, for no apparent reason, there is a lack of thrift among your young chicks, perhaps the cause is lice, or worms in the intestines. Examine the chicks about the head for head lice. Lice are more likely to be present on hen-raised chicks. If lice are found, grease the heads of the chicks with lard which is free from salt. Do not use lard and sulphur. Apply the lard with the finger, rubbing the head, neck, under the wings and around the vent. The brooding hen should also be treated. One of the best methods of exterminating lice on the mature fowls is to rub a piece of blue ointment, the size of a pea, into the skin just beneath the vent, and also under each wing. Do not daub it on, but rub it well into the skin, as blue ointment is very poisonous and will kill the hen if she gets some of it into her mouth.

If no lice are found, carefully examine the intestines of a dead chick for intestinal parasites, such as tapeworms or round worms. If worms of any kind are found, the chicks should be treated and removed to fresh ground where there are no worms in the soil. As long as the chicks remain on the old runs the danger of contamination is always present.

To treat for intestinal parasites feed should be withheld for twelve hours, and one of the following remedies given:

Powdered areca nut, 30 to 45 grains for an adult bird.

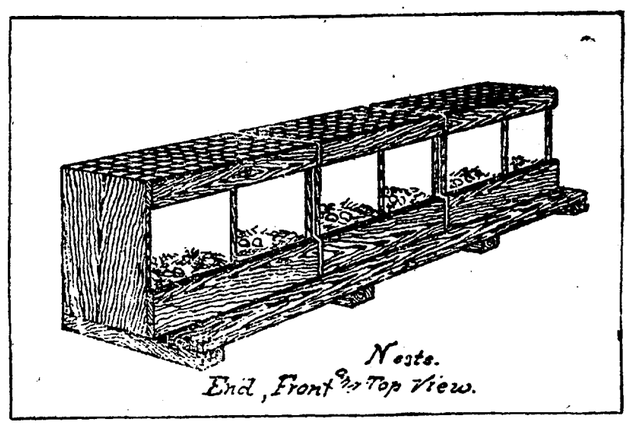
Powdered areca nut, 15 grains for immature chicks.

This can be mixed in a wet mash and fed so that each gets an equal amount. It can be fed to older birds in capsules which can be forced down the gullet.

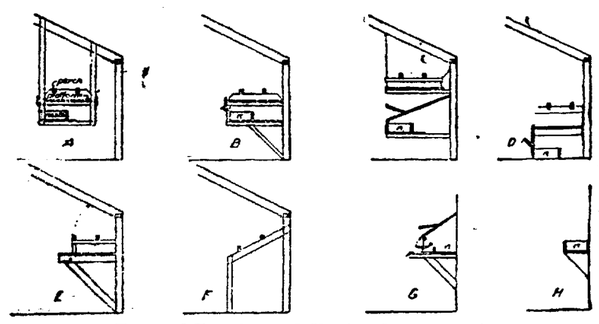
Turpentine, 1 to 3 teaspoonfuls, depending upon the age of the bird, is also effective. It can be made less severe by mixing with an equal amount of cottonseed oil, but if ineffective, should be used full strength. The best method of giving turpentine is by forcing it through a small flexible catheter that has been oiled and is passed through the throat into the crop.

Good results have been reported also with the use of tobacco dust, using 5 to 10 grains to a bird. This can also be fed in a wet mash.

The droppings containing the worms should be burned or buried deep to prevent the chickens from picking them up.



Good Open Nest, Built in Pairs. The Runway in Front of the Nests and the Bracket or Frame Which Supports the Nests Are Built Separate and Apart from the Nests. The Nests Simply Slide in on the Bracket. Each Nest Is About 14 Inches Square.



Types of Roosting and Nesting Arrangements.

A Dollar-and-a-Half Hen.

There is profit in keeping a good poultry flock. This was shown by a flock of White Leghorn pullets at the University of Missouri. From 50 to 60 birds were housed in an open front poultry house with a yard 100 feet square which was sowed to wheat in the fall. This furnished green food in the late fall and early spring and was not charged against their feed bill.

In a year's time the fowls consumed 2,693 pounds of grain and 962 pounds of mash. The total cost of the feed was $66.27. In estimating this cost the following prices per 100 pounds were used: Wheat, $1.66; corn, $1.60; bran, $1.20; cornmeal, $1.75; shorts, $1.40; and beef scraps, $3.25. These prices are higher than the feed would bring if sold by the farmer, but at that the flock returned a good profit. They produced a total of 8,057 eggs at a food cost of 10½ cents a dozen. At the prevailing prices the eggs sold for $157.17, thus giving a total profit of $90.90.

At an average price of 23.4 cents a dozen the hens returned a profit of a dollar and a half apiece above the cost of feed. Even at an average price of 20 cents a dozen the hens doubled the value of the feed.

They were fed as a scratch food a mixture of two parts cracked corn and one part wheat. The mash consisted of equal parts of bran, shorts, cornmeal and beef scrap. Grit, oyster shell and water were kept before the birds all the time.

Warm Weather Hints.

As the chicks grow they need more room. It does not pay to let them crowd.

Beware of musty, mouldy, sour or decayed food. It is sure to cause trouble.

Tough grass is of no value as a green food. Better sow some quick growing crop.

Feed hoppers greatly reduce the work. If they are kept filled, the chicks will never go hungry.

If your chicks are not doing well something is wrong. Look out for lice and for worms in the intestines.

Two-year-old hens had better be sent to the market. They seldom pay for their feed if kept over a third season.

Grit and oyster shell should be included in the ration for both young and old. To neglect this would be poor economy.

Young stock will do better if not compelled to pick their living with the old. There will also be less trouble from lice.

Shade is one of the most important essentials during the hot months. Get the chicks into the orchard and cornfield. It is not too late to plant sunflowers.

A growing chick will not thrive on short rations. If the right kind of food is fed, there is little danger of overfeeding, especially if they are given plenty of range.

Supplement the regular feeds with a wet mash—fed crumbly. Feed all the chicks will clean up before going to roost, but none should be left in the trough, for it will sour.

Mark the pullets this fall so that you will know just how old your hens are. A leg band on the right leg one year and on the left leg the next will assist in culling the flock. A hog ring will serve the purpose.

"Titanic" Wheat

The Department of Agriculture has recently been advised by a correspondent in California that a variety of wheat is being advertised under the name "Titanic." The assertion is made that it is a new variety of wheat discovered in England about four years ago, and that a small quantity of seed was brought to the United States by one of the survivors of the ill-fated Titanic. The wheat is represented as having extremely high yielding power, the returns reaching as high as 7,000-fold. A photograph sent by this correspondent shows a head identical in appearance with the widely exploited "Alaska" wheat. Five acres of the wheat are said to be growing in the State of Washington, and the seed, it is believed, will be offered at high prices after harvest. The Department has no further or more definite information concerning this variety, but farmers and dealers are cautioned to be on their guard concerning this new exploitation.

COMFORTABLE HOMES HELP.

The better farm home is not a panacea for all ills of dissatisfaction with farm life. There will be farm boys and farm girls who will want to take up other professions than tilling the soil. The problem, says the Department of Agriculture, is not to force them to stay on the farm, but to make conditions good enough there that they may make an intelligent choice.

Careful tests show that thinned trees produce as large a quantity of fruit as trees not thinned.

PICKING AND CURING RASPBERRIES

Because of the Soft, Perishable, Character of This Fruit, It Is Most Successfully Harvested By Hand Picking—In the Evaporation Process Great Care Also Is Necessary in Handling.

Raspberries are harvested in two ways. For consumption as fresh fruit they are always hand picked. In fact, many of the commercial growers of raspberries which are intended for evaporation or drying prefer to hand pick rather than to "bat" the fruit. There are perhaps about as many advocates of hand picking as of "batting," and a grower must decide for himself which, under his circumstances, is most economical.

Raspberry Harvesters at Work "Batting."

Hand picking does not require any description, but there are a great many people who do not know what "batting" means.

In this method of picking the berries the bushes are bent over a device covered with muslin and the fruit is beaten into these tray-like receptacles by the use of a very light paddle. The bushes are drawn over by a short wire hook, and with a light, somewhat curved bat, the well-ripened fruits are knocked from the plants up against the muslin and roll gently to the lower end of the tray, where the wider portions of the frame form a receptacle.

With a device of this kind one man is capable of picking from 5 to 8 bushels of fruit daily, while the most expert hand pickers can pick only about 100 quarts, or 3 bushels. It will thus be seen that this device is of considerable advantage in that it shortens the period of harvest. The drawback is that a small percentage of the berries is lost by bouncing out of the tray as they are forced against the muslin by the stroke of the paddle. This loss however, is not very great, amounting, perhaps to not more than one-half of one per cent in extreme cases.

The batting of raspberries is never practiced except upon fruits which are to be evaporated. After being dried, they must be looked over carefully by hand, as are beans, so as to remove any small leaves which have been batted into the trays with the fruit.

The use of heat, either from the sun or from some artificial source, for the purpose of drying the fruits has made the raspberry an important commercial product in certain sections of the United States. Regions which could not profitably engage in the growing of this fruit were its sole use to be found as a fresh fruit upon the market can now safely undertake its cultivation. While the sun drying of raspberries has been practiced as long as the raspberry has been used for culinary purposes, the art of drying it with artificial heat is a comparatively recent commercial development.

The artificial process of drying under a high heat has an advantage over sun drying in that the product can be obtained much sooner and is of a more desirable quality. Evaporated fruit of the highest quality loses only a small percentage of its juices. The heat is sufficient to sear the outside of the fruit by breaking down its cellular structure and giving it a dry, somewhat resistant surface, which has a tendency to keep the interior portion much more moist and palatable than is possible under the slow process of sun drying.

With partially ripened fruits such as peaches, apricots, prunes, apples, etc., which are dried under high heats, the process becomes one of transforming the starches into sugar, or, in other words, a quickening of the ripening process. This to a certain extent is accomplished with the raspberry, but, as its fruits are usually thoroughly matured when they go to the evaporator, it is likely that there is much less chemical change in the raspberry than in the case of the apple. The improved quality of the product from the evaporator not only adds to its commercial value, but increases the income of the producer, because there is less loss in weight in evaporated than in sun-dried fruit. In other words, the yield from a given area is evaporated fruit is somewhat greater than the yield from the same area in sun-dried fruit. These features, together with the rapidity with which the operation can be carried on, are considered of sufficient advantage to warrant growers of raspberries in erecting evaporators even at considerable cost.

The drying of berries on racks exposed to the sun is a practice largely in vogue in many of the raspberry growing regions, and was, up to comparatively recent times, the only method of curing and caring for the fruits of the raspberry. The method of sun curing is more or less inconvenient in that it requires a great deal of attention and provision for sheltering the fruit in case of showers, as well as coverings for the racks at night to protect them from rain or dew.

Evaporating Raspberries in the Sun.

NOVEL WIRE LIGHTNING ARRESTOR

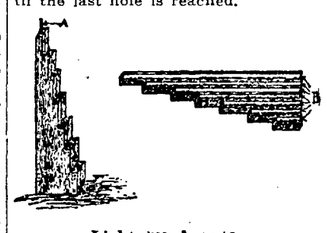
An astonishing number of stock are killed each season by lightning, and not a few human beings, and in almost every case the dead stock is found near a wire fence. There is no doubt but that a large portion of this stock and human life could be saved by grounding the wires of the fence, but as this calls for a large-sized, rather expensive, wire or iron rod, it is seldom done.

An effective safety device may be easily constructed as follows: Any ordinary, smooth fence wire may be driven four or five feet deep in the hardest soil—at either depth the wire is sure to be in damp, wet soil at all seasons of the year. Two 1x12-inch boards, four or five feet long, are shaped like a flight of steep steps (as shown in the accompanying illustration).

The step-shaped notches should be about six inches in height and one and one-half inches deep; in the top center of each step a small groove is cut (as shown by the darts leading to B). These should be one-fourth inch wide and about one-eighth of an inch deep so that when the two pieces are fastened together each step has a one-fourth-inch hole its entire length.

The grooves should be as smooth and straight as possible but can be cut with an ordinary pocket-knife if no other tool is at hand.

Fasten the lower ends of the boards together with a small bolt (as shown in the left-hand figure); hold the top together with the left hand, set the device where wanted and drop the wire in the top hole; drive down to the wood, lift the device and place the wire in the next hole, and so on until the last hole is reached.



Lightning Arrestor.

In this manner a very small wire may be driven in the ground without bending, and only six inches of same is above the wood at one time. Splice the ground wire and connect same to each wire of the fence and you will have a first-class lightning arrestor.

The distance apart these ground wires should be placed is a question—the writer places them every eight or ten rods.—J. Bridgeman.

BUILD THE FENCE PROPERLY.

To get the maximum of service out of a fence it is absolutely necessary that it should be well built. The corner posts must be placed solidly in the ground in such a manner that they can not be heaved by frost or drawn loose by the pull of the fence. The fabric should be strung tightly to the end posts, but it ought not to be tightly stapled to the line posts. It should be fastened to line posts in such manner that the wires may move in a horizontal direction to take care of the contraction and expansion due to changes in temperature, and to distribute the force of a blow along the fence line so that the strain will not come entirely on any one or two posts or any one point of the wire. A barbed wire should be placed a short distance above the top of the woven wire to prevent cattle and horses from crowding it down when reaching over or rubbing against the fence.

HOW TO GET THE BEST PRICES.

Because of our poor market for second grade butter the farmers in every community should compel their creamery to grade the cream, and should do all in their power to see that every farmer produces only first grade cream. Then and only then will that creamery be able to pay top prices for cream.

INSECTS' HABITS.

Hessian fly grubs feed between the leaf sheath and the stalk at the crown and lower joints of the plant. Destroy the "flax seeds" which produce next year's crop by disking and plowing stubble as soon after harvesting as possible. Keep down all volunteer wheat, sow late in the fall and get your neighbors to do the same.

The chinch bug sucks the juices of corn, wheat, sorghums, and other plants of the grass family. They may be trapped in dusty ditches if they go from wheat to corn, or in rainy weather an oil or tar barrier may be necessary. If they get to the corn, spray it with soapsuds, emulsion, or tobacco solutions. The clump forming grasses by roadsides and in waste lands may be burned in late fall and early winter to kill chinch bugs which collect there for the winter. — T. J. Talbert, Mo. College of Agriculture.

MULBERRIES WILL SAVE YOUR FRUIT.

Probably the chief value of the mulberry is as a food for the birds. Robins, jays, catbirds and many others prefer it to cherries, raspberries and the fruits which they eat where no mulberries are available. Plant plenty of mulberries and you will have very little cause for complaint regarding the damage done by birds.

Butter Tree of Tropics

Mr. Yerby, the United States Consul at Sierre Leone, tells of a wonderful tropical tree called the shea, or butter tree. It furnishes the natives not only with nuts, which they highly prize, but with butter, which may become an article of commerce of importance, since it is already exported to Europe, where it is used in making artificial butter. This tree produces a nut covered with a soft pulp which is in turn covered with a smooth skin, easily removable when the nut ripens. This pulp is sweet and wholesome. About sixty per cent. of the nut is butter, which is edible. The tree begins to bear when it is fifteen years old, and reaches its full capacity in twenty-five years. Barring jungle fires a butter plantation is a long time and profitable investment. Chocolate manufacturers could easily absorb the product. Candles and soap can also be made of it. Trees that can produce butter, soap and candles are worth cultivating.

SUNSHINE IN THE DAIRY STABLE.

A farmer, whose cattle have always been kept in a stable on the north side of the barn, well lighted and ventilated, had occasion to enlarge his stable building the extension with a southern exposure, into which the direct rays of the sun were permitted to enter with no obstruction. He discovered by accident, what he subsequently demonstrated by repeated experience, that the same creature in the sunlight took on flesh more readily, ate less and produced more than when kept in the stable where the direct sunlight never entered. More than this, he proved conclusively that creatures suffering with various diseases, or reduced physical condition from divers causes, recovered more readily when afforded the energizing influences of the sunshine.

SHALLOW CULTIVATION FOR CORN.

Shallow cultivation in a good seed bed can be done well with a narrow-shoveled cultivator or a light harrow, the teeth of which slant backward. In a field in which there are loose sods that may prevent the young plants from reaching the surface, the cultivator is to be preferred to the harrow. Harrowing corn after it is up always reduces the stand somewhat, but in many cases it is a good method of saving labor. The harrowing should be done on a bright afternoon when the plants are somewhat wilted. They are less easily broken then.

ECONOMIZING GARDEN SPACE.

If one desires to grow only a few cucumbers the plants may be grown upon a trellis, or planted around the outside of the poultry yard and allowed to climb on the wire netting. A few stakes driven around each hill will protect the plants from the chickens.

Constructing Cement Piers

Cement piers for granaries and other buildings that should set above the ground can be cheaply and evenly made.

A galvanized iron cone is made of sheet-iron, the size and length of the pier to be built, which is supported by an iron band at either end (as shown in the illustration).

Two handles are riveted to opposite sides, and the mold is ready for business. The cone should be at least two inches larger at the lower end than it is at the top. The excavation is made for the piers the same as for building stone piers. The iron form or mold is placed in the excavation and filled with the cement mixture.

The piers may be made in two different ways. First, the cement may be rather thin and allowed to set in the form until sufficiently hardened to remove same, or the cement may be what is called a dry mixture, that is, mixed with as little water as possible, so that when the form is filled it may be removed with a twisting motion and the cement will hold its shape.

Bolts may be embedded in the top for holding down sills, while the form is in place.

In using the dry mixture have the same so mixed that when squeezed in the hand it will hold its shape, and it will be of the proper consistency for molding the piers. Long gate-posts may be made in the same manner, porch columns, etc.

WHEAT IN CALIFORNIA.

California, once an important wheat State and noted for large bonanza wheat farms, is no longer classed as a wheat-producing State. Twenty years ago it produced 45,000,000 bushels of wheat, shipping much of it to Europe. This year its production will probably be not much more than 4,000,000 bushels, and it will need to ship in from other States 10,000,000 bushels or more to meet its own food requirements.

How To Can Corn

Cut corn from cob when it is at the proper stage and in filling the cans or glass jars in which it is to be preserved put some corn in the bottom, mashing this down with a cob from which the corn has been cut until the milk comes out well. Put in another layer and mash again, and so on until the jar is full. The cans should be slightly heaping and the covers then screwed on tight. When the cans are filled and covers on they should be put in the boiler and set on a crate or frame so that they will not touch the bottom. And they should be so arranged that they will not touch each other. The boiler should then be filled with cold water, brought to a boil and allowed to boil for four hours. Let stand until water is cool; then remove cans and try covers to see if they are tight. The cans should be kept covered with water while boiling, and this may be done by keeping a kettle of boiling water handy. This method of canning is recommended by the department of agriculture as the most satisfactory for preserving corn, beans, peas and other vegetables.

FOR SUMMER FEEDING.

The summer silo is gaining favor rapidly as a supply source of a sufficient amount of succulent feed. Many dairy farmers feed silage every day in the year and especially when pasture is not to be had. A small silo built and filled in the fall to be opened in July is the most economical method of supplying a succulent ration during short pastures. Silage left over from winter feeding may be kept with very little loss until midsummer. Cows should be fed from 40 to 50 pounds of silage each day. Silage alone does not furnish a balanced ration so some grain should be fed, especially to the cows that give the most milk. At least one pound of cottonseed meal should be included in the daily grain ration.

HIGH GRADE—HIGH PRICE.

First grade butter is still in big demand in this country and the producers of good butter are realizing a nice margin in price over the producers of second grade butter. Because of foreign competition with our second grade butter the difference in price between first grade and second grade is wide. Foreign competition has not materially increased the supply of first grades, while the supply of seconds has been increased tremendously.

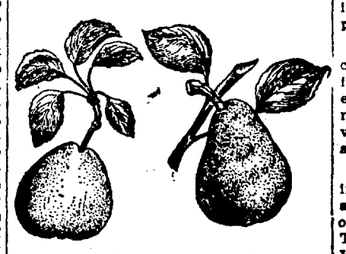
MAKE THE COLLAR FIT.

Horses' necks differ in shape and it is wrong to make them wear a collar that was fitted to another horse. You would have galled feet if you wore other than your own shoes. Much worse for the horse that pulls a load with a misfit collar.

THE PEAR VARIETIES ARE NUMEROUS

By G. B. BRACKETT.

The pear has long been regarded as one of the most luscious of the many kinds of fruit brought under cultivation. The choice varieties excel most apples in rich, juicy texture and delicacy of flavor, and for both dessert and culinary purposes, either canned or in the fresh state, the pear is considered a great acquisition. With a proper selection of varieties and with careful handling and storing of the fruit its season of use may be extended from midsummer to late winter without resorting to artificial means of preservation.



Seckel Pear. Bartlett Pear.

Two distinct classes or types of the pear are now grown in this country: (1) the European and (2) the Asiatic, or oriental.

The European type is a native of Europe; from it most of our domestic varieties have sprung. Pears of this class are well adapted to the New England States, New York, Pennsylvania and other States southward and westward to California, Washington, Oregon and Idaho. In the States named beyond the Rocky Mountains extensive commercial orchards have been planted with choice varieties of this class of pears, the Bartlett leading all other varieties in commercial plantings.

The Asiastic, or oriental, type is of comparatively recent introduction. In its natural condition it is scarcely an edible fruit and must receive an admixture of our improved European varieties in order to render it at all acceptable.

The more important varieties grown in America are hybrids, the results of artificial or accidental crossing with our domestic pears of European origin. To this class belong the Le Conte, Kieffer, Garber, Smith and other hybrids. While these are not considered as valuable for dessert use in the fresh state as varieties of the European type they are much esteemed for canning and culinary purposes. These hybrids are very productive and well adapted to a wide range of country extending from New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland and Virginia southward to Florida and Texas. In some of these States the industry has grown to large proportions. The Kieffer and La Conte are the varieties of the oriental type that have gained the greatest commercial prominence.

BREAKAGE OF JARS IN CANNING.

When breakage of jars occurs it is due to such causes as—

(1) Overpacking jars. Corn, pumpkin, peas, lima beans and sweet potatoes swell or expand in processing. Do not fill the jars quite full of these products.

(2) Placing cold jars in hot water, or vice versa. As soon as the jars are filled with hot sirup or hot water, place immediately in the canner.

(3.) If top cracks during sterilization the wire bail was too tight.

(4) In steam canner, having too much water in the canner. Water should not come above the platform.

(5) Allowing cold draft to strike the jars when they are removed from the canner.

(6) Having wire bail too tight, thus breaking the jars or glass tops when lever is forced down.

BLACKBERRIES.

Grow blackberries for home use; there is no healthier fruit.

Grow blackberries for profit; there is no other berry that will yield greater returns for the time spent on it.

Plant them, cultivate them and give them a chance and they will do the rest.

FIRE BLIGHT HARD TO CHECK.

The only known means of checking fire blight is to cut and burn all the affected parts before the disease is carried to the rest of the orchard by bees and other insects, or has a chance to spread through the twigs themselves. The pruning tools may carry the germs if not carefully disinfected by either dipping them into a 1 to 1000 solution of corrosive sublimate, or wiping them with a rag or sponge which has been dampened with such a solution carried in a small bottle for this purpose. Corrosive sublimate—also called bichloride of mercury—may be purchased at any drug store in small bottles containing about twenty-five tablets apiece with directions for dissolving these tablets and making solutions of any desired strength.

PREVENT FLIES FROM BREEDING.

The housekeeper should insist that not a drop of slop of any kind be thrown about the door, and that all sink-drains and cesspools be securely covered and that no open slop pails be allowed to stand near the house, inviting a congregation of these summer pests.

MAYOR HOSEY DEFINES JITNEY STAND AGAIN

Says He Has No Grudge Against Traction Co. But He Wants Service.

"Service for the people of Fort Wayne is my only reason for fighting the bond for jitneys," Mayor Hosey said Saturday. "A bond will drive out the taxis. It would rob thousands of people of needed service.

"This is not a new fight for me. 'Hoseyism' is not a new term. In 1901 and 1902, when the council forced the street railway company to extend its lines all over the city, I was in the thick of the fight. They used 'Hoseyism' then. The street car people used all their stock arguments against me. I was dead politically, they said. Finally, the people understood that some of us were fighting for them.

"The extended lines were a great help to Fort Wayne. They caused the city to grow wherever the car lines went. Where some of the editors now live was waving corn fields. The extension of the lines did not break up the street car company then. It would not injure them now to extend lines.

"That is one of the things we have been after. The street car company ignores us. We especially wanted more lines in Bloomingdale and were told that 'it wouldn't pay.' They refused to run bus lines in that region. They would rather people would walk six squares to take a car.

"The jitneys are giving service to those people. Jitneys are running into other parts of town where the street car does not penetrate. Jitneys are helping workmen to leave the factories earlier in the evening. They should not be put out of business by the council.

"Back of all the fight to ruin the jitney business is the street car officials. They have been kicking all the time about the unfair competition. They are putting out the argument about respecting the capital they have invested here. They say we are trying to scare capital away. That is rot. A picture show manager who invests his capital here does not expect us to close all other picture shows. He expects competition.

"I have no grudge against the street car people, except that they have not made service their watchword in Fort Wayne. They look only to the easiest nickles. The matter of the biggest per cent. on their investment is foremost.

"I will not oppose a license for jitneys. I do not oppose their being regulated. I think they are operated by responsible men. I want them to have to be run right. I do not want them choked out of business when they are supplying a city need."

CHICAGO GRAIN AND PROVISIONS.

Chicago, Aug. 19—Wheat shorts covered their contracts on a large scale today and early prices were up more than 3c, compared with yesterday's close. December opened 1½c to 3½c higher at $1.50½ to $1.48½ and sold at $1.50⅝. May advanced to $1.54, 3½c over yesterday.
Hot weather and the wheat strength sent corn up. December opened ⅞c to ⅞c higher at 74½c to 74⅜c and sold to 74c. September advanced to 86c, a gain of 1⅛c.
Oats were active and firm.

THE DAY ON WALL STREET.

New York, Aug. 19.—Today's session was mainly devoted to the usual week end settlement of outstanding professional contracts, these being more numerous because of the recent activity in specialties. Marines and United Fruit were pressed for sale but increased strength was shown by allied issues. Atlantic, Gulf and West Indies making a new record. Few changes of note occurred in the investment group, rails being held in check, pending definite word from Washington. Leading industrials, munitions and motors were dull. The closing was irregular. Bonds were steady.
Shipping shares were under pressure at today's opening, the recent advance in those issues, coupled with adverse foreign advices inviting profit taking and short selling. Marine common and preferred yielded a point each with 2¼ for United Fruit, but Atlantic, Gulf and West Indies made a new high record at 72 before it reacted. Rails continued to reflect the shifting state of the labor controversy, although Reading was the only issue to manifest heaviness. U. S. Steel and other seasoned industrials were steady, with moderate recessions in motors and some equipments.

NEW YORK BANK STATEMENT.

BABY BOND FOR FUTURER BUSINESS

"I am employed by a firm in which I believe I shall be able to purchase an interest some day," said a local young man, "and I see no better way of accumulating the necessary capital than to invest a portion of my salary each month in Baby Bonds."
Baby Bonds come in $10 denominations, are secured by first mortgages on local real estate, and bear six per cent. interest. There are also some $500 bonds with the same security and the same rate of interest. For further information, see the Wildwood Sales company, Shoaff building.—Advertisement.

NEW RECORD BY ALEXANDER.

Cincinnati, O., Aug. 19.—According to records in the hands of the national baseball commission a shutout game pitched by Alexander, of the Philadelphia Nationals, here yesterday establishes a new record for no-run games pitched by one pitcher during a major league season. Up to last year, according to these records, Mathewson, pitching for New York, held the honor with twelve shutout games during a season. Alexander equaled this last year and surpassed it yesterday, when he pitched his thirteenth shutout of this season.

"The boy can never take all that in," said the father. "He wants to get through quicker. Can you arrange it for him?" "Oh, yes," said Mr. Garfield. "He can take a short course; it all depends on what you want to make of him. When God wants to make an oak He takes a hundred years, but He takes only two months to make a squash."

RAIL HEADS GIVEN WARNING BY WILSON

MR. ADAIR IS HEARD IN MILITANT KEYNOTE

Congressman Adair's address delivered at Robison park Saturday afternoon, will be found in full on page 14 of The Sentinel.

Congressman John A. M. Adair, democratic candidate for governor, was greeted by a large and enthusiastic crowd at 2:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon, at Robison park, when he arose to deliver his keynote address of the democratic campaign in Indiana. The occasion marked the opening of the campagin and was one of the most notable events of its knd that the party has ever held in the Hoosier state.

Following the speech-making a reception will be held for the democratic state candidates, nearly all of whom were in attendance. Then comes the big barbecue.

The morning hours were devoted to the arrival of visiting delegates from all parts of the state and at noon about one hundred democratic editors partook of a sumptuous dinner at the Hotel Anthony, followed by short addresses by Mr. Adair, Carl Germer, of the Auburn Courier, J. W. Adams, of the Columbia City Post, and George Bittler, state treasurer.

Many Democrats at Park.

Thousands of democrats were at the park when Mr. Adair arose to speak. He discussed democratic issues pretty thoroughly. He told them "the coming campaign means more to the American people than any contest in which we have entered in a quarter of a century. He declared that "we must decide in November whether we will go back to the republican panics, when factories were closed, workingmen were idle and business was paralyzed, or whether we will continue to enjoy under Woodrow Wilson the greatest degree of prosperity our nation has ever known."

"The most remarkable thing in connection with state and national politics," he said, "is the fact that neither of the keynote speakers of the republican state convention or the republican national convention offered any criticism of the constructive legislation passed by our party in the state or nation—legislation under which we are more prosperous than ever before, and legislation no part of which any party will dare tell the people they will repeal."

Discusses State Issues.

Mr. Adair referred to the excellent service to the people of Indiana through the public service commission of Indiana, through the vocational education law, through the workmen's compensation law, through the fire marshal law, through the public printing law, which saves $50,000 a year to the state by providing competitive bids and dividing the contract into classifications, through the inheritance tax law, the registration law and arbitration law. He declared the republicans have no issue in this campaign.

Mr. Adair was in good voice and good spirits. He is making a strenuous campaign and Friday was nearly overcome with the intense heat. Immediately upon his arrival in Fort Wayne Saturday morning he went to his room in the Hotel Anthony and rested, denying himself to callers until time for the editor's dinner.

Very Much Alive.

Indiana democracy is very much alive, judging from the amount of enthusiasm displayed at the park and the tremendous outburst of applause that greeted Mr. Adair. His reference to President Woodrow Wilson was also an occasion for prolonged applause.

In every respect the meeting was

BOY OF 17 TRIES TO WRECK A TRAIN

George Gotzman is Arrested for Placing an Obstruction on Track.

George Gotzman, 17, who gave his address as 4567 West Fourty-Sixth street, Cleveland, was bound over to the circuit court of Kosciusko county on a charge of placing obstructions on a railroad track.

Gotzman was arrested by Nickel Plate Detective Bunk, Friday evening, after a day of anxiety in which Gotzman and two youthful companions played the roll of petty bandits. The lads first broke the lock on a hand car and dragged the car upon the tracks, near Tippecanoe. A farmer saw the boys pushing the car along the tracks and telephoned the railroad station. Bunk was notified and started on the trail.

Later in the day the youths placed several brake shoes and other objects on the track near Sidney. A freight engine, drawing only a caboose, went bumping over the obstructions. It is a miracle that the train was not wrecked, members of the crew say. The men looked around for the boys who had tried to wreck the train. Gotzman says they were hiding in a nearby corn field all the time.

The boys started towards Sidney. They met Detective Bunk. The lads ran. Bunk caught Gotzman. The other two youths, Edward Hanes, 15, and John Feezer, 14, both in knee trousers, fled into a woods.

Bunk organized a posse of Sidney citizens. They scoured the woods and all surrounding fields in vain. No trace of Gotzman's companions has been found. Gotzman was brought to Fort Wayne and arraigned in police court. The crime was committed in Kosciusko county and so Gotzman was bound to courts there.

"We just did it for fun," Gotzman said when asked why they put objects on the track. "We were just knocking around over the country."

INSPECTION OFFICER HERE MONDAY EVENING

Capt. Clarence Deems, jr., Sixth field artillery, U. S. A., has wired to Capt. John C. Scheffer, commanding officer of the local artillery organization, Battery D, that he will arrive in Fort Wayne on Monday morning. Federal inspection of the battery will take place Monday evening and Capt. Scheffer is sending out urgent notices to all members of the organization to be present on that evening.

Capt. Deems was instructed Friday by the adjutant general at Indianapolis to inspect the Fort Wayne battery. Word was received from the general to this effect asking that Capt. Scheffer arrange the date.

The local officers are confident that the sending of the federal inspector to Fort Wayne signifies that the battery is soon to be ordered to report at Fort Benjamin Harrison.

VESEY IS APPOINTED.

W. J. Vesey, Jr., of this city, has been appointed a member of the advisory council of the Indiana Coliseum club from Allen county.

TROOP CAMPS STORM SWEPT

Guardsmen's Headquarters in Pathway of Tropical Hurricane.

70-Mile Wind There Carries Everything Movable Before It.

El Paso, Texas, Aug. 19.—With army wireless reports stating there had been comparatively little damage and no known loss of life in the Brownsville district, chief anxiety centered early today on the situation at Corpus Christi and that vicinity as a result of the tropical storm which struck the Texas gulf coast yesterday morning. The only loss of life so far reported was in the sinking in the gulf of Mexico of the small steamer Pilot Boy, plying between Galveston and Corpus Christi.

The vessel carried a crew of thirteen, only three of whom have as yet been reported saved. These three were washed ashore alive at Port Arkansas, Texas.

Last Wires Go Out.

The last telegraph wires into Corpus Christi failed at 2:40 o'clock yesterday afternoon and the last telephone line went out shortly before 7 o'clock last night. Last reports from Corpus Christi placed the velocity of the wind at seventy miles an hour and it was stated the storm was expected to increase in intensity until midnight, when the crest would be reached. Nothing later has been heard.

The storm had abated somewhat at Brownsville at 11 o'clock, according to wireless reports to army headquarters, the only means of communication with that city. The messages stated, however, another storm was reported as approaching from an easterly direction. The storm played havoc among the army camps in the Brownsville district, practically half of the tents having been blown down by the storm, and loss of considerable army equipment was reported.

In Public Buildings.

Fully thirty thousand national guardsmen and regular soldiers, it was stated, were sleeping in public buildings in Brownsville last night. The guardsmen principally affected were those from Illinois, Iowa and Virgina. Their camps were either destroyed by the wind or flooded with water from a four and one-half inch rain. Fear was entertained that immense quantities of army stores and supplies would be ruined.

Last reports from Corpus Christi stated the storm had carried almost everything movable before it, leaving in its wake dozens of demolished summer cottages and thousands of dollars of damage in the business section. Many small craft in Corpus Christi bay were thrown high on the beach, it was said. Railroad property, however, was said to have not been greatly damaged and reopening of communication by rail at

Atmospheric High Jinks in Northwest Will Not Lower Heat Here.

Indianapolis, Ind., Aug. 19.—The atmosphere disturbance in the northwest, which it was hoped would cause relief from the present hot wave in Indiana, may pass too far north to do much good. Observers at the local weather bureau say that relief may not come until next week. The forecast was for the present hot wave to continue over tomorrow at least. The temperatures over the country are reported 10 to 12 degrees above the average for the time of year. The low in Indianapolis was 76 at 6 o'clock this morning. At noon the mercury stood at 91 and was still going up.

WILL UNDERTAKE LONG SWIM

Nearly Fifty Miles in Route of Two Eastern Experts.

Provincetown, Mass., Aug. 19.—From the tip of Cape Cod to Nantasket beach, a distance in an air line of about 38 miles, is the long swim which will be undertaken tonight by Henry Sullivan of Lowell, and Charles Toth of this city. The men will start their race at 6 p. m. It is figured that allowing for the action of the tides, the actual distance to be covered if either of them is successful, will be nearly fifty miles. Both men are experienced long distance swimmers.

FRANK X. SCHILLING.

Frank L. Schilling is a democrat. He is 92 years old. He lives at 1001 West Jefferson street. This pioneer resident says he has always worked for the democratic ticket and it is no departure for him to vote a straight ballot. He has reaffirmed his stand for democracy.

The pioneer is a war veteran and likes to see fighting blood in a president. "How will the parties line up this fall?" he was asked. And his answer was, "You can't tell."

Mr. Schilling has resided in Fort Wayne a greater part of his life. For two years he lived at Wheeling, W. Va., but during all this time he has been a democrat.

ATHLETIC BURGLAR UNDER HEAVY BOND

Jacob Woods is Captured After Breaking Into Shields' Store.

Zouave like, Jacob Woods, 35, laborer, from South Whitley, used a pineapple crate to aid him in scaling the side of the brick wall until he could reach the sill of a little window in the store of the Shields Clothing company, 722 Calhoun street. The window is twenty feet from the alley.

Woods broke the window. He climbed down into the storeroom, tramping shirt boxes and leaving his shoemarks on shelves as he wormed his way to the floor. He took a large leather suitcase and loaded it with clothing. He opened the cash register and found but fifteen cents. He took those. Then he made his exit by the rear door.

That was about midnight and Watchman Ed Brockmeyer found the open back door half an hour later. He called Manager Rinehart, of the Shields company, and notified the police. Rinehart missed the suitcase and two suits of clothes. He gave an accurate description of the suitcase.

Officer Cantwell and Brockmeyer hurried to the Nickel Plate railroad station where they found Woods on the platform. They identified him by the suitcase. He had purchased a ticket for South Whitley and was waiting for a train.

"I guess the jig is up," were his first words.

In the suitcase were two suits of clothes, several neckties and a $4 hat. He waived examination in police court Saturday morning and was bound over to the circuit court under $1,000 bond.

ENGINEERS LEFT FOR ANGOLA TO APPRAISE

Engineering corps under direction of D. K. Van Ingen, head engineer, who have been in Fort Wayne for ten days getting appraisement of New York Central railroad properties for the interstate commerce commission, left Saturday morning for Angola, where they will remain for ten days in the same work.

The private car of the engineers will be ready for occupancy when they start work at Angola. While in this city the engineers had quarters at the federal building because their car was up for repairs. Out of Fort Wayne twenty-eight miles of track was appraised. The engineers have 400 miles of track to appraise on the main and spur lines of the New York Central between Fort Wayne and Jackson, Mich., before Jan. 1, 1917.

MASKED MEN GET PAYROLL

Pittsburg, Pa., Aug. 19.—Two masked men today entered the office of the Pittsburg stopped company, and holding a revolver at the head of A. Steinberg, the paymaster, took the payroll of $300 from his desk and escaped.

Township Trustee Refuses to Surrender Office to Successor.

Two Conflicting Sections of Law Are Cited by Convicted Official.

Henry P. Scherer, Wayne township trustee, has refused to surrender office.

He stated Saturday that he would not give up his office until proceedings in quo warranto had tested the law as to his right to retain office pending appeal of his case to the supreme court. Scherer was voted guilty of misappropriating township funds by a circuit court jury. Judge W. H. Eichhorn, of Bluffton, entered judgment on the verdict Friday, declaring Scherer's office vacant.

Hamilton Is Named.

Allen Hamilton was appointed by the county commissioners to be Scherer's successor. He had not filed his bond of $1,000 early Saturday. Mr. Hamilton called at the office of the township trustee Friday evening and Saturday morning, but until his bond is approved he is not regularly in office.

State Is Through.

Frank A. Emrick, state's attorney, said Saturday that the prosecution had done its work. It is necessary for Mr. Hamilton to make a demand for the office. Judge Eichhorn did not give definite interpretation of the law governing holding of office pending an appeal of a case of a person charged wit ha felony, but his judgment on the verdict declared Scherer removed.

Basis of Scherer Claim.

The following is the law (Sec. 9663, Burns' Statutes, 1908) upon which Scherer bases his right to hold office: "In case any state, county, township, municipal or other public officer shall be convicted of felony, the office held by such officer shall be vacated by such judgment of conviction and the vacancy existing therein shall be immediately filled by appointment as provided by law, provided that in case of an appeal to the appellate or supreme court, said office shall not be vacated pending such appeal."

Another Section Shown.

Section 9660 of Burns' Statutes, 1908, says: "Appeal to Supreme Court—From a judgment of removal an appeal may be taken to the supreme court, but until such judgment is reversed the defendant is suspended from his office. Pending an appeal the office must be filled as in the case of a vacancy." This section was passed in 1897, and the former section in 1899. Mr. Scherer asserts the quo warranto proceedings must decide between the two sections.

COMMITTEE VISITS CANTON, O., Y. M. C. A.

The building and site committee for Fort Wayne's new Y. M. C. A. building returned Friday from Canton, O., where they inspected a new $198,000 Y. M. C. A. structure. The ground for the Canton building cost $19,000 and the equipment $25,000.

In many ways the building and site committee was impressed with what it saw. The main part of the Canton building is nine stories high, and there are about ninety dormitories. The structure is modern as to swimming pool and gymnasium.

While in Canton the Fort Wayne men visited the new auditorium which seats 4,000 and in which winter lecture courses are given under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A. Last year a lecture course was put on including six features for $1.50.

GERMAN CROWN PRINCE HAS NOT BEEN WOUNDED

Paris, Aug. 19.—The report that the German crown prince, Frederick William, is wounded and is in a hospital at Verdun, is authoritatively denied. The report that he had been wounded is based upon Zurich dispatch to the Italia, of Milan, saying that a Swiss officer, returning from the German frontier, was told by a German officer that the crown prince had been wounded in the head and one of his legs with splinters of a shell and that he was being treated in an unnamed hospital. No confirmation of this report is obtainable here.

ROADS' PRESIDENTS AS YET UNYIELDING

"If Strike Comes, Public Will Know Where Responsibility Rests," Wilson's Declaration to Them.

Washington, Aug. 19.—After an hour's conference with President Wilson today the 33 railroad presidents left the white house without giving any indication that they had abandoned their stand for arbitration but with assurances that the negotiations were not ended.

The railroad executives gave no final answer to the president's proposals but will deliberate on them today and see President Wilson again probably Monday.

In his address to the officials president Wilson said: "If a strike comes the public will know where the responsibility rests. It will not be upon me."

The president informed the officials that they were discussing an impractical thing in the present crisis when they mentioned arbitration, for the employes would not accept arbitration and he had no way of forcing them to accept it.

Speaks for Whole Public.

President Wilson declared he was the spokesman for 100,000,000 people, every one of whom had a deep interest in the present situation. His only object, he said, was to avoid a strike with its consequent disaster to the nation.

As President Wilson spoke to the officials he paced up and down before them in the blue room. Several times he emphasized points with a clinched fist. He spoke solemnly, often paused and faced them as he asked that they accept his plan.

Were Equally Solemn.

The railroad officials were equally solemn and Mr. Holden told the president they realized the seriousness of the situation.

"We must face the naked truth in this crisis," said the president. "We must not discuss impractical things. We must get down to a basis on which the situation can be solved."

While President Wilson was conferring with the executives he made public a statement outlinging his plan and declared it seemed to him a "thoroughly practical and entirely fair program and I think the public has a right to expect its acceptance."

One ray of hope that it might induce the railroad managers to make concessions stood out in a suggestion that the interstate commerce commission might determine whether it would be right to increase freight rates to meet the added compensation to employes.

The President's Statement.

The president's statement follows:

"I have recommended the concession of the eight-hour day—that is, the substitution of an eight-hour day for the present ten-hour day—in all the existing practices and agreements. I made this recommendation because I believe the concession right. The eight-hour day undoubtedly has the sanction of the judgment of society

Republican Nominee Busy Every Minute at San Francisco.

San Francisco, Aug. 19.—Charles Evans Hughes, republican presidential nominee, has a busy day of speech making before him here and at Oakland today. In addition he is expected to continue conferences looking to the restoration of harmony between California progressives and republicans.

His program called for four addresses, three in this city and one at Oakland. At 11 o'clock this morning he spoke at the Union Iron works, from 12 to 2 he was the guest at luncheon of the Commercial club and at 2:30 the nominee will address the California country newspaper men's conference.

This afternoon at 3:30 o'clock Mr. Hughes will address a mass meeting at the Oakland auditorium. At the conclusion of his address across the bay the nominee will return to San Francisco and remain at leisure until 8 o'clock, when he and his party depart for Los Angeles.

TEUTON LINE AGAIN BROKEN

The Russian drive on Kovel has been successfully resumed, Petrograd announces today. After having been held up for some time along the Stokhod General Brussilof's forces have broken through the Austro-German lines about forty miles northeast of Kovel at Czerwiszcze, making a notable advance, according to the official statement. Although there has been heavy fighting in this Volhynian region during the last fortnight the main Russian effort in this period has been exerted in Galicia in a drive for Lemberg from the east and southeast. This offensive movement has shown signs of a temporary slackening during the last few days and it now appears that the Russian thrust at Kovel, a vital point in the Teutonic defensive line because of its importance as a railway center, is again being given precedence by the Russian chief command.

On the western front heavy fighting continues in the Somme region and at Verdun. North of the Somme the entente allies, after their gains of yesterday, when they scored successes at several points between Pozieres and the river, are busy withstanding counter attacks. The French report today declares the Germans were repulsed repeatedly after violent fighting.

Northeast of Verdun the Germans have been forced out of the remainder of the ruined edge of the village of Fleury, which they occupied, Paris announces. Stubborn fighting is continuing along this sector of the Verdun front.

Southeast of Gorizia the Austrians are determinedly facing the Italians and have now begun counter attacks in efforts to prevent a further advance of the Duke of Aosta's armies towards Triest. Today's bulletin from Rome announces the prompt checking of an attack upon the left wing of the Italian positions on the Carso plateau.

The sinking of the Italian passenger liner Stampalia, a steamer of 9,000 tons, which has been plying the route between New York and Italian ports, is reported from London. Private advices indicate that the steamer may have been recently requisitioned by the Italian government.

Petrograd, Aug. 19.—(Via London, 3:46 p. m.)—The Russians have broken through the Austro-German lines on the Stokhod river in Volhynia and have made a considerable advance, it was announced today.

The break in the Austro-German front was made in the region of the village of Czerwiszcze, forty miles northeast of Kovel.

BRITISH LINES ADVANCE

London, Aug. 19.—(4:40 p. m.)—The British line on the Somme front has been

Gen. Funston Advises Withdrawal of Troops

Washington, Aug. 19.—While Secretary Baker and other war department officials refuse to confirm or deny reports that Maj. Gen. Funston has recommended immediate withdrawal of Gen. Pershing's expedition from Mexico, there were indications today that such a message had been received. Maj. Gen. Bliss, assistant chief of staff, who returned yesterday from the border, conferred several days with Gen. Funston and also went to Gen. Pershing's lines in Mexico. Secretary Baker conferred with Gen. Bliss yesterday and later saw President Wilson.

Gen. Bliss is preparing a report on the mobilization of the national guard and it is considered possible he may have joined Gen. Funston in urging that the troops be withdrawn from Mexico as the concensus of military opinion appear to be serving no useful purpose as at present disposed. The withdrawal of the troops is the first subject to be taken up by the joint international commission

Annual Picnic Will Be Held August 27 — Other Lodge Doings.

Something new and original has been planned by the officers of the Fort Wayne lodge, No. 200, Loyal Order of Moose. On Sunday, August 27, the annual picnic of the order will be held at Radhert's grove, at which time it is planned to initiate three hundred candidates. The initintion will take place at 11 o'clock in the morning in the shade offered by the trees of the woods.

Allen Martin and Isadore Sorg have been named captains of two teams which will engage in a tug of war. Other entertainments and amusements will also be furnished. A bountiful breakfast will be served from 6 o'clock in the morning until 12 at noon, and a dinner will be served from noon until dark.

William Trickett Giles, of Moosheart, Ill., supreme secretary of the order, will be present at this annual event.

Ask City to Honor Dead.

Lawton Camp, No. 35, United States war veterans, appointed a committee at a meeting held Friday evening which will draft resolutions and present them to the mayor and officials requesting them to have the flags of the city lowered to half mast when a veteran of the civil war or Spanish war passes away. The committee is composed of Edward Cook, S. S. Kelker, Henry Guyer and John H. Johnson.

Woodmen Picnic Today.

Edward's camp, No. 3127, Modern Woodmen of America, gave its annual picnic Saturday afternoon in Swinney park. A large crowd took part in the joyful occasion. Prizes were offered to the winners in the various contests. Refreshments were served on the grounds.

Grotto Outing Sunday.

Members and wives of Cadessia Grotto, No. 50, will go to Tri-lakes Sunday, where the annual outing and picnic will be given. Automobiles will leave Court street at 8:30 o'clock in the morning and carry people to the famous lake resort. A program of events has been planned.

Yeoman Picnic.

The three homesteads of the Brotherhood of American Yeomen will hold their annual picnic at Robison park Sunday, August 27. Ex-Governor Clark, of Kansas, will be the speaker of the afternoon. Following the program a competitive drill will be given. The various homesteads over the entire state will send representatives. A basket dinner will be served at noon. The executive committee, composed of five members from each of the three local homesteads, compose the comittee on arrangements.

SALES VS. SERVICE

Important Factor in Eye Specialization.

States have legislated the "Spec Peddler" out of business because it is a known fact that glasses cannot be safely fitted without a painstaking, careful examination.

Some people sell glasses. Meigs, the Eyesight Specialist, 1012 Calhoun, sells eyeglass service, which means that if he makes your glasses he sells you guaranteed satisfaction. No extra charge for examination.

GRAND JURY ORDERS PROSECUTOR EJECTED

Sheriff Marches J. Frank Mann from Jury Room at Muncie.

Muncie, Ind., Aug. 19.—Prosecutor J. Frank Mann was led out of the grand jury room yesterday by Deputy Sheriff Clinton Stradling, after the grand jurors had refused to permit him to conduct an investigation and had ordered him from the room. Prosecutor Mann refused to go until he was escorted by the sheriff.

Although Special Prosecutor Wilbur Ryman, who was active in the graft charges against Mayor Rollin H. Bunch and other city officials, was appointed special prosecutor by Judge Frank Ellis to investigate matters pertaining to the prosecutor's office, he nevertheless commenced an inquiry regarding the issuance of retail saloon licenses by the county commissioners.

Charles H. Mitchell, manager of the Delaware hotel, of this city, it is alleged, has made public statements that it "cost him $500 extra" to get his license, and he was haled before the grand jury to explain his statement.

The session of the jury was called by Ryman, and Prosecutor Mann went to the court house yesterday morning, entered the grand jury room and announced his willingness to proceed with any investigation the grand jury desired to make. Judge Ellis was called in and he prevailed upon Mann to leave, but Mann stuck, with the statement that he was the regularly elected and acting prosecutor, and that he did not intend to leave until forced. The grand jury then voted to exclude him and the sheriff was called to enforce the order.

ANNUAL CONVENTION OPENS.

German Catholic Central Verein in Session in New York.

New York, Aug. 19.—The German Catholic Central verein began its annual convention here today with a meeting of the committee on resolutions. This afternoon there will be a meeting of the executive board of the German society, followed by a reception to delegates, of whom there are about 3,000.

EAGLES INSTALL OFFICERS.

Grand Aerie is Completing Its Work at Savannah.

Savannah, Ga., Aug. 19.—The final business session of the eighteenth annual meeting of the grand aerie of the Fraternal Order of Eagles was scheduled to be held here today. Installation of officers was the only business remaining to be transacted before adjournment. The convention began Monday.

Bell Gives Signal That 85-Pound Catfish Is Caught at Marion.

Marion, Ind., Aug. 19.—Lon Reynolds caught an 85-pound catfish in the Wabash river yesterday. When the fish was cut open a live fish which weighed almost two pounds flopped out. The big fish, by tugging at the line, gave a signal to the fisherman who had hung a bell on the sapling to which he attached his line.

DEMAND CLOSED SHOP, ALSO.

Toledo Street Railway Employes Add to Their Terms.

Toledo, O., Aug. 19.—Street car men employed by the Toledo Railways and Light company met again this morning and decided to include the closed shop in their demands to be presented to the company. A strike is certain, it was said, after the meeting, unless the demands are granted.

advanced over a section two miles long and 200 to 600 yards deep from Highwood to the junction point with the French forces, the war office announced today.

British naval aeroplanes raided German ammunition stations at Lichtervelde, in Belgium, thirteen miles southwest of Bruges, yesterday, causing large fires, the war office announced today. Forty-eight bombs were dropped from a height of about 3,000 feet. Large fires were afterward observed.

"All the machines returned safely," the official report says.

AUSTRIANS RAID AVLONA.

Make Successful Air Attack on Point Held by Italians.

Berlin, Aug. 19.—A successful air raid on Avlona, Albania, held by the Italians, is reported in an Austrian admiralty statement today. It says:

"On the night of Aug. 14-15 definite hits were obtained on a shore battery and on the barracks, a camp, a storehouse and a ship. Numerious fires broke out."

Naval aeroplanes, with the aid of torpedo craft and motor boats, made an attack on the Austrian seaport of Triest on the morning of Aug. 14, says an Austrian admiralty statement today. Several of the rading craft were brought down and although a number of bombs were dropped, little damage was done, it is declared.

An Italian statement on Aug. 15 reported a raid by Italian and French naval aeroplanes and other air craft on munition factories and the hangar at Muggia, near Triest, which was declared to have caused numerous destructive fires. The French lost one aeroplane, but otherwise all the squadron returned safely to its base, the statement asserted.

CAPTURE REMAINING RUINS.

French Occupancy of Fleury, on Verdun Front, Now Complete.

Paris, Aug. 19.—(Noon.)—The remainder of the ruins of the edge of the village of Fleury, on the Verdun front, was captured last night by the French, the war office announced today. The battle continued violently all night long and the French won their way forward foot by foot.

German counter attacks were made repeatedly on the Somme front. The statement says the Germans were repulsed after violent fighting, leaving fifty prisoners in the hands of the French.

Sub-Lieutenant George Guynemer, of French flying corps, whose exploits have won him a reputation as one of the most daring of French aviators, is again mentioned by the war office in today's statement. On Aug. 8 he won his fourteenth adversary.

ITALIAN STEAMER SUNK.

Liner Stamphalia is Sent Down by Torpedo From Submarine.

London, Aug. 19.—The Italian steamship Stampalia, of 9,000 tons gross, which plies between New York and Italian ports, has been sunk, says a dispatch to Lloyds'.

The Stampalia, a passenger liner in common with other Italian liners, mounted guns for protection from submarines. The last report of her movement was her arrival on July 30 at Genoa from New York, so that she apparently was sunk on the return voyage to the United States. She was commanded by Captain Lavarelle.

The Stampalia has accommodations for about 1,700 passengers. On her recent voyages from Italy to New York passenger traffic has been light and the agents in New York of the line said today she probably carried a comparatively small number of passengers. A crew numbered about 250.

No word had been received in New York by the agents of the line of the reported sinking of the Stampalia at the time of the arrival of the London press dispatch. The Stampalia first appeared in New York as an armed steamer in February last, arriving from Genoa with two 3-inch rapid-fire guns mounted on her aft deckhouse. Washington was notified and on being informed that the guns were to be used for defensive purposes only instructed the collector of the port of New York to grant clearance papers.

On arriving at New York on March 24 the Stampalia said a wireless warning had been received soon after leaving Genoa that a submarine was lying in wait for her off Sardina. Instead of sailing north of Sardina and the north shore of the Mediterranean, which before that time had proved the safest route, she went south of Sardina and through the strait of Bonifacio, between Sardina and Corsica.

Several armed Italian steamships have reported sighting submarines in the Mediterranean and in some instances being pursued by them and firing on them. Italian naval gunners were detailed to service on armed passenger vessels to operate the guns.

When the Italian steamship Re d'Italia arrived in New York Aug. 6 from Genoa her captain reported she had fired on three submarines in the Mediterranean. The steamship was pursued for seven hours and passengers said they believed one of the submarines had been sunk.

The New York agents for the Stampalia said today that two weeks ago they had received a cable message advising them that all sailings of the steamship had been canceled. They express the opinion on this account that the Stampalia had been requisitioned and was in the service of the Italian government. In this case it would have no passengers on board.

MR. ADAIR IS HEARD IN MILITANT KEYNOTE

fully up to expectations, the program being carried out as per schedule. It could not have been otherwise, however, with District Chairman Martin H. Luecke in charge.

The barbecue will start at 4:30 o'clock. A man experienced in staging barbecues is in charge. He was brought here by Mr. Luecke from Arkansas, where democratic barbecues have been the custom for years. It is Fort Wayne's first barbecue, however, and for that reason unusual interest attaches to the event aside from its political features. Ten quarters of beef, 300 watermelons, 3,000 ears of corn, 300 gallons of milk and many other good things are on the bill of fare. Everything was prepared right at the park and under the most sanitary methods. The melted butter is even applied to the ears of corn with brushes that have been thoroughly sterilized.

The delegations began to arrive early Saturday, coming from all parts of the state. The following county chairmen outside of the district brought large delegations in special cars: Henry B. Heller, Decatur; A. W. Hamilton, Bluffton; Alfred Davis, Muncie; D. W. Callahan, Winchester; George Hall, Portland; Thomas McCulloch, Anderson; Charles Terrell, Marion.

Portland, the home of the democratic nominee, is well represented. Mr. Adair has been almost a lifelong resident of Portland. He is honored and respected by his home folks, regardless of party affiliations, and they believe he is going to be elected.

Cline Is Not Coming.

Congressman Cyrus Cline has sent a telegram to District Chairman Martin H. Luecke stating his inability to be present. The telegram, read at the meeting Saturday afternoon, follows:

"It is with sincere regret that I am unable to participate with you in opening the state campaign in the Twelfth district, as I had proposed to do. What Indiana is to the nation politically Allen county is to the state—a sure, dependable element in party success. The democratic party enters this campaign with confidence that the people regardless of party affiliation will reward its substantial legislative achievement for the whole people by returning it to power abundant and permanent. Prosperity for everybody and the democratic party go hand in hand."

Chairman Is Here.

Hon. Albert Sahm, of Indianapolis, who was selected to act as chairman of the meeting in the absence of State Chairman Bernard Korbly, who was prevented from participating on account of illness, arrived Saturday morning. Mr. Sahm is an optimistic democrat. He believes that the democratic party is going to win in both the nation and state next November. He is a German and was recently appointed to a place on the national campaign committee. He was postmaster at Indianapolis during the last Cleveland administration, and was at one time auditor of Marion county. Mr. Sahm is an influential member of the German-American Democratic club, of Indianapolis, and is secretary and treasurer of the State Life Insurance company.

Hoffman Is Popular.

There is no more popular person in attendance at the meeting than Hon. E. G. Hoffman, of this city, democratic national committeeman. Everybody knows him apparently, and he knows everybody. Another Fort Wayneite who is popular at the meeting is George Bittler, state treasurer. Mr. Bittler will remain here over Sunday, returning to Indianapolis Monday.

State candidates who were present for the democratic barbecue included: For governor, John A. M. Adair; for lieutenant-governor, Mason J. Niblack; for secretary of state, Homer L. Cook; for auditor of state, Dale J. Crittenberger; for treasurer of state, George A. Bittler; for attorney general, Evan B. Stotsenberg; for supreme court (second district), Douglas Morris; for appellate court (northern division), James J. Moran; for appellate court (first district), John C. McNutt; for supreme court (third district), Charles E. Cox; for supreme court reporter, Philip Zoercher; for superintendent of public instruction, S. L. Scott; for state statistician, S. W. Kahn.

Aided in Reception.

The various branches of the Young Men's Democratic League of Allen County were a prime factor in the reception of visiting delegations Saturday at Robison park. Harry Muller, organizer of the young democrats of the county, sent a letter Friday to 1,000 young democrats of the county asking them to rally to make the barbecue from an entertainment standpoint one of the greatest of its kind ever held. There were many district delegations of young democrats. "The democratic party is the young man's party, the constructive, live party. Wilson is a young man's president," declared Mr. Muller's letter to the young voters.

in its favor and should be adopted as a basis of wages even where the actual work to be done cannot be completed within eight hours.

"Concerning the adjustments which should be made, in justice to the railroads and their stockholders, in the payments and privileges to which their men are now entitled (if such adjustments are necessary) there is a wide divergence of opinion.

"The railroads which have already adopted the eight-hour day do not seem to be at any serious disadvantage in respect of their cost of operation as compared with the railroads that have retained the ten-hour day, and calculations as to the cost of the change must, if made now, be made without regard to any possible administrative economies or readjustments.

"Only experience can make it certain what re-arrangements would be fair and equitable either on behalf of the men or on behalf of the railroads. That experience would be a definite guide to the interstate commerce commission for example in determining whether, as a consequence of the change, it would be necessary and right to authorize an increase of rates for the handling and carriage of freight (for passenger service is not affected).

"I therefore proposed that the demand for extra pay for overtime made by the men and the contingent proposals of the railroad authorities be postponed until facts shall have taken the place of calculations and forecast with regard to the effects of a change to the eight-hour day that, in the meantime, while experience was developing the facts, I should seek, and if need be, obtain authority from congress to appoint a small body of impartial men to observe and thoroughly acquaint themselves with the results with a view to reporting to congress at the earliest possible times the facts disclosed by their inquiries but without recommendation of any kind and that it should then be entirely open to either or both parties of the present controversy to give notice of a termination of the present agreements with a view to instituting inquiries into suggested readjustments of pay or practice.

"This seems to be a thoroughly practical and entirely fair program and I think that the public has the right to expect its acceptance."

Will Make Statement Soon.

The railroad presidents indicated they would make a statement soon. All said that the question was not closed and that the negotiations would be continued.

President Holden, of the Burlington, spokesman for the officials, said no time had been set for them to see President Wilson again, but that it was necessary to confer with the committee of managers, which has the authority to accept or reject plans.

Several of the executives indicated disappointment over President Wilson's statement, but showed particular interest in his mention of the possibility of the interstate commerce commission considering an increase in freight rates.

Talk to Executives.

In his talk to the executives today President Wilson told them they were facing a condition, not a principle. He asked why they should demand arbitration when there was no law for compulsory arbitration and he knew it to be impossible to get a compulsory arbitration law through congress. The employes, he recalled, had consistently refused arbitration and he believed it was impossible to gain it in the present controvery.

"I have been asked to sit as a judge," said the president in substance. I cannot do that. I simply can suggest a plan, a way in which I believe this question can be settled fairly to all sides."

President Wilson urged again that the railroads accept the plan, adopt the eight-hour day, at least temporarily, and then allow the proposed commission to fully investigate the facts. He pointed out that the railroads brought forward one set of statements and the employes another and it was impossible for him to tell which was correct.

Only Equitable Way.

In conclusion President Wilson said he believed his plan was the only equitable way of settling the controversy and that under it both sides would be treated fairly. He considered it useless to discuss the principle of arbitration when it seemed impossible to bring about an arbitration in the present crisis.

Mr. Holden gave President Wilson estimates of the cost of the eight-hour day to the railroads. President Wilson in reply urged that the railroad officials with the committee of managers very carefully consider his plan before giving any final answer. That was agreed to by the railroad executives.

It was learned definitely that in their acceptance of President Wilson's plan the employes made no reservation.

Not Hopeless, but Serious.

One of the railroad presidents said after the conference that he did not consider the situation hopeless, but that it was very serious. President Wilson, he said, had asked for a "showdown" and that the railroad officials would give a final answer as soon as possible.

In spite of tone adopted by some of the railroad officials the belief was current in administration circles that, however reluctantly, the railroads would make some concessions.

After the conference President Wilson telegraphed to a number of presidents of western railroads inviting them to come to Washington.

Summoned to White House.

The railroad heads were summoned to the white house for a conference at 11:30 o'clock. The employes' committee of 640 having voted to accept President Wilson's plan and thereby "put the thing up to the railroads" had another meeting today to talk things over.

Out of the maneuvering of both sides for a position which will enjoy the support of public opinion come many evidences that each is working to organize public sentiment in its favor and make it manifest in a positive way.

Turning to Other Employers.

It was understood today that the railroads are turning to other large employers of labor throughout the country to express their support of the preservation of arbitration as a settlement of industrial disputes while President Wilson and the employes are drawing support from large manufacturing and other interests ritally interested in keeping the railroads open for business, and from those who want to see the movement for the eight-hour day carried a long step forward.

The evidences point to moves by each side to "back fire" the other. The attitude of the railroad presidents to ask for time to consider the president's plan was said to be part of this program.

Hope for Counter-Proposal.

Hope existed, however, in the belief that the presidents might advance a counter-proposal, such, for example, as that they allow the eight-hour day principle but place collateral questions before a board of arbitration instead of the suggested federal commission. This plan, it was pointed out, would conform to the railway managements' insistence on the principle of arbitration.

As yet President Wilson has not mentioned the possibility of government ownership of railroads in case of a strike, white house officials and those who have conferred with him assert. He is said to be determined, however, not to accept from the railway presidents a final rejection of some plan which might be made the basis of an agreement, and still considered appealing to the financiers who control the roads if negotiations with the presidents should fail.

least was expected early today. Other important places isolated by the hurricane include Kingsville, Sinton, Beeville, Harlingen and Alice.

Gov. E. F. Dunne, of Illinois, who had been inspecting the Illinois guardsmen's camp in the Brownsville district, left Brownsville for his home and apparently is marooned on a train somewhere between Brownsville and Houston. His train left Brownsville yesterday afternoon and so far as known has not been heard from since.

DAMAGE WILL BE HEAVY.

Dallas, Texas, Aug. 19.—The tropical storm, which struck the extreme south Texas coast yesterday and last night, inflicting considerable damage in the region between Corpus Christi and Brownsville, passed inland southwest of San Antonio, followed the Rio Grande valley to about Del Rio and then spent its force on the plains of northern Mexico. This was the summary given today by Dr. J. L. Cline, head of the local weather bureau. Atmospheric conditions resulting from the storm promised a heavy rain fall over the western and southwestern half of the state last night.

"There has been considerable damage on the coast, where thousands of acres of land are probably overflowed," said Dr. Cline.

"The worst damage is probably in the immediate vicinity of Corpus Christi."

No communication was possible early today with Corpus Christi, as all the telephone and telegraph wires were still down.

One report received here was that Corpus Christi bay had risen over the causeway connecting the city of Corpus Christi with the mainland.

THIS LITTLE PARAGRAPH

From the Gimlet Strikes Us as Containing Large Gobs of Truth.

"If you have a real good hand-saw that keeps its shape, cuts true and fast and seldom gets dull, you begin to think a good deal of that saw and the man who sold it to you. Just what you paid for the saw is forgotten in a few months—50 cents more or less is unimportant. You know that when you buy another saw, you will buy the same kind if you can get it."

This principle runs all throught business, and was coined into an enduring phrase by E. C. Simmons when he observed that "The recollection of quality remains long after price has been forgotten."

One of the pleasantest features of our work is rendering customers the kind of service that brings them back with their friends.

You will find that Meigs, the Eyesight Specialist, in the Lyric Theater Building, has the shop, the men, and the disposition to keep on delivering good "saws" every day in the week, year after year.

SEEKS A DIVORCE.

Montpelier, Ind., Aug. 19.—Mrs. Maggie Murphy, of this city, through her attorneys, Pursley & Peterson, filed suit in circuit court Friday asking a divorce from her husband, John L. Murphy. The complaint sets out that they were married on the 16th of October, 1897, and lived together as man and wife until the 10th of October, 1913. She also alleges that Murphy was an habitual drunkard, spending all of his money for liquor and failing to provide for her, forcing her to support herself by acting as housekeeper, waitress and dishwasher in a restaurant. Inasmuch as she has been disregarded by the defendant the past two years she asks a divorce, attorney fees and other relief. Murphy is said to be in Fort Wayne at the present time.

HURT IN ACCIDENT.

GIRL BITTEN BY A SNAKE.

Decatur, Ind., Aug. 19.—Edwina, age 7, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Wilder, of Monmouth, was bitten on the top of the foot near the large vein leading from the great toe by a large snake as she ran through the gate to the barnyard yesterday afternoon. Excitement ran high for a time, and the prompt action of a sister, Mrs. Fred Nye, in sucking whatever poison might have been in the wound was resorted to as a "first aid" before the arrival of a doctor. The little girl was barefooted. The first intimation of the snake's presence was a stinging sensation similar to a scratch on her foot. Looking, she saw the snake coiled with head uplifted.

MAN WILL BE BURIED.

Auburn, Ind., Aug. 19.—An unidentified man will be buried in the potters' field at Corunna Sunday at the expense of the taxpayers of Richland township, unless someone is found to claim the body of the person killed on the New York Central tracks one mile east of Sedan Thursday afternoon shortly before 4 o'clock. The stranger was walking on the New York Central tracks at the time and was just a mile east of Sedan when he was killed. Two engines coupled together were being sent over the road, and it is possible that he did not hear them coming, although the engineer and fireman say that he seemingly did not heed their signals.

MRS. COOLEY DEAD.

Hartford City, Aug. 19.—Mrs. Robert Cooley, 63, for the past twenty-two years a resident of the old Cooley farm, east of this city, passed away at her home there Friday morning after an illness of less than two weeks with malarial fever. Thursday afternoon, when Mrs. Cooley was visited by the attending physician her condition was announced as much improved and at no time was her condition thought serious. Early Friday morning, however, her condition became suddenly worse and she died before a physician could be called to her bedside.

WARSAW YOUTH ARRESTED.

Warsaw, Ind., Aug. 19.—Charged with stealing automobile tires, Ross Black, aged 14, was arrested Friday morning by Chief C. B. Moon and is being held until he can be given a hearing in the juvenile court. It is said that Black has stolen at least five tires from private garages and sold them. Four of these tires were found at the junk shop owned by Henry Bechtol and located near the Big Four stockyards. The tires were stolen from the garages of John Beagle, Charles Grabner, J. M. Sloan, Conrad's garage and Peter Alexander.

CHARGES CRUELTY.

Portland, Ind., Aug. 19.—Alleging cruel treatment Mrs. Martha Hanes, on Thursday, entered suit in the circuit court asking a divorce from Garfield F. Hanes. The complaint alleges that they were married in April, 1903, and separated in March, 1915. She alleges that he locked her in a room and frequently cursed and abused her and that he is an habitual drunkard. They have two children, Henry E., age 12, and Mary E., age 11. She asks for their custody. The present whereabouts of Hanes is not known.

CASE AT DEFIANCE.

Defiance, Ohio, Aug. 19.—Thursday a sick child was reported with the symptoms of infantile paralysis. Friday that child and another were without doubt ill with the dread disease.

The three year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Kroekel, 829 Kinter street, and a boy in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Holzer, 815 Jefferson avenue, are the sick children. Their cases are in the care of the board of health and every precaution is being used that can be to prevent a spread of the disease.

FOR WIFE DESERTION.

Kendallville, Ind., Aug. 19.—Henry Mullen was given a preliminary hearing in the court of Justice E. P. Lash on a charge of wife desertion preferred by Mrs. Artie Mullen. He was bound over to the Noble circuit court under a bond of $500, which he was unable to furnish. He was taken to jail by Sheriff Sawyer. According to the affidavit filed by his wife, Mullen deserted her last September, and has been away ever since. Thursday he appeared in the city and was immediately nabbed by the officials.

SHEPHARD IN JAIL.

Columbia City, Ind., Aug. 19.—Walter Shephard is now in the county jail and will remain there eleven days unless some of his friends go to his rescue and pay his fine and costs, amounting to $11. Mr. Shephard was arrested Thursday on a charge of assault and battery brought by his wife, who alleges that he struck her several times while in an angry mood. The case was heard before Mayor F. L. Myers and the fine was set at $1 and costs.

EXPERT AT KENDALLVILLE.

Kendallville, Ind., Aug. 19.—M. L. Fisher, assistant chief of soils and crops of Purdue university, arrived in the city at noon yesterday to spend the afternoon on the course of the Kendallville Golf club. Being an expert on soils and grasses, he is expected to give the greens committee considerable information as to best methods to adopt for the fall seeding and other construction work on the course.

NEW SCHEDULE.

Bluffton, Ind., Aug. 19.—The B. G. & C. Traction company has announced a new schedule effective next Sunday. Cars will leave Bluffton for Geneva at 5:45, 8:00, 11:00, 2:00, 4:00 and 7:00, except on Saturdays, when the car at 7:00 in the evening will be cancelled and an extra will leave at 9:15. The first car will not run on Sundays. The schedule adds to cars in addition to the number included in the old time card.

RAMSEY WILL RECOVER.

Columbia City, Ind., Aug. 19.—John Ramsey, of Thorncreek township, who was kicked by a horse above the right hip bone and had a button on his clothing forced through the abdominal wall, cutting a hole clear through the flesh, was resting fairly easy Friday. He suffers considerable pain, but there were no internal injuries and his condition is not serious.

EMERY DUST IN HIS EYE.

Bluffton, Ind., Aug. 19.—Bob Holmes was painfully injured Thursday afternoon while working at his blacksmith shop here, when a piece of emery flew in his eye. He had the emery removed and is feeling much better, although the injury necessitates the use of dark glasses.

BOY BITTEN BY A DOG.

Payne, Ohio, Aug. 19.—Ward, the oldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Key, was painfully bitten on the thigh and hand by a large dog belonging to the street superintendent of the paving gang here. Two long gashes were made by the dog's teeth. The wounds have been cauterized.

FALLS UNDER A WAGON.

Bluffton, Ind., Aug. 19.—Homer, the four year old son of Ervin Dailey, who lives west of Tocsin, was run over by a spring wagon yesterday afternoon and seriously injured. The lad went to climb onto the wheel of his father's wagon when the horses started unexpectedly.

JUBILEE AT ASHLEY.

Ashley, Ind., Aug. 19.—A harvest jubilee and booster day will be held in this city, Saturday, August 26. There will be many excellent attractions. The Ashley band accompanied the Ashley K. of P. quartette to Helmer Wednesday evening.

SOME BIG MAN.

Delphos, Ohio, Aug. 19.—Joseph Klausing, 60, the biggest man in Allen county, died at his home near here, after four weeks' illness from diabetes. Klausing was a giant. An eight-foot casket will be required. He was a native of Cincinnati.

BLUFFTON BARBER TO PREACH.

Bluffton, Ind., Aug. 19.—Jack Vardaman has disposed of his barber shop in this city to Orin Roe and D. E. Bowman, of Ossian, and will enter the ministry. He has accepted a pastorate under this conference of the Methodist Protestant church.

ICE FAMINE IS BROKEN.

Napoleon, Ohio, Aug. 19.—The ice famine here was at least temporarily broken when outside ice was received in sufficient quantities to supply private homes, as well as business houses.

WILL RECOVER FROM INJURIES.

Bluffton, Ind., Aug. 19.—Word has been received that Earl Forst, who was seriously hurt in an automobile accident at Bloomfield this week, will recover.

MUNK FAMILY REUNION.

Life is a strange mixture of light and shadow. These two seem to be constantly intermingling, bringing us joys and sorrows. In the midst of pleasure, when the sun seems at high tide, the clouds arise and envelope us in partial darkness. Again, when the sun is hidden and the heart is sad, the clouds melt away, bringing us the light of noon-tide.

Robison Park will soon have as its special guests, those about whom the shadows of old age are falling. With whitened hair, infirm step and faltering voice, they are approaching life's sunset hour. To them, the things of youth have passed away. Even the children seem changed, for they so often pass them by unnoticed. As the shadows of eventide play about their heads, their hearts are often sad. They crave to be shown that we love them still; that we do respect and honor them. They need to see again that even the shadows of age will vanish before the light.

Every old woman, 75 years of age or older, is invited to Robison Park on Wednesday, August 23rd. They shall be the park's special guests. We want them to forget the shadows, to renew their youth and to be girls again. They shall carry the flag in grand parade, as did the white-robed maidens on Girls' Day—the flag for which many of them sacrificed and gave their loved ones in '61. We want you to help honor them. We want you to show by your presence and by your friendly smile and word of kindly greeting, how much you respect the heroic patience with which they have surmounted all life's obstacles. We want to drive away every shadow and bring back to them for a day, the light of youth and happiness.

Annual Picnic Will Be Held August 27 — Other Lodge Doings.

Something new and original has been planned by the officers of the Fort Wayne lodge, No. 200, Loyal Order of Moose. On Sunday, August 27, the annual picnic of the order will be held at Radhert's grove, at which time it is planned to initiate three hundred candidates. The initiation will take place at 11 o'clock in the morning in the shade offered by the trees of the woods.

Allen Martin and Isadore Sorg have been named captains of two teams which will engage in a tug of war. Other entertainments and amusements will also be furnished. A bountiful breakfast will be served from 6 o'clock in the morning until 12 at noon, and a dinner will be served from noon until dark.

William Trickett Giles, of Moosehaert, Ill., supreme secretary of the order, will be present at this annual event.

Ask City to Honor Dead.

Lawton Camp, No. 35, United States war veterans, appointed a committee at a meeting held Friday evening which will draft resolutions and present them to the mayor and officials requesting them to have the flags of the city lowered to half mast when a veteran of the civil war or Spanish war passes away. The committee is composed of Edward Cook, S. S. Kelker, Henry Guyer and John H. Johnson.

Woodmen Picnic Today.

Edward's camp, No. 3127, Modern Woodmen of America, gave its annual picnic Saturday afternoon in Swinney park. A large crowd took part in the joyful occasion. Prizes were offered to the winners in the various contests. Refreshments were served on the grounds.

Grotto Outing Sunday.

Members and wives of Cadessia Grotto, No. 50, will go to Tri-lakes Sunday, where the annual outing and picnic will be given. Automobiles will leave Court street at 8:30 o'clock in the morning and carry people to the famous lake resort. A program of events has been planned.

Yeoman Picnic.

The three homesteads of the Brotherhood of American Yeomen will hold their annual picnic at Robison park Sunday, August 27. Ex-Governor Clark, of Kansas, will be the speaker of the afternoon. Following the program a competitive drill will be given. The various homesteads over the entire state will send representatives. A basket dinner will be served at noon. The executive committee, composed of five members from each of the three local homesteads, compose the comittee on arrangements.

GRAND JURY ORDERS PROSECUTOR EJECTED

Sheriff Marches J. Frank Mann from Jury Room at Muncie.

Muncie, Ind., Aug. 19.—Prosecutor J. Frank Mann was led out of the grand jury room yesterday by Deputy Sheriff Clinton Stradling, after the grand jurors had refused to permit him to conduct an investigation and had ordered him from the room. Prosecutor Mann refused to go until he was escorted by the sheriff.

Although Special Prosecutor Wilbur Ryman, who was active in the graft charges against Mayor Rollin H. Bunch and other city officials, was appointed special prosecutor by Judge Frank Ellis to investigate matters pertaining to the prosecutor's office, he nevertheless commenced an inquiry regarding the issuance of retail saloon licenses by the county commissioners.

Charles H. Mitchell, manager of the Delaware hotel, of this city, it is alleged, has made public statements that it "cost him $500 extra" to get his license, and he was haled before the grand jury to explain his statement.

The session of the jury was called by Ryman, and Prosecutor Mann went to the court house yesterday morning, entered the grand jury room and announced his willingness to proceed with any investigation the grand jury desired to make. Judge Ellis was called in and he prevailed upon Mann to leave, but Mann stuck, with the statement that he was the regularly elected and acting prosecutor, and that he did not intend to leave until forced. The grand jury then voted to exclude him and the sheriff was called to enforce the order.

advanced over a section two miles long and 200 to 600 yards deep from Highwood to the junction point with the French forces, the war office announced today.

British naval aeroplanes raided German ammunition stations at Lichtervelde, in Belgium, thirteen miles southwest of Bruges, yesterday, causing large fires, the war office announced today. Forty-eight bombs were dropped from a height of about 3,000 feet. Large fires were afterward observed.

"All the machines returned safely," the official report says.

AUSTRIANS RAID AVLONA.

Make Successful Air Attack on Point Held by Italians.

Berlin, Aug. 19.—A successful air raid on Avlona, Albania, held by the Italians, is reported in an Austrian admiralty statement today. It says:

"On the night of Aug. 14-15 definite hits were obtained on a shore battery and on the barracks, a camp, a storehouse and a ship. Numerous fires broke out."

Naval aeroplanes, with the aid of torpedo craft and motor boats, made an attack on the Austrian seaport of Triest on the morning of Aug. 14, says an Austrian admiralty statement today. Several of the rading craft were brought down and although a number of bombs were dropped, little damage was done, it is declared.

An Italian statement on Aug. 15 reported a raid by Italian and French naval aeroplanes and other air craft on munition factories and the hangar at Muggia, near Triest, which was declared to have caused numerous destructive fires. The French lost one aeroplane, but otherwise all the squadron returned safely to its base, the statement asserted.

CAPTURE REMAINING RUINS.

French Occupancy of Fleury, on Verdun Front, Now Complete.

Paris, Aug. 19.—(Noon.)—The remainder of the ruins of the edge of the village of Fleury, on the Verdun front, was captured last night by the French, the war office announced today. The battle continued violently all night long and the French won their way forward foot by foot.

German counter attacks were made repeatedly on the Somme front. The statement says the Germans were repulsed after violent fighting, leaving fifty prisoners in the hands of the French.

Sub-Lieutenant George Guynemer, of French flying corps, whose exploits have won him a reputation as one of the most daring of French aviators, is again mentioned by the war office in today's statement. On Aug. 8 he won his fourteenth adversary.

ITALIAN STEAMER SUNK.

Liner Stamphalia is Sent Down by Torpedo From Submarine.

London, Aug. 19.—The Italian steamship Stampalia, of 9,000 tons gross, which plies between New York and Italian ports, has been sunk, says a dispatch to Lloyds'.

The Stampalia, a passenger liner in common with other Italian liners, mounted guns for protection from submarines. The last report of her movement was her arrival on July 30 at Genoa from New York, so that she apparently was sunk on the return voyage to the United States. She was commanded by Captain Lavarelle.

The Stampalia has accommodations for about 1,700 passengers. On her recent voyages from Italy to New York passenger traffic has been light and the agents in New York of the line said today she probably carried a comparatively small number of passengers. A crew numbered about 250.

No word had been received in New York by the agents of the line of the reported sinking of the Stampalia at the time of the arrival of the London press dispatch. The Stampalia first appeared in New York as an armed steamer in February last, arriving from Genoa with two 3-inch rapid-fire guns mounted on her aft deckhouse. Washington was notified and on being informed that the guns were to be used for defensive purposes only instructed the collector of the port of New York to grant clearance papers.

On arriving at New York on March 24 the Stampalia said a wireless warning had been received soon after leaving Genoa that a submarine was lying in wait for her off Sardina. Instead of sailing north of Sardina and the north shore of the Mediterranean, which before that time had proved the safest route, she went south of Sardina and through the strait of Bonifacio, between Sardina and Corsica.

Several armed Italian steamships have reported sighting submarines in the Mediterranean and in some instances being pursued by them and firing on them. Italian naval gunners were detailed to service on armed passenger vessels to operate the guns.

When the Italian steamship Re d'Italia arrived in New York Aug. 6 from Genoa her captain reported she had fired on three submarines in the Mediterranean. The steamship was pursued for seven hours and passengers said they believed one of the submarines had been sunk.

The New York agents for the Stampalia said today that two weeks ago they had received a cable message advising them that all sailings of the steamship had been canceled. They express the opinion on this account that the Stampalia had been requisitioned and was in the service of the Italian government. In this case it would have no passengers on board.

MR. ADAIR IS HEARD IN MILITANT KEYNOTE

fully up to expectations, the program being carried out as per schedule. It could not have been otherwise, however, with District Chairman Martin H. Luecke in charge.

The barbecue will start at 4:30 o'clock. A man experienced in staging barbecues is in charge. He was brought here by Mr. Luecke from Arkansas, where democratic barbecues have been the custom for years. It is Fort Wayne's first barbecue, however, and for that reason unusual interest attaches to the event aside from its political features. Ten quarters of beef, 300 watermelons, 3,000 ears of corn, 300 gallons of milk and many other good things are on the bill of fare. Everything was prepared right at the park and under the most sanitary methods. The melted butter is even applied to the ears of corn with brushes that have been thoroughly sterilized.

The delegations began to arrive early Saturday, coming from all parts of the state. The following county chairmen outside of the district brought large delegations in special cars: Henry B. Heller, Decatur; A. W. Hamilton, Bluffton; Alfred Davis, Muncie; D. W. Callahan, Winchester; George Hall, Portland; Thomas McCulloch, Anderson; Charles Terrell, Marion.

Portland, the home of the democratic nominee, is well represented. Mr. Adair has been almost a lifelong resident of Portland. He is honored and respected by his home folks, regardless of party affiliations, and they believe he is going to be elected.

Cline Is Not Coming.

Congressman Cyrus Cline has sent a telegram to District Chairman Martin H. Luecke stating his inability to be present. The telegram, read at the meeting Saturday afternoon, follows:

"It is with sincere regret that I am unable to participate with you in opening the state campaign in the Twelfth district, as I had proposed to do. What Indiana is to the nation politically Allen county is to the state—a sure, dependable element in party success. The democratic party enters this campaign with confidence that the people regardless of party affiliation will reward its substantial legislative achievement for the whole people by returning it to power abundant and permanent. Prosperity for everybody and the democratic party go hand in hand."

Chairman Is Here.

Hon. Albert Sahm, of Indianapolis, who was selected to act as chairman of the meeting in the absence of State Chairman Bernard Korbly, who was prevented from participating on account of illness, arrived Saturday morning. Mr. Sahm is an optimistic democrat. He believes that the democratic party is going to win in both the nation and state next November. He is a German and was recently appointed to a place on the national campaign committee. He was postmaster at Indianapolis during the last Cleveland administration, and was at one time auditor of Marion county. Mr. Sahm is an influential member of the German-American Democratic club, of Indianapolis, and is secretary and treasurer of the State Life Insurance company.

Hoffman Is Popular.

There is no more popular person in attendance at the meeting than Hon. E. G. Hoffman, of this city, democratic national committeeman. Everybody knows him apparently, and he knows everybody. Another Fort Wayneite who is popular at the meeting is George Bittler, state treasurer. Mr. Bittler will remain here over Sunday, returning to Indianapolis Monday.

State candidates who were present for the democratic barbecue included: For governor, John A. M. Adair; for lieutenant-governor, Mason J. Niblack; for secretary of state, Homer L. Cook; for auditor of state, Dale J. Crittenberger; for treasurer of state, George A. Bittler; for attorney general, Evan B. Stotsenberg; for supreme court (second district), Douglas Morris; for appellate court (northern division), James J. Moran; for appellate court (first district), John C. McNutt; for supreme court (third district), Charles E. Cox; for supreme court reporter, Philip Zoercher; for superintendent of public instruction, S. L. Scott; for state statistician, S. W. Kahn.

Aided in Reception.

The various branches of the Young Men's Democratic League of Allen County were a prime factor in the reception of visiting delegations Saturday at Robison park. Harry Muller, organizer of the young democrats of the county, sent a letter Friday to 1,000 young democrats of the county asking them to rally to make the barbecue from an entertainment standpoint one of the greatest of its kind ever held. There were many district delegations of young democrats. "The democratic party is the young man's party, the constructive, live party. Wilson is a young man's president," declared Mr. Muller's letter to the young voters.

in its favor and should be adopted as a basis of wages even where the actual work to be done cannot be completed within eight hours.

"Concerning the adjustments which should be made, in justice to the railroads and their stockholders, in the payments and privileges to which their men are now entitled (if such adjustments are necessary) there is a wide divergence of opinion.

"The railroads which have already adopted the eight-hour day do not seem to be at any serious disadvantage in respect of their cost of operation as compared with the railroads that have retained the ten-hour day, and calculations as to the cost of the change must, if made now, be made without regard to any possible administrative economies or readjustments.

"Only experience can make it certain what re-arrangements would be fair and equitable either on behalf of the men or on behalf of the railroads. That experience would be a definite guide to the interstate commerce commission for example in determining whether, as a consequence of the change, it would be necessary and right to authorize an increase of rates for the handling and carriage of freight (for passenger service is not affected).

"I therefore proposed that the demand for extra pay for overtime made by the men and the contingent proposals of the railroad authorities be postponed until facts shall have taken the place of calculations and forecast with regard to the effects of a change to the eight-hour day that, in the meantime, while experience was developing the facts, I should seek, and if need be, obtain authority from congress to appoint a small body of impartial men to observe and thoroughly acquaint themselves with the results with a view to reporting to congress at the earliest possible times the facts disclosed by their inquiries but without recommendation of any kind and that it should then be entirely open to either or both parties of the present controversy to give notice of a termination of the present agreements with a view to instituting inquiries into suggested readjustments of pay or practice.

"This seems to be a thoroughly practical and entirely fair program and I think that the public has the right to expect its acceptance."

Will Make Statement Soon.

The railroad presidents indicated they would make a statement soon. All said that the question was not closed and that the negotiations would be continued.

President Holden, of the Burlington, spokesman for the officials, said no time had been set for them to see President Wilson again, but that it was necessary to confer with the committee of managers, which has the authority to accept or reject plans.

Several of the executives indicated disappointment over President Wilson's statement, but showed particular interest in his mention of the possibility of the interstate commerce commission considering an increase in freight rates.

Talk to Executives.

In his talk to the executives today President Wilson told them they were facing a condition, not a principle. He asked why they should demand arbitration when there was no law for compulsory arbitration and he knew it to be impossible to get a compulsory arbitration law through congress. The employes, he recalled, had consistently refused arbitration and he believed it was impossible to gain it in the present controvery.

"I have been asked to sit as a judge," said the president in substance. I cannot do that. I simply can suggest a plan, a way in which I believe this question can be settled fairly to all sides."

President Wilson urged again that the railroads accept the plan, adopt the eight-hour day, at least temporarily, and then allow the proposed commission to fully investigate the facts. He pointed out that the railroads brought forward one set of statements and the employes another and it was impossible for him to tell which was correct.

Only Equitable Way.

In conclusion President Wilson said he believed his plan was the only equitable way of settling the controversy and that under it both sides would be treated fairly. He considered it useless to discuss the principle of arbitration when it seemed impossible to bring about an arbitration in the present crisis.

Mr. Holden gave President Wilson estimates of the cost of the eight-hour day to the railroads. President Wilson in reply urged that the railroad officials with the committee of managers very carefully consider his plan before giving any final answer. That was agreed to by the railroad executives.

It was learned definitely that in their acceptance of President Wilson's plan the employes made no reservation.

Not Hopeless, but Serious.

One of the railroad presidents said after the conference that he did not consider the situation hopeless, but that it was very serious. President Wilson, he said, had asked for a "showdown" and that the railroad officials would give a final answer as soon as possible.

In spite of tone adopted by some of the railroad officials the belief was current in administration circles that, however reluctantly, the railroads would make some concessions.

After the conference President Wilson telegraphed to a number of presidents of western railroads inviting them to come to Washington.

Summoned to White House.

The railroad heads were summoned to the white house for a conference at 11:30 o'clock. The employes' committee of 640 having voted to accept President Wilson's plan and thereby "put the thing up to the railroads" had another meeting today to talk things over.

Out of the maneuvering of both sides for a position which will enjoy the support of public opinion come many evidences that each is working to organize public sentiment in its favor and make it manifest in a positive way.

Turning to Other Employers.

It was understood today that the railroads are turning to other large employers of labor throughout the country to express their support of the preservation of arbitration as a settlement of industrial disputes while President Wilson and the employes are drawing support from large manufacturing and other interests vitally interested in keeping the railroads open for business, and from those who want to see the movement for the eight-hour day carried a long step forward.

The evidences point to moves by each side to "back fire" the other. The attitude of the railroad presidents to ask for time to consider the president's plan was said to be part of this program.

Hope for Counter-Proposal.

Hope existed, however, in the belief that the presidents might advance a counter-proposal, such, for example, as that they allow the eight-hour day principle but place collateral questions before a board of arbitration instead of the suggested federal commission. This plan, it was pointed out, would conform to the railway managements' insistence on the principle of arbitration.

As yet President Wilson has not mentioned the possibility of government ownership of railroads in case of a strike, white house officials and those who have conferred with him assert. He is said to be determined, however, not to accept from the railway presidents a final rejection of some plan which might be made the basis of an agreement, and still considered appealing to the financiers who control the roads if negotiations with the presidents should fail.

least was expected early today. Other important places isolated, by the hurricane include Kingsville, Sinton, Beeville, Harlingen and Alice.

Gov. E. F. Dunne, of Illinois, who had been inspecting the Illinois guardsmen's camp in the Brownsville district, left Brownsville for his home and apparently is marooned on a train somewhere between Brownsville and Houston. His train left Brownsville yesterday afternoon and so far as known has not been heard from since.

DAMAGE WILL BE HEAVY.

Dallas, Texas, Aug. 19.—The tropical storm, which struck the extreme south Texas coast yesterday and last night, inflicting considerable damage in the region between Corpus Christi and Brownsville, passed inland southwest of San Antonio, followed the Rio Grande valley to about Del Rio and then spent its force on the plains of northern Mexico. This was the summary given today by Dr. J. L. Cline, head of the local weather bureau. Atmospheric conditions resulting from the storm promised a heavy rain fall over the western and southwestern half of the state last night.

"There has been considerable damage on the coast, where thousands of acres of land are probably overflowed," said Dr. Cline.

"The worst damage is probably in the immediate vicinity of Corpus Christi."

No communication was possible early today with Corpus Christi, as all the telephone and telegraph wires were still down.

One report received here was that Corpus Christi has had risen over the causeway connecting the city of Corpus Christi with the mainland

THIS LITTLE PARAGRAPH

From the Gimlet Strikes Us as Containing Large Gobs of Truth.

"If you have a real good hand-saw that keeps its shape, cuts true and fast and seldom gets dull, you begin to think a good deal of that saw and the man who sold it to you. Just what you paid for the saw is forgotten in a few months—50 cents more or less is unimportant. You know that when you buy another saw, you will buy the same kind if you can get it."

This principle runs all throught business, and was coined into an enduring phrase by E. C. Simmons when he observed that "The recollection of quality remains long after price has been forgotten."

One of the pleasantest features of our work is rendering customers the kind of service that brings them back with their friends.

You will find that Meigs, the Eyesight Specialist, in the Lyric Theater Building, has the shop, the men, and the disposition to keep on delivering good "saws" every day in the week, year after year.

NEW DIRECTORS NAMED.

Warsaw, Ind., Aug. 19.—Directors of the Winona assembly and Bible conference have been re-elected with Dr. Parley E. Zartman, Dr. Lamber and E. W. Allen as additional directors. The annual meeting was held in Raike's hall at Winona Lake on Thursday afternoon, and Dr. E. S. Scott was made permanent chairman. Dr. Sol C. Dickey, general manager of the assembly, made a report of present conditions and future outlook of the conference. The directors of the assembly are: Marion Lawrence, Chicago; E. O. Excell, Chicago; Rev. W. E. Biederwolf, Monticello; Rev. M. H. Lyon, Winona Lake; Rev. M. B. Williams, Winona Lake; W. P. Carmichael, St. Louis, Mo.; W. D. Frazer, Warsaw; E. A. K. Hackett, Fort Wayne; Rev. I. E. Honeywell, Oak Park, Ill.; James H. Matchett, Bourbon; J. J. Humphreys, Van Wert, O.; Rev. A. Judson Arrick, Hamilton, Ont.; Rev. W. F. Irwin, Louisville, Ky.; Dr. H. Lambert, Okmulgee, Okla.; E. W. Allen, Winona Lake; Rev. B. F. Nyce, Muncie; Rev. C. C. Jordan, Volant, Pa.; W. M. Bruning, Evansville; Lloyd D. Claycomb, Indianapolis; Dr. S. C. Dickey, Winona Lake; Dr. P. F. Zartmann, Winona Lake; C. W. Fairbanks, Indianapolis. William Jennings Bryan is president of the new Winona assembly.

SEEKS A DIVORCE.

Montpelier, Ind., Aug. 19.—Mrs. Maggie Murphy, of this city, through her attorneys, Pursley & Peterson, filed suit in circuit court Friday asking a divorce from her husband, John L. Murphy. The complaint sets out that they were married on the 16th of October, 1897, and lived together as man and wife until the 10th of October, 1913. She also alleges that Murphy was an habitual drunkard, spending all of his money for liquor and failing to provide for her, forcing her to support herself by acting as housekeeper, waitress and dishwasher in a restaurant. Inasmuch as she has been disregarded by the defendant the past two years she asks a divorce, attorney fees and other relief. Murphy is said to be in Fort Wayne at the present time.

HURT IN ACCIDENT.

GIRL BITTEN BY A SNAKE.

Decatur, Ind., Aug. 19.—Edwina, age 7, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Wilder, of Monmouth, was bitten on the top of the foot near the large vein leading from the great toe by a large snake as she ran through the gate to the barnyard yesterday afternoon. Excitement ran high for a time, and the prompt action of a sister, Mrs. Fred Nye, in sucking whatever poison might have been in the wound was resorted to as a "first aid" before the arrival of a doctor. The little girl was barefooted. The first intimation of the snake's presence was a stinging sensation similar to a scratch on her foot. Looking, she saw the snake coiled with head uplifted.

MAN WILL BE BURIED.

Auburn, Ind., Aug. 19.—An unidentified man will be buried in the potters' field at Corunna Sunday at the expense of the taxpayers of Richland township, unless someone is found to claim the body of the person killed on the New York Central tracks one mile east of Sedan Thursday afternoon shortly before 4 o'clock. The stranger was walking on the New York Central tracks at the time and was just a mile east of Sedan when he was killed. Two engines coupled together were being sent over the road, and it is possible that he did not hear them coming, although the engineer and fireman say that he seemingly did not heed their signals.

MRS. COOLEY DEAD.

Hartford City, Aug. 19.—Mrs. Robert Cooley, 63, for the past twenty-two years a resident of the old Cooley farm, east of this city, passed away at her home there Friday morning after an illness of less than two weeks with malarial fever. Thursday afternoon, when Mrs. Cooley was visited by the attending physician her condition was announced as much improved and at no time was her condition thought serious. Early Friday morning, however, her condition became suddenly worse and she died before a physician could be called to her bedside.

WARSAW YOUTH ARRESTED.

Warsaw, Ind., Aug. 19.—Charged with stealing automobile tires, Ross Black, aged 14, was arrested Friday morning by Chief C. B. Moon and is being held until he can be given a hearing in the juvenile court. It is said that Black has stolen at least five tires from private garages and sold them. Four of these tires were found at the junk shop owned by Henry Bechtol and located near the Big Four stockyards. The tires were stolen from the garages of John Beagle, Charles Grabner, J. M. Sloan, Conrad's garage and Peter Alexander.

CHARGES CRUELTY.

Portland, Ind., Aug. 19.—Alleging cruel treatment Mrs. Martha Hanes, on Thursday, entered suit in the circuit court asking a divorce from Garfield F. Hanes. The complaint alleges that they were married in April, 1903, and separated in March, 1915. She alleges that he locked her in a room and frequently cursed and abused her and that he is an habitual drunkard. They have two children, Henry E., age 12, and Mary E., age 11. She asks for their custody. The present whereabouts of Hanes is not known.

CASE AT DEFIANCE.

Defiance, Ohio, Aug. 19.—Thursday a sick child was reported with the symptoms of infantile paralysis. Friday that child and another were without doubt ill with the dread disease.

The three year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Kroekel, 829 Kinter street, and a boy in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Holzer, 815 Jefferson avenue, are the sick children. Their cases are in the care of the board of health and every precaution is being used that can be to prevent a spread of the disease.

FOR WIFE DESERTION.

Kendallville, Ind., Aug. 19.—Henry Mullen was given a preliminary hearing in the court of Justice E. P. Lash on a charge of wife desertion preferred by Mrs. Artie Mullen. He was bound over to the Noble circuit court under a bond of $500, which he was unable to furnish. He was taken to jail by Sheriff Sawyer. According to the affidavit filed by his wife, Mullen deserted her last September and has been away ever since. Thursday he appeared in the city and was immediately nabbed by the officials.

SHEPHARD IN JAIL.

Columbia City, Ind., Aug. 19.—Walter Shephard is now in the county jail and will remain there eleven days unless some of his friends go to his rescue and pay his fine and costs, amounting to $11. Mr. Shephard was arrested Thursday on a charge of assault and battery brought by his wife, who alleges that he struck her several times while in an angry mood. The case was heard before Mayor F. L. Myers and the fine was set at $1 and costs.

EXPERT AT KENDALLVILLE.

Kendallville, Ind., Aug. 19.—M. L. Fisher, assistant chief of soils and crops of Purdue university, arrived in the city at noon yesterday to spend the afternoon on the course of the Kendallville Golf club. Being an expert on soils and grasses, he is expected to give the greens committee considerable information as to best methods to adopt for the fall seeding and other construction work on the course.

NEW SCHEDULE.

Bluffton, Ind., Aug. 19.—The B. G. & C. Traction company has announced a new schedule effective next Sunday. Cars will leave Bluffton for Geneva at 5:45, 8:00, 11:00, 2:00, 4:00 and 7:00, except on Saturdays, when the car at 7:00 in the evening will be cancelled and an extra will leave at 9:15. The first car will not run on Sundays. The schedule adds to cars in addition to the number included in the old time card.

RAMSEY WILL RECOVER.

EMERY DUST IN HIS EYE.

Bluffton, Ind., Aug. 19.—Bob Holmes was painfully injured Thursday afternoon while working at his blacksmith shop here, when a piece of emery flew in his eye. He had the emery removed and is feeling much better, although the injury necessitates the use of dark glasses.

BOY BITTEN BY A DOG.

Payne, Ohio, Aug. 19.—Ward, the oldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Key, was painfully bitten on the thigh and hand by a large dog belonging to the street superintendent of the paving gang here. Two long gashes were made by the dog's teeth. The wounds have been cauterized.

FALLS UNDER A WAGON.

Bluffton, Ind., Aug. 19.—Homer, the four year old son of Ervin Dailey, who lives west of Tocsin, was run over by a spring wagon yesterday afternoon and seriously injured. The lad went to climb onto the wheel of his father's wagon when the horses started unexpectedly.

JUBILEE AT ASHLEY.

Ashley, Ind., Aug. 19.—A harvest jubilee and booster day will be held in this city, Saturday, August 26. There will be many excellent attractions. The Ashley band accompanied the Ashley K. of P. quartette to Helmer Wednesday evening.

SOME BIG MAN.

Delphos, Ohio, Aug. 19.—Joseph Klausing, 60, the biggest man in Allen county, died at his home near here, after four weeks' illness from diabetes. Klausing was a giant. An eight-foot casket will be required. He was a native of Cincinnati.

BLUFFTON BARBER TO PREACH.

Bluffton, Ind., Aug. 19.—Jack Vardaman has disposed of his barber shop in this city to Orin Roe and D. E. Bowman, of Ossian, and will enter the ministry. He has accepted a pastorate under this conference of the Methodist Protestant church.

ICE FAMINE IS BROKEN.

Napoleon, Ohio, Aug. 19.—The ice famine here was at least temporarily broken when outside ice was received in sufficient quantities to supply private homes, as well as business houses.

WILL RECOVER FROM INJURIES.

Bluffton, Ind., Aug. 19.—Word has been received that Earl Forst, who was seriously hurt in an automobile accident at Bloomfield this week, will recover.

MUNK FAMILY REUNION.

WOODBURN NEWS.

Woodburn, Ind., Aug. 19.—Mr. and Mrs. Ray T. Leever and sons, Robert and Roger, and Miss Bessie Leever motored to Fort Wayne Wednesday evening.

W. H. Treaster, of Antwerp, O., was a business caller at this place Thursday.

Earl Hogue, who has been visiting relatives at Cleveland for the past two weeks, returned to his home at Blue Cast, Thursday evening.

L. A. Carpenter, L. F. Carpenter and son Floyd, of Defiance, O., visited several days the past week with Mr. and Mrs. Ray T. Leever.

J. R. Yaggy made a business trip to Fort Wayne Friday morning.

Miss Lillian Foster, who is employed at Blue Cast sanitarium, visited her parents at Antwerp Tuesday evening.

Christ Rich and family, of Westcott, Kan., visited at the home of Mrs. Levina Gerig Tuesday while en route in their machine to Pioneer, O.

William Harper, representing the Clark Fruit Co. of Fort Wayne, made a business trip to this place Wednesday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel K. Mosiman stopped at this place a short time while en route to their home at Bluffton, O., Friday morning.

A. Adamski and sons, Frank and Joe, have returned to their home at Payne, O., after having been employed at this place for several weeks drilling wells.

The fall term of the public high school will open Tuesday, September 5. Entering pupils who completed the eighth grade outside the city schools, and all other pupils who are new to this high school, will find it to their advantage to call at the office as early as possible. The principal will be in his office during the forenoon after Aug. 21st. 19-26

Life is a strange mixture of light and shadow. These two seem to be constantly intermingling, bringing us joys and sorrows. In the midst of pleasure, when the sun seems at high tide, the clouds arise and envelope us in partial darkness. Again, when the sun is hidden and the heart is sad, the clouds melt away, bringing us the light of noon-tide.

Robison Park will soon have as its special guests, those about whom the shadows of old age are falling. With whitened hair, infirm step and faltering voice, they are approaching life's sunset hour. To them, the things of youth have passed away. Even the children seem changed, for they so often pass them by unnoticed. As the shadows of eventide play about their heads, their hearts are often sad. They crave to be shown that we love them still; that we do respect and honor them. They need to see again that even the shadows of age will vanish before the light.

Every old woman, 75 years of age or older, is invited to Robison Park on Wednesday, August 23rd. They shall be the park's special guests. We want them to forget the shadows, to renew their youth and to be girls again. They shall carry the flag in grand parade, as did the white-robed maidens on Girls' Day—the flag for which many of them sacrificed and gave their loved ones in '61. We want you to help honor them. We want you to show by your presence and by your friendly smile and word of kindly greeting, how much you respect the heroic patience with which they have surmounted all life's obstacles. We want to drive away every shadow and bring back to them for a day, the light of youth and happiness.

DAILY BIBLE READINGS FOR THE HOME

Ephesians 1:1-14.

1. Paul, an apostle of Jesus Christ by the will of God, to the saints which are at Ephesus, and to the faithful in Christ Jesus.
2. Grace be to you, and peace, from God our Father, and from the Lord Jesus Christ.
3. Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who hath blessed us with all spiritual blessings in heavenly places in Christ:
heavenly places in Christ:
4. According as he hath chosen us in him before the foundation of the world, that we should be holy and without blame before him in love:
5. Having predestinated us unto the adoption of children by Jesus Christ to himself, according to the good pleasure of his will,
6. To the praise of the glory of his grace, wherein he hath made us accepted in the beloved:
7. In whom we have redemption through his blood, the forgiveness of sins, according to the riches of his grace;
8. Wherein he hath abounded toward us in all wisdom and prudence;
9. Having made known unto us the mystery of his will, according to his good pleasure which he hath purposed in himself:
10. That in the dispensation of the fulness of times he might gather together in one all things in Christ, both which are in heaven, and which are on earth; even in him:
11. In whom also we have obtained an inheritance, being predestinated according to the purpose of him who worketh all things after the counsel of his own will:
12. That we should be to the praise of his glory, who first trusted in Christ.
13. In whom ye also trusted, after that ye heard the word of truth, the gospel of your salvation: in whom also, after that ye believed, ye were seated with that Holy Spirit of promise,
14. Which is the earnest of our inheritance until the redemption of the purchased possession, unto the praise of his glory.

Welcome to Indiana Democracy

Fort Wayne accounts herself highly honored today as host to many of the prominent leaders and thousands of the rank and file of Indiana democracy, gathered in this goodly city for the formal opening of the state campaign and for the pronouncement of the keynote address of Hon. John A. M. Adair, democratic nominee for governor. Fort Wayne is immensely gratified as well at the opportunity to throw open her gates to this representative Indiana citizenry, and she bid her guests a most cordial welcome.

There was something especially felicitous, too, in the selection of Fort Wayne for the opening of the campaign by Indiana democracy. This has long been accounted a democratic stronghold. Allen county has been a bulwark of strength for the democratic party in Indiana—the home of a militant majority which has been proud to subscribe to democratic tenets, and which is equally proud to see in party accomplishment and in the fruition of governmental ideals a splendid justification of its faith. The achievements of the democratic administration of Indiana affairs, notably in the last two administrations, have been such as to challenge the admiration and win the plaudits of the people of this state. The enactment of needed legislation of prime importance, the payment of the state debt and the development of broader governmental activities in response to an enlightened conception of governmental service has been an outstanding factor of democracy's service to the people of Indiana during the past eight years.

And now, on the eve of another contest at the polls, Indiana democracy goes before the people to render an account of its stewardship. With a splendid state leader in the person of Hon. J. A. M. Adair, and behind him an equally strong and capable list of candidates for other places on the state official roster, there is every reason for the confident expectancy of popular approval at the polls in November. It is under these most felicitous circumstances that Fort Wayne extends her hand in welcome to Indiana democracy today.

Chairman Hay, of the House military committee, who was recently appointed to a judgship by the president, clearly proposes to run true to form so long as he is in congress. As a trouble-maker Mr. Hay has frequently risen to heights that command attention if not admiration, and he has followed the president's veto of the army appropriation bill by the introduction of a new measure in which the proposed revision of the articles of war has been completely eliminated. This has been one of the features of the bill on which the administration has insisted, but as forced through the house it contained a provision held to be in the interest of certain retired officers who were "at outs" with the army and are only awaiting immunity before airing their grievances. It's going to mean a fight, but Mr. Hay might as well begin to prepare right now for a licking.

Statistics on the volume of money in the United States hsow that we now have a total of $4,471,595,052 as aaginst $3,997,368,468 a year ago. On the basis of one hundred million population, that's just $44.71 for each individual, or an increase of $4.74 since last year. As soon as some other investigations are out of the way, an inquiry as to where you got that $4.74 might not be out of order.

The president may or may not succeed in averting the threatened general strike on the railroads, but it must be admitted that he is exerting every effort to assist the opposing forces in reaching an amicable agreement and to avert the break. If worst comes to worst, it will be through no failure of the president to do everything humanly possible to prevent it.

Speaking in San Francisco, Mr. Hughes told California republicans and moosers that he was in no wise concerned in the factional breach that tore things wide and utterly prevented anything like a merger of the party elements there. Mr. Hughes realizes that he has trouble enough of his own in this campaign, without taking on those of the other fellow.

Dispatches from the Texas border bring the news that Kid McCoy, former pugilist, now has a good job driving an automobile for one of the regimental comamnders stationed there. At least Mr. McCoy seems to have finally found a place in which his services are of some real value to humanity.

The Muncie grand jury, which has just been summoned for a new session to look into affairs there, has begun proceedings by throwing the prosecuting attorney out of the grand jury room. Altogether this appears to be a rather promising indication that things are soon to be doing.

STRANGE WAYS OF OFFICIALS

(Pittsburg Dispatch).

Doing queer things appears to be a habit with a good many of the immigration officials and those on the Canadian border, in Vermont, seemingly try to keep up the record. A few days ago some nurses from Ottawa, Ont., who had been engaged by a New York hospital to help fight the infantile paralysis epidemic, were stopped at Alburg, in the Green Mountain state, and refused admission to the United States under the alien labor act. The authorities at the Canadian capital intend to make representations to Washington respecting the treatment accorded the nurses, who, they declare, were on a mission of mercy for which they had volunteered. There was no question of the terms of the law being trespassed.

The nurses say that when they reached the border they were dragged from their berths and put out into the rain. Apparently there was no distinction between them and undesirable aliens with a criminal record or likely to become a charge upon the country. They returned to Ottawa as soon as they could and announce that, even though a change of regulations be made which would permit them to give their help in fighting the epidemic, New York or any other American community is likely to do without their services.

It seems strange that, even though the local officials in this case did not feel they were permitted to exercise their discretion and decide that the nurses were not alien contract laborers, the higher authorities could not have taken action before the arrival of the nurses that would have given them entry without trouble. The New York epidemic was serious enough to engage the attention of the federal government and the immigration authorities knew what the nurses were coming for. Such incidents are not likely to increase either the friendship or respect of our neighbor for us. All the foolish things are not being done in war-crazed Europe.

RALSTON INVITES PRESIDENT.

Urges Him mto Speak in Indianapolis on Highway Day.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 18.—Governor Ralston, of Indiana, has invited President Wilson to go to Indianapolis on centennial highway day, Oct. 12. The committee which is arranging for the day's ceremonies also is anxious to have Vice-President Marshall speak on that day. It is not known what the president's answer will be, but it is not thought that he will accept. The vice-president has advised the committee that he does not know where he will be on that date and hence can make no promises that he will go to Indianapolis.

In his letter to the president, Governor Raulton said: "I know that the demands upon you are greater than any man can meet and that of necessity you have to deny yourself the pleasure of accepting many invitations extended you, but the event in which I am urging you to participate will be an epoch-making one for better roads, and your participation therein will make it historic."

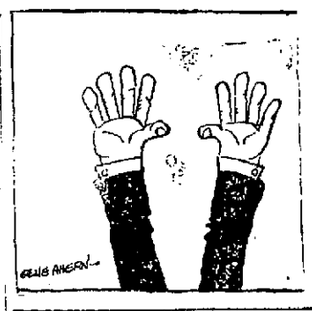
HANDS.

Hands are flat projections on the end of the arms, each divided equally into five spaghetti looking objects called fingers.

When the fingers are bent in and folded (except with pickpockets—they only "bend in" somebody else's pocket,) they are called fists.



Hands are the cause of bargain sales, the "slightly soiled" bargains. Some people use their brains to make money, but the majority rely on the hands, as is the case with prizefighters, cartoonists and traffic policemen.

Some fellows have used their hands to make money, but don't try it their way, because you won't get a chance to "see America first."

Hands are also used for talking and ending arguments, that is, some people's idea of ending an argument is to let the hand float up till the other fellow's nose stops it.

Small boys' hands are never found under water faucets.

Will Be Held Sept. 4 Under Auspices of Associated Christian Workers.

The Associated Christian Workers of the city have their plans laid for the annual field meet to be held in Foster park on the afternoon of Sept. 4. The young people will have many amusements for the day, as well as fine speaking, a good supper and a general good time.

The program will start at 1:30 o'clock with a grand balloon ascension and continue with track events, water contests, games and music to fill the afternoon. In the evening there will be a big bonfire around which the crowd will roast marshmallows.

Each member is cordially invited. Every young people's society of the organization will take part. A silver loving cup will be awarded to the society receiving the highest number of points in the contests. Most of the churches already have their representatives in training.

The track events include 220-yard dash for boys and the field, shotput, high and broad jump, as well as many other events for both boys and girls. There will be a canoe race and other water events, and the local troop of Boy Scouts will build a pontoon bridge across the river.

Aside from the speaking there will be a string orchestra and a male quartet on the grounds to assist in the program. Supper will be held on the grounds.

SEEKING BLOOD FROM THOSE WHO ARE IMMUNE

Raising Fund in New Effort to Combat Infantile Paralysis.

New York, Aug. 19.—The organization of citizens to raise a fund of $2,000 to defray the expenses of obtaining blood from persons in this city who have recovered from attacks of infantile paralysis was announced today. From this blood a serum is extracted which is believed by Dr. Abraham Eingher, of Willard Parker hospital, to be efficacious in the treatment of the disease if administered in its early stages.

Efforts to obtain this blood from persons believed to be immune to the disease have been made recently, but this is the first comprehensive plan that has been formulated for that purpose. The movement has the indorsement of the department of health.

The committee of citizens has obtained the names of about seven hundred persons in this city who have had poliomyelitis and with the health department's approval will send letters to them asking them to contribute to the battle against the epidemic.

Blaze at Franklin Quelled Only After Fight of Many Hours.

Franklin, Ind., Aug. 4.—Fire which for a time threatened destruction of the business district, was brought under control late last night after five business firms suffered losses estimated to aggregate $35,000. Five hundred persons, attending a motion picture show in a theatre near the origin of the fire were gotten out of the building before they were aware of their danger, and without any one being injured. The first started in the building occupied by the Morris five and ten cent store, and it is believed to have been due to defective electric wiring.

The water pressure of the water works company here became so low shortly after the fire started that only one stream of water could be thrown a distance of thirty feet.

The instruction of officers of the camp and three companies of coast artillery are here and 750 citizens have been enrolled.

Rules for Avoiding Infantile Paralysis

Chicago, Aug. 19.—Doctor Koehler, of the health department, gave out the following precautions to be observed by parents:

Keep your house or apartment absolutely clean.

Go over all woodwork daily with a damp cloth.

Sweep floors only after they have been sprinkled with sawdust, old tea leaves or bits of newspaper which have been thoroughly dampened. Never allow dry sweeping.

Screen your windows against flies.

Do not allow refuse of any kind to remain in your rooms.

Kill all forms of vermin, such as bedbugs, roaches and body lice.

Pay special attention to bodily cleanliness. Take a bath every day and see that all clothing which comes into contact with the skin is clean.

Keep your children by themselves as much as possible. Do not allow them to visit stuffy moving picture shows or other places where there may be a large gathering of children.

Children should not be kept in the house; they should be out of doors as much as possible, but not in active contact with other children of the neighborhood.

Do not take your children with you when you go shopping.

Do not allow your children to be kissed.

It is perfectly safe to let your children go to the parks and playgrounds if only two or three of them play together.

Remember that children need fresh air in the summer time, and outdoor life is one of the best ways to avoid disease.

JENKINS-UNDERHILL.

A small home wedding of the utmost simplicity took place at 11 o'clock Saturday morning in the marriage of Miss Dorothy Underhill, daughter of Mrs. Lillian Underhill, to Charles W. Jenkins, at the residence of the bride's aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Allen J. Vesey, in Maple avenue. Only relatives and a few personal friends of the bride and groom were present at the wedding. Rev. Edward W. Averill, of Trinity Episcopal church, of which the bride is a communicant, officiated at the wedding service. Miss Constance Underhill played the bridal music from "Lohengrin" as the bride and groom entered the living room and Miss Margaret Underhill preceded her sister. Mrs. Underhill gave her daughter in marriage. The bride wore a becoming gown of white georgette crepe hung over white satin, made with short skirt and with a distinctive feature of a fitchu edge with handsome lace about the neck. The bride wore a veil that fell to the bottom of her skirt and was gathered to a cap of lace, the latter being a fine old piece belonging to the bride's mother. The bridal bouquet was a nosegay of white asters, pink rosebuds and forget-me-nots in a lace paper holder. The house was simply decorated with garden flowers of pink and white coloring. As soon as the bride and groom had received congratulations the wedding breakfast was served. A number of personal friends of the bride's younger sister assisted in serving, as a bit of pretty attention they wished to show the bride. These young girls were Misses Dorothy Wilding, Jeannette Boshler, Winifred Bicknell, Fannie and Rose Goldberger. The bride and groom will be at home after the first of October at 454 Kinnaird avenue, where they are going to housekeeping. The bride will wear a blue silk suit with black velvet brimmed hat for the few days she and the groom are to be out of town. The bride has been a teacher of art in the Fort Wayne high school and she has many friends who well appreciate her many fine qualities of young womanhood. Mr. Jenkins' former home was in Newcastle, Pa., but his position as civil engineer of the maintenance of way department of the Pennsylvania has given him a location in this city for a year or two. Guests from away included Mrs. Cecil Hall, of Berkeley, Cal., and Mrs. Bertha Jenkins and Miss Elizabeth Jenkins, of Mahoningtown, Ohio.

Charge Against Andrew Cooper for Taking Auto Dismissed—Other Cases.

George Wehrmeister, carpenter, was fined $10 and costs and sentenced to 100 days of road work because he has failed to support his small child. He allowed his wife to be turned from her home because he would not pay rent, testimony showed.

Cooper Case Dismissed.

Andrew Cooper, 20, the young man who came to Fort Wayne for a visit, after being married in Chicago, will not be tried for taking a joy ride in an automobile belonging to Mrs. Mary Arter, 522 Superior street. Mrs. Arter refuses to prosecute the case since Cooper settled all damages by paying $15. Mrs. Arter asked that the case be dismissed.

Fined for Loitering.

Hazel Beard, 16, and Dorothy Lambert, 17, two girls who were slightly injured two weeks ago when the motorcycle on which they were riding with a young man was wrecked, were in police court charged with loitering. They were standing in front of a saloon on Spy Run avenue late Friday night drinking beer with Clarence Delagrange, 23, and Louis Luley, 19, when arrested. The girls were bound over to the juvenile court. They had been warned several times to stay off the streets at night, Matron Winch testified. The two young men were fined $10 and costs each. They will serve out their entire sentence in jail they say.

Other Police Court Cases.

Cases against Francis Swinney and Caroline Swinney, charged with failure to cut weeds on their properties, in the west end, will be brought up Tuesday morning. The prosecutor said he wanted to be sure that the land belonged to the Swinneys, as there seems to be dispute as to the property ownership.

Surety of the peace cases against Tony Roebuck and Charles Roebuck were dismissed. The surety cases had been filed after the trial Friday, when the young men were fined for assaulting A. L. Naminski, in a saloon brawl. Naminski said he feared they would attack him again. The young men say they have no such intentions.

John Hagan, 71, will be tried on a public intoxication charge Tuesday morning. He was found "down and out" on the sidewalk of Columbia street Friday afternoon.

"I've been drinking a long time and that is the first time it ever got me down, judge," the aged man told Kerr. His head was bandaged as a result of his striking his forehead on the sidewalk.

Fred Walters will be tried Tuesday on a drunk charge. John Shelby, colored, convicted on a drunk charge, was released.

Is Sport Shirt to Join the Monocle?

SIR C.A. SPRING RICE

Is the sport shirt to join the monocle as a fad with the English?

Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, British ambassador to the United States, wears a sport shirt. And Lady Spring-Rice doesn't mind. In fact, she approves, it is said.

Eczma on Scalp --Awful Irritation

Resinol Soon Healed It Entirely

Mar. 28: "I had a severe case of eczema on my head. My scalp itched and burned and was full of scabs, and when I scratched that would of course pull off the scabs and left my head very sore. The irritation was something awful. I could not keep my hands out of my head. My hair became very dry and harsh and did not feel like there was any life in it. The first application of Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap soothed the scalp wonderfully, and after using one jar of Resinol Ointment and three cakes of Resinol Soap my head is entirely cured—I can rest peacefully and there is no more itching. My temples were almost clean of hair and now they are covered thickly. I must say Resinol is simply wonderful for almost any kind of skin trouble. It does all you say and more." AT THE MAJESTIC

"Truxton King" at the Majestic Again Tonight.

Truxton King, the gallant hero, and Lorraine Tullis, the engaging heroine of George Barr McCutcheon's latest novel about the Graustark country, are to be visualized upon the stage. Miss Grace Hayward, an actress and writer, had dramatized the story of "Truxton King" and the play is at the Majestic in this city tonight.

Mr. McCutcheon made of the adventures of Truxton King an entertaining book and the dramatist is said to have made an equally good stage story of them. Its romance is said to have been prettily delineated and ample opportunity given to convey the thrills that are welcomed by most of our theater-goers. The United Play company, which is directing the tour, announces a high-class company.

AT THE PALACE

Fort Wayne's Favorite Pastime Ready for Action.

Vaudeville, the mulligan stew of the amusement world, in which if you don't like one thing you are sure to find something you do like, is back in our midst for with the coming week the New Palace will be thrown open to an eager public before whose eyes will be unfolded one of the snappiest bills the New Palace's own booking agents could bring together.

Imhoff, Conn and Corene of Sergt. Louder fame will feature this premier bill of the season in their brand new sketch, "The Pest House," an absurdity that runs on high speed every minute. Harry von Fosson, the prince of monologuists, will be back with a list of new songs, parodies and comical sayings. This is Mr. Fosson's final appearance in vaudeville as he leaves Wednesday night for New York city to join the "Watch Your Step" company. Anna Vivian's troupe of sharpshooters will demonstrate their uncanny skill with the target rifle and pistol in a novel shooting act that will open the bill. As pretty a pair of girls as lovelorn hearts ever sighed over, the Misses Mellen, are on this program in their dainty ensemble of singing specialties. Mareno, Navarro and Mareno will close the bill with an amazing equilibristic turn, while Mack and Irwin will be sandwiched in just where their amusing gags are calculated to raise the most joy.

This bill will run four days, closing Wednesday evening to give way to the bill headed by James H. Cullen, the man from the west, which will open Thursday afternoon. The New Palace has arranged a scale of popular prices for the 1916-1917 season that is even lower than last year's bargains.

IN AUTO MISHAP.

E. I. Lewis, staff correspondent of the Indianapolis News, and his wife, in an auto, left the Everett Lake road, six miles out of the city, Friday night, and hung over a culvert, but were unhurt. Bad roads, Mr. Lewis said, caused the accident. The machine shot into the grass by the side of the road and thence to the culvert, after striking a bad portion of the road. Mrs. Lewis was at the wheel and was learning to drive.

(By Betty Brown.)

Autumn will bring no relief to color blind eyes! From flambouyant sports clothes we will skip to flambouyant-er fall coats.

Here's a modest model in mustard color broadcloth—gay as a primrose, and snug as a blanket. The two-toned gray buttons, and the gold brown velvet and fur collar add brightness.

It's a forerunner, they told me at the Chicago Garment Manufacturers' Fashion show, of the gay plumage even the least of us will be wearing in the winter. The shawl collar and deep cuffs indicate we will be comfortable as well as gay. The front belt and pouch-like pockets decorate many new overcoats.

SENTINEL REPORTER VISITS LOCAL MOVIE, BUT HE LEAVES IN DISGUST

Conversation of Two Women Proves Too Much for Him and Little Claymore's Question Were Too Numerous—It Happens Every Day.

I sailed along before the first cool breath of August. The uncertain current of humanity carried me to the leeward to the mouth of a movie-house harbor. I reefed sail to take my bearings.

Above were the gleaming lights and vaulted, tinseled arches. Fairy arms of bronze figures stretched out to me. I forgot the port to which I was bound when I pulled on my shoes after supper. I followed the measured tread of the funeral-like procession which filed before the glass-covered billboard. I had seen a rogues' gallery once.

But I liked the angle at which the hero leveled his revolver and the heroine wore her snowshoes well. Also the girl in the ticket office counted her change and tended to her own business.

Then again the blazing title of "The Whiskered Whirlwind," or "Where It Listeth." In three sections. It seemed especially timely. So timely I could imagine the plot. There would be fond hopes, greedy desires, leaving a good home, a wild rampage through the golden west, an attempt to run a big bluff on a strong voice, the voice would break, the tide turn, humanity would be aroused, then the November snowstorm, blasted hopes and retirement to the quiet fireside. It would no doubt be a huge pageant built along a campaign failure.

I bought my ticket after the girl had ordered me to step aside twice in order that she might see that I was not working a smuggling game. The paving stones resounded and I marched into the inky blackness where exit lights and electric fans made me think of the hissing serpents and flickering flames that Milton tells about.

I stood and blinked my eyes till the man at my left elbow said, "Tickets, please" three times. I poked the pasteboard out into the darkness and experienced a sensation much like the first jerk of a six-pound bass when I was relieved of my voucher. Towards the dancing screen I went, for it was the only ray of light. I barked my shins on chairs and gained six yards through a wristwatch brigade before I was downed. With two steps to the right I dropped into a seat exhausted.

Soon the mist had risen from my eyes and I discovered that the second attempt of Algorell to make love to Queenoria was on. Interest collected.

Couldn't See a Thing.

"This way, this way, oh, I can't see a thing," came a screechy voice. I thought everybody knew that people could not see when they tumbled down the aisle of a picture showhouse. I looked up. A big woman with a wabbly hat was drawing an anchor in the form of a small boy. She turned into the aisle directly behind me and shook two rows of seats. As a poor third came a tall, flaxen-haired maid with no hat.

"Be careful, Claymore," both women called to the child. He clambered over the seats. He bumped his toe and yelped. I missed one attempt of Algorell's to kiss Queenoria.

"I hope this one ends nice," exclaimed the young one. I had just observed that the hero lost one of his gloves.

Then came the lurid red flash which denoted that there would be a shift in the canvas scenery.

"When does the circus come to town, ma," inquired Claymore.

"I don't know; look at the pretty woman," mamma urged.

"Well, can I go to the circus when it does come?"

"Oh, I thought it was going to be Mary Pickford or Theda Bara and here it is Pauline Fredrick," said the miss, who was a little north by northeast at my rear.

"Maybe she will not be in the next part," came from the older one.

"She always stays through a whole show when she starts," was the discouraging reply.

"Look what big hands the woman's got," piped Claymore.

Scene Shifts.

Now the scene shifted to the far north. Snowflakes bigger than hen eggs pelted down on the hero, who staggered ere he had gone ten steps from his cabin door. He had been "mixing them," I guess.

"Isn't it great, Mrs. Gratz?" from miss.

"It is swell, Miss Schnell," from the other side of Claymore.

"He is so brave, but I am afraid he can never keep going."

"He wants revenge."

"Is that Charlie Chaplin?" interrupted the lad.

"You keep still and watch the pictures. Look now at the dogs."

"Are they like will be in the circus?"

"I don't know, but be still. Say, Nellie, this must be the picture Hazel told me about only the dogs died and there were seals and everything in that. This looks like the fellow she said, though."

"Maybe."

"We will wait and see if there is a big bear in the next one and one man shoots himself. I bet it will be the same one."

"Oh, see the man look cross-eyed," clamored Claymore.

"Be still; he's hurt," explained the mother.

"Where's he hurt?"

"Sh—keep still."

"Isn't that true to life?" exclaimed the young one as the fur-clad Walahough, the brave guide, looked over the icy peaks apparently for a passing sail.

"It is so real."

"Will that funny thing be in the circus, mamma?"

Leap of 2,000 Miles.

A leap of two thousand miles followed the next flicker on the screen. The villain had been pushed over a three-hundred-foot ice cliff. The division title was "Look Before You Leap."

In northern Virginia was the new continuation of love and hate. White-pillared mansions, feudal in their magnificence, rose in the distance. There were cotton fields. It was the picture of prosperity in the late years since war times have lost their memory. The show of pomp was there. The occasion demanded it. The "mister" entertained.

"Look at that hat," excitedly said the young one, as an attractive daughter of the southland was handed from a limousine.

"Say, that dress looks like Clara's," put in the other. "Only, of course, it cost more. And did you see the new one Grace has? It is made of that new stuff. I think she is a fright in most anything."

"Jest look at the jitneys," screeched Claymore as the row of cars rolled before the great door.

"Oh, my, do keep still; you will drive me crazy," begged mamma.

"Well, is that man who helps everybody out the mayor or something?" insisted the son.

"I don't know, but if you don't keep still you will not go to aunty's tomorrow."

"I don't want to go to aunty's; I want to know if I can go to the circus. Gee, look at the fat one," and Claymore pointed in the direction of the screen.

"I hate to bring Edwin with me; he talks so much."

"Oh, look at that," and there was a gasp for breath at the northeast. "He will kill himself. It must be a mistake."

"I bet it is a dummy," for Claymore's mother was skeptical.

"I don't know. I have heard of men falling like that."

"I wonder did he cork himself like uncle always says."

Claymore, you little rascal," with some fierceness. "Look at her trying to save him from disgrace. She is certainly loyal."

"It is queer that two men should love a woman so," philosophized the young one.

The Pretty Lady Cries.

"Mamma, the man is making the'r lady cry," claimed Claymore. "I looked around. I could not help what was written on my face. I missed the few words written on the screen at that time. There was no use anyway. I fumbled for my hat.

"This is not the show I had heard about," the large one admitted. "The villain does not die in that one."

"What does the villain die for?" asked the son.

"Well, Mrs. Gratz, you can't help it. Look at the steamboat, Claymore."

"Which one?"

Maybe I was hasty in flight. I wanted air. The last heard was—

"He is disturbing the whole theater in the midst of the show."

EDITOR'S NOTE—How many persons of the thousands of consumers in Fort Wayne pause to consider how the milk or butter used on their tables daily is produced? How many housewives look deeper than the cream line—and the price in the bottle of milk delivered to their doors to determine the quality of the contents? How many realize sufficiently that healthfulness in the household in a great measure depends upon the purity of the milk supply?

These and many other phases of the milk situation in Fort Wayne are dwelt upon in the following interesting article written for The Sentinel by Stuart T. Todd, expert milk sanitarian, who has just completed for The Sentinel a ten days' sanitary survey of the dairies and milk plants supplying Fort Wayne consumers. His observations are based upon actualities and comparisons upon intimate knowledge of existing conditions in sixteen states and more than 100 cities which he has investigated with the support, co-operation and endorsement of numerous health departments, well known milk authorities and leading newspapers in every city.

BY STUART T. TODD.

In selecting the family's milk supply every housewife should religiously insist upon three requisites from her dealer:

First—Absence of visible sediment in the bottom of the bottle. The presence of sediment of any description in the bottom of a bottle of milk denotes carelessness and unclean methods in its production or handling, or both. If a dairyman hasn't respect enough for his customers to remove the foreign substance from the milk he delivers, his product is unsafe and he is unworthy of your patronage.

Sanitary Equipment Needed.

Second—Modern facilities and sanitary equipment. While it is true that a good quality of milk can sometimes be produced amid unclean and insanitary surroundings, the customer is taking greater chances with the health of the family than the price she pays for the milk justifies. If she desires a cheap milk and refuses to pay a reasonable price for an article that she knows to be safe, then she may expect to be given a quality of milk that conforms exactly to the price she pays. The cream line cannot under any circumstances be taken as a criterion of the quality. The cream line may be deepest on an article of milk that is polluted with disease-breeding bacteria.

Third—Delivery of all milk and cream in sterilized bottles. Bulk milk or "dipped" milk is a menace to health and should be prohibited—and fortunately is prohibited from sale in nine-tenths of the cities of the United States ranging in population from 10,000 upwards—by stringent laws requiring the bottling of all milk for human consumption on the producing premises or in a sanitary milk plant built and maintained in conformity to established rules of sanitation.

Vital to Safe Milk.

All three of these rules are absolutely vital to safety in a city's milk supply. The absence of any one of the three cheapens the milk and puts the burden of responsibility upon the customer instead of upon the dairyman where it rightfully belongs. Because any housewife who will condone sediment, who will not pay enough attention to her milk supply—the food very often which she feeds her baby—to determine the character of the surroundings under which her milk is produced and handled, is jeopardizing not only her health but that of every one of her loved ones.

The housewife is the final arbiter of the character of the milk she serves on the table—or to her infant. For it is a fact that a city's milk supply is exactly what that city makes it through the demand made upon the dairymen by the consumers. Milk will not be made any better than the public demands or that it pays for.

One of Cheapest Foods.

Milk is one of the cheapest foods on the market. It is also one of the most easily digested. It is very nourishing and the ways in which it can be used are innumerable. One quart of good milk costing eight or ten cents equals in food value:

Two pounds of salt codfish; three pounds of fresh codfish; two pounds of chicken; four pounds of beets; five pounds of turnips; 1-3 pound of wheat flour; 1-6 pound of butter; 1-3 pound of cheese; 3-4 pound of lean round beef; eight eggs; two pounds of potatoes; six pounds of spinach, seven pounds of lettuce or four pounds of cabbage. To these may be added, one pint of oysters, 4-5 pounds of loin of pork and 3-5 pound of ham.

The price of these foods will range between 20 and 24 cents—averaging approximately 22 cents. For almost the same money more than two quarts of milk at 10 cents could be purchased and three quarts of milk at 8 cents, in other words the consumer gets nearly three times the food value in milk than is obtained in the average food on the market.

Yet milk is practically the only article of food which has not risen in price in the last two years—in fact, Fort Wayne is obtaining a milk supply at approximately the same figure it paid for it five or even ten years ago. And this also in direct face of the fact that foodstuffs for cattle have almost and in some instances more than doubled in price; the value of dairy cows has increased from one-third to one-half more and the sanitary requirements of health authorities has added an additional burden of expense to the dairyman.

Must Get Fair Price.

A dairyman cannot afford to equip his plant or farm with even reasonably sanitary appliances when he is retailing his product for seven or eight cents a quart. When it is realized that it costs at a minimum figure six cents a quart to deliver milk in Fort Wayne even under existing conditions—which unfortunately are far from good in the main—it may readily be seen that the profit of one or two cents a quart is not any more than sufficient for the dairyman to eke out a mere existence without putting any of it into equipment to safeguard his product.

Fort Wayne's milk supply is not on a par with the progressive spirit of the city exhibited in almost every other way. It is not entirely the fault of the dairymen. The consumer bears nearly an equal responsibility, for if insistence were made on a better supply, the dairymen would furnish it. Unfortunately lack of intelligent inspection in the past has permitted the dairy industry here to deteriorate rather than keep step with the march of the city's progress.

A remedy for existing conditions is in sight. Within the past few weeks the city health department has appointed Dr. Paul C. Kucher dairy and food inspector. As yet he has had insufficient time to overcome the degeneration permitted in the past, but is fast regenerating the industry.

One of the great obstacles which must be overcome here is lack of proper facilities of handling the product by the individual dealers or producers. In the majority of instances only the crudest equipment is maintained and this oftentimes is neglected until the milk is contaminated every time it passes over or through what little equipment is maintained. I have found dairies running in direct violation of the city ordinances, not in one, but in several instances—one in particular handling his milk in a house attached to a horse stable and with doors opening from the one into the other. Under the city ordinance this is positively prohibited, yet more than 200 gallons of milk daily is delivered to homes in this city after being bottled amid these insanitary surroundings.

There are too many small, irresponsible dealers in the business for the general welfare of the industry here. Fort Wayne boasts as many individual dealers as does the average city three times its size. In the past anyone, with or without equipment of the most insignificant sort, could enter the milk business as a final resort to a bread and butter existence. The result has been that there are innumerable small dealers selling from 15 to 30 gallons of milk, who in the very nature of the extent of their business, cannot afford to equip their places with sanitary arrangements for handling the milk.

Regulation or Pasteurization.

There are just two avenues toward a better milk supply in Fort Wayne—either more stringent regulations and a greater insistence upon equipment and surroundings, which, if enforced, will compel the smaller dealer to equip his place as well as the larger one, or compulsory pasteurization of all milk delivered in Fort Wayne. Unless the city can afford to hire a sufficient inspection corps to make at least monthly inspections of all dairies and dealers and see that the product is up to a high standard in its raw state, compulsory pasteurization is the only outlet.

Until any city's inspection department is permitted a free hand in the exercise of his duty to require the standard of milk, his efforts will be nil and the city's milk will continue to be bad. If Dr. Kucher is permitted to proceed as his better judgment dictates, he will clean up the milk supply of Fort Wayne and place it on a par at least with any city in Indiana. He has the confidence of the dairymen and by professional and technical training is well fitted for the position he occupies.

That Fort Wayne's mortality record is low; that there are few cases of typhoid during the summer months; that more babies do not die during the hot weather is apparently not due to the general milk supply of the city, but more probably to the incessant watchfulness and deep concern of Dr. J. H. Gilpin, secretary of the city health board, and his assistants. That they are doing their work well is evidenced by the lean mortality record. With a general house cleaning in the milk industry even this record would undoubtedly be reduced and Fort Wayne would rise to a higher plane in the opinion of those contemplating making this city their homes. For the milk supply is one of the first features investigated by any family when changing locations. By it, to a very great extent, a city is known to the outside world. So its importance cannot be over estimated.

Found Some Good Dairies.

In the ten days I have been in Fort Wayne I have visited practically every dairyman supplying milk to Fort Wayne. Some of these—a comparative few, unfortunately—I have selected for recommendation to the milk consumers of the city. In every instance I have made a personal inspection of the premises, investigated the methods used and the product as it is delivered to the customer. In practically all instances Dr. Kucher has accompanied me. I can unreservedly recommend every dairyman appearing on the "Quality Selected Sanitary Dairy Page" as being representative of the highest class market milk producer, whose product I believe to be safe for general uses. For infant feeding no milk should be used, not even certified, without a physician's prescription. Promiscuous feeding of babies on milk that is good enough for family use is dangerous in the extreme.

I have been compelled to reject many more dairymen for representation on the dairy pages than I could accept, for various reasons—either their places were insanitary, their methods improper, their product contained visible sediment or otherwise was not worthy of recommendation, they were delivering milk below a normal price, thereby not giving themselves sufficient profit to install the necessary equipment to produce a good article of milk, or for other similar reasons I did not wish to recommend the product. I believe it is the duty of every housewife to investigate for herself the source of her milk supply. If they would do it in Fort Wayne there either would be a revolutionary upheaval in the milk industry or many dealers would be compelled to quit the business through lack of trade.

Butter and ice cream are two commodities that daily dress almost every table in the city. These, like milk, carry bacteria in large quantities unless manufactured under proper conditions. Fortunately Fort Wayne possesses butter and ice cream factories the equal of any anywhere. Their methods, equipment and surroundings invariably are in strict accordance with sanitary requirements and their products of a high character.

Precaution Necessary.

This is a season of the year when every housewife should take every precaution she knows to safeguard her milk supply. Milk carries more germs than any other article of food. It is more susceptible to contamination than any. Consult with your health department often regarding your milk. Ask your physician always how to feed the baby and never use milk that might be left in the baby's bottle from one feeding to be mixed with fresh milk for the subsequent meal. Never replace the cap removed from a bottle of milk. Instead invert a clean drinking glass over the top of the bottle and always keep it cold. It is far better to place the bottle of milk with the ice than in the bottom of the refrigerator.

And above all get the best supply obtainable at the price you can afford to pay. It is better to pay a little more for your milk and cut your meat bill or other household expense proportionately to get the better grade. Cheap milk is poor economy, but it helps support the undertakers and medical fraternity.

SHOP AND RAILROAD NEWS

August Promises to Smash All Previous Records in Freight.

If the present movement of freight over the Nickel Plate continues until September 1, August, 1916, will have established a new record, for the business was never better in that month than it has been so far this year. This has been the cause of hiring several new men, instead of laying off or "setting back" those already in the service. Some of the engineers who were promoted last winter, in accordance with the custom during the season of heavy traffic and reduced train tonnage, and put back to firing because of the falling off of traffic, have been recalled to the throttle side of the cab and new firemen have been hired. Fireman E. M. Doty was "marked up" to the extra engineer list yesterday and J. Dunlap, A. W. Perry, D. C. Weiss and R. Broo were employed as new firemen.

WRECK DELAYS TRAINS.

The westbound Manhattan Limited, on the Pennsylvania, was over two hours late when it reached the city today. The delay was caused by a journal under a boxcar east of Orrville burning off and blocking the tracks. The three Cleveland sleepers which become a part of the limited at Orrville were sent on through on the limited's time, reaching Chicago on the "dot." The other portion of the train came two hours later.

MANY GOING TO DETROIT.

Reduced rate tickets to Detroit, on account of the annual convention of the American Veterinary Medical association, were placed on sale by the Wabash this morning and will continue on sale until and including Monday, the 21st. There is a fairly good business, many people not interested in the veterinary association taking advantage of the rate to get to the lake and the resorts near Detroit. The return limit has been fixed for August 29.

TO ATTEND MUNICIPAL CONVENTION.

A. A. Serva, sales manager of the General Electric works, will leave tomorrow for Baltimore, Md., where he will attend the annual convention of the International Association of Municipal Electricians, which will be held two or three days next week.

L. E. & W. OFFICIALS IN CITY.

George Dyer, general superintendent of the Lake Erie & Western road, and A. W. O'Brien, superintendent of the Fort Wayne, Cincinnati & Louisville division, paid this city a visit yesterday afternoon on their tour of inspection They were on a special car which was a part of the regular train going south at 2:30.

WILL RETURN TO OLD HOME.

G. W. Babcock, who came here two or three months ago and took employment in the punch press department of the General Electric works, under Foreman Schwartzkopf, resigned this morning. He has decided to return to Toledo, his former home, where a good position awaits him.

OFF ON AUTO TRIP.

Chief Clerk D. E. Guy, of the Wabash division storeroom, and Mrs. Guy and daughter, Clara May Guy, were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Zeigler on an automobile trip to Clear Lake. They left for that resort this afternoon and will return Sunday evening.

TRANSFERRED TO DAY FORCE.

LLANO GRANDE WAS IN PATHWAY OF BIG BLOW

Camp Where Fort Wayne Soldiers Are Stationed Suffers Somewhat.

San Antonio, Texas, Aug. 19.—The West Indian hurricane passed through Brownsville without serious damage and no fatalities, according to a wireless report to Fort Sam Houston here, today. The troops were reported busy reconstructing their camps, which suffered heavily in the terrific gale.

At Llano Grande, a Minnesota guardsman suffered a broken arm. The mess house of the First Iowa regiment band collapsed with four men it and one was slightly injured.

Every tent in the camps of the Third Texas infantry and the Twenty-sixth United States infantry at Harlingen was blown down and the camps were flooded. The troops spent the night in town.

The Illinois camps around Brownsville suffered the most, due to the fact that the guardsmen had frame tents.

At the height of the storm, General James Parker, the veteran cavalry commander, and his aides, rode through every camp, making a tour of inspection. They found several new mess buildings levelled, acres and acres of fallen and twisted tents and nine warehouses in a sea of mud and water.

Nearly all the Iowa troops stuck to their camps. This was true also of the New York guardsmen at McAllen, although according to a land wire message from Harlingen, the latter lost more than half their tents.

Brownsville was still without telegraph and telephone communication at noon.

TAKE WAGON LOAD OF CIGARS IN DAYLIGHT

A wagon load of choice cigars and cigarettes were carted away from the store house of Frank Gocke, wholesale dealer, 933 East Wayne street, within a stone's throw of the police station, in broad daylight Friday. The theft was committed between 1 and 2 o'clock Friday afternoon when a man backed a spring wagon up to the building and loaded on several boxes of cigars.

Gocke had been away from the place but an hour when he returned at 2 o'clock and found $400 worth of tobacco missing. There was the tracks in the soft pavement where a horse and small wagon had backed to the curbing. Police were notified.

A partial description of the man who committed the theft has been furnished by a citizen who chanced to be passing when the wagon was being loaded. Police think they will capture the daring thief as it will be a difficult matter to dispose of the large quantity of loot. No arrests were made Saturday, however.

CITY HALL NEWS.

Will Paint Hospital.

Work of painting the isolation hospital and making other minor improvements aboutthe place will be started next week, the board of works has ordered.

Busy on Sewers.

Laying sewer pipe across the St. Mary's river near the gas company property on Superior street, to connect the Spy Run sewer with the intercepting sewer, was started Friday by the C. E. Moellering company. Work of tunneling beneath the Wabash track at Warren street for the completion of the Warren street sewer was begun Friday by the Sheets Construction company. The sewer pipe will be thirty-seven feet below the rails. It is hoped to have the east end of the sewer finished in six weeks.

The Grosjean Construction company is building two miles of sewer on State boulevard from the St. Joe river to Anthony boulevard.

Will Bid on Reservoir Roof.

A Cleveland contracting firm, through one of their representatives, asked permission Friday to bid on the roof which may be placed over the reservoir. Members of the board of works think there is no doubt but that the reservoir can be covered for less than $8,000. They expect to pass on the method to be used for purifying the city water supply next week.

BUILDING PERMITS.

Permits to build were granted the following Saturday: Franklin Realty and Building company, 1210 East Lewis street, frame residence, $2,300; Clarence Miller, 602 Leith street, residence, $4,000; William L. Griebel, 1215 East Washington street, remodel dwelling, $700, and to Franklin Realty and Building company, 3122 Webster street, residence, $3,000.

WORKING ON TUNNEL.

The Moellering Construction company has started work of building the retaining wall beneath the New York Central railroad tracks at Osage street. The heavy wall, to hold back thirty feet of earth, will require several days in erection.

BIRTH RECORD.

Born, to Mr. and Mrs. Harry Starke, 1223 Fort Place—a girl.

EACH FILE SUIT ASKING DIVORCE

First Herman Then Anna Schmeling Bring Action for Separation.

They both want divorces.

Friday, Herman filed suit against Anna Schmeling for a divorce. Saturday Mrs. Schmeling asked a decree of divorce in a bill filed in superior court.

Mrs. Schemling says she was married Dec. 18, 1915, and separated from him August 7, last. She charges cruelty, and asserts he struck her daughter. Limited separation is asked and support money. Macbeth & Hogg are attorneys for the plaintiff.

Ellen Morris has been granted a divorce from Ben Morris.

Elizabeth Aaron has been awarded a divorce decree from William Aaron.

Scholarship Awards Made.

Seeks a Divorce.

Irene Koons has filed suit in superior court for a divorce from Arthur F. Koons. They were married June 11, 1909. Custody of a daughter is asked. Cruel and inhuman treatment and failure to provide are alleged.

The case of Timothy McGrath et al, against the city of Fort Wayne et al, for an injunction designed to prevent the location of an incinerator in Bloomingdale, has been continued in the superior court for further evidence. The suit involves the advertising for bids for the work without naming the place at which the incinerator was to be built. Later it was decided to build the incinerator in Bloomingdale and persons of that locality objected.

Miss Mentor Caroline McDuffee and Mr. Byron O'Brien were united in marriage by Rev. James Lawburg at the Methodist parsonage in Churubusco. Both bride and groom are residents of Eel River township. The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. G. McDuffee, and she has taught school very successfully in Churubusco and Eel River township. The groom is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles O'Brien, and has taken his bride to his home to live.

DISEASE STATUS HOLDS.

Little Change Noted at End of Eighth Week of Plague.

New York, Aug. 19.—The end of the eighth week of the epidemic of infantile paralysis was marked by no material change in its development. During the week just passed the disease has neither advanced nor receded to any extent. During the twenty-four hours ending at 10 a. m. thirty-six children were killed by the plague and 134 new cases were reported to the health department, as against thirty-two deaths and 125 new cases reported yesterday.

TWO FALSE ALARMS.

Police were investigating cases of two false fire alarms which routed central station firemen out at 2 o'clock on both Friday and Saturday mornings and sent them flying down West Main street. The two fake calls came from the region of the St. Joseph hospital. Police think they were turned in by the same person. It is a practical joke which police take most seriously. If the culprit is caught he will be heavily fined. The law exacts a severe penalty in such cases, as lives of firemen and the fire horses are endangered at each breakneck run.

Robert J. Gaskill, chairman of the executive committee of the International Association of Municipal Electricians, will leave Sunday for Baltimore, Md., to attend the convention of that organization.

FLOWER SHOW TO BE ELABORATE AFFAIR

Electric Novelties Will Give It Features of an Exposition.

Lilies and roses, in their most delicate tints, will be displayed electrically at Fort Wayne's first annual flower show to be held on September 6 and 7, in the inclosure just east of the Majestic theatre, on Berry street.

Several thousand electric light bulbs of the most fantastic creations will be furnished for the show by the National Cash Register company, of Dayton. The bulbs have been formed into shapes of beautiful flowers and glow of the light within brings out the fine colors. Among the variety of objects represented by the new form of electric lighting will be apples of several varieties and big homely pumpkins. The electric display, which is being furnished free, will be something new for Fort Wayne.

Power for the electric displays at the show will be furnished free by the city lighting plant. John Wessel, superintendent of the plant, has assured the committees in charge of the event.

Beauty of the show will be added to by displays by all Fort Wayne florists. The local dealers will give special instructions on the kinds of plants which should be planted in fall and winter. Many varieties of hedge will be shown. Winter window boxes will be displayed. One object of the show is to stimulate interest in "year around" decorating.

Work of decorating the large inclosure for the show will start this week. Booths are to be installed for the several wards and attractiveness by arrangement will be sought after.

Thousands and thousands of cardinals, pansies, shasta daisys, astors and snap dragons will present their smiling faces at the show. They will be the bright fruits of a summer's work of little hands. Many of them, and some of the most beautiful, will have spent the summer near rough board fences and under clouds of drifting smoke. This should only add to their beauty. The result of their attractiveness at the show is expected to give the children new enthusiasm for beautifying work next year.

Many Different Varieties.

The variety of flowers to be displayed, for a great many will not know the names of half of them, is largely to the credit of Mrs. Fred McCulloch. It was through her efforts that flower seeds were secured by children at reduced prices. She had slips of paper distributed among pupils and orders for the flowers written on the sheets. By buying in large quantities the flowers were delivered at the lowest possible price.

The final judgment on back yards and improved lawns by the committee of fifty women at the close of the beautification campaign, was virtually finished Saturday. A few isolated properties are to be inspected Monday. A meeting of the whole committee will be held next week in the court house and the winners decided upon. Prizes will be given out the last day of the flower show.

Special credit has been voted Mrs. Josephine Nesbitt, head of the beautification work, by the committee. Her ceaseless energy is largely responsible for the spirit with which the young contestants have stayed with their work, they say. In most cases there has been a constant growth since the children signed up for the contest.

The Tenth ward also receives special mention by the committee members. Children of that ward as a whole have stayed with their work most faithfully. There has been marked improvement in homes of each of the 500 boys and girls of the ward who started in the beautifying work last spring.

HERE'S THE WEATHER GUESS.

Balk at Open Shop Card in Window Where Luncheon Was Given.

San Francisco, Cal., Aug. 19.—Union waiters refused today to serve a luncheon given to Charles E. Hughes, republican presidential candidate, at the San Francisco Commercial club because the club exhibits in its window an open shop card as a part of a fight being made here by the chamber of commerce upon the closed shop. For the Hughes luncheon a request was sent by the club management to the waiters' union asking for sixty-five waiters, but this was refused.

The Pacific Coast Waiters' association backed up the action of the local waiters and pickets were sent to the Commercial club entrance to warn union waiters away. One of the large downtown open shop cafes sent its entire crew to the relief of the Hughes luncheon.

NO TRUTH IN GERMAN PUNITIVE CAMP RUMOR

Berlin, Aug. 19.—"From a competent authority we hear," says the Overseas news agency, "that there is no truth in the reports that the German military authorities have established punitive camps for restraining Germans and that among others the entire staff of the Volks Zeitung, of Leipsic, has been interned."

A report that the German military authorities had established a punitive camp for "troublesome Germans," was received in London in June 29 from Berne. It was said in addition to the staff of the Leipsic Volke Zeitung, whose members were to be interned until the end of the war, four prominent socialists were to be confined in the camp.

GALLINGER WANTS TO KNOW.

Washington, Aug. 19.—Senator Gallinger today introduced a resolution directing the chairman of the federal trade commission to inform the senate at once by what authority George Rublee now is a member of the commission. Action was deferred until Monday.

Senator Gallinger after a long fight based on personal grounds, prevented Rublee's confirmation and he has been serving without compensation since March, 1915. A bill to provide compensation for Rublee's services up to the time of his rejection last June is pending in the house.

USED A TOY REVOLVER.

Terre Haute, Ind., Aug. 19.—A toy revolver, of the kind used to squirt liquid, was the weapon said to have been used by two masked robbers who held up Nick Casper, night clerk of the Sandison hotel, early today. They got $2.10. Two men giving the names of Al Jackman, 24, and Henry Tunnicliff, 26, were arrested, charged with the robbery. Casper was compelled to enter a closet and the door was locked.

LODGE WILL RUN AGAIN.

Boston, August 19.—United States Senator Henry Cabot Lodge today filed papers as a republican candidate for re-nomination in the September primaries.

CHILD PLAGUE AT EATON.

Muncie, Ind., Aug. 19.—The first case of infantile paralysis in Delaware county has been discovered near Eaton. The victim is the one-year-old daughter of Samuel Perkinson.

NEW BRIDGE OR TUNNEL.

Washington, Aug. 19.—Construction of a new international bridge or tunnel for Niagara river at Buffalo by local capitalists is authorized in a bill by Representative Smith, of New York, ordered favorably reported today by the house commerce committee.

CALLS HUGHES' TALKS QUERULOUS CARPINGS

Brunswick, Me., Aug. 19.—Champ Clark, speaker of the house of representatives, opened the campaign in Maine for the democrats today in a characteristic speech in which he told of the accomplishments of the administration and congress under the leadership of President Wilson. He also took note of the campaign tour that Charles E. Hughes is making in behalf of his candidacy for the presidency. Mr. Hughes, he said, had thus far made enough speeches to enable people to form judgment as to his opinions on current issues and in the speaker's opinion, "he has shot his bolt but has failed to hit the bullseye."

Mr. Clark said in part: "Judge Hughes has made enough speeches in this campaign to enable intelligent persons to form something approximating a correct judgment as to his opinions on current issues. He has shot his bolt but failed to hit the bullseye.

"It was universally conceded by both friends and foe that his speech at Youngstown, O., in 1908 was far and away the greatest republican speech made that year. Comparing his speeches since he was nominated for president with his strong Youngstown speech, one is forced inevitably to one of two conclusions. First, that his pen and tongue have lost their cunning measurably, or second, that he has nothing to urge against democratic accomplishments or to propose as republican policies, should republicans by some miracle win the house, the senate and the presidency.

"His speeches may not be unfairly summe dup as 'querulous carpings' at the splendid record of the democratic congress and administration. Here and there out of a vast multitude of things he finds a few of minor character which he deems unsatisfactory to him, which, even if wrong, have no more to do with the tremendous problems with which a mighty people are wrestling than have the potato vines of Aroostook county, Maine, to do with the majestic flow of the Mississippi river."

JOHNSTON BEATEN BY JAPANESE CHAMPION

National Tennis Title Holder Goes Down Before Oriental Expert.

Newport, R. I., Aug. 19.—William M. Johnston, the national tennis title holder, was defeated by Kumagae, the Japanese champion, today in the final match of the singles tournament for the Casino cup. Score, 6-1, 9-7, 5-7, 2-6, 9-7.

The match was one of the hardest fought contests ever seen on the Casino courts, both players using every atom of tennis strategy and skill at their command. Kumagae's superiority in play in the opening round was unquestionable for the national champion was apparently unable to handle the swift, accurate strokes of his opponent.

The next set was also a victory for the Japanese but Johnston was now playing in something like his top notch form and sixteen games were necessary before the Tokio champion emerged a winner.

Continuing his brilliant play in the following set, Johnston won 7 to 5 and in the fourth seemed to have the Japanese at his mercy, allowing him only two games. The gallery looked for a victory for Johnston in the fifth and deciding set but Kumagae had something in reserve and his endurance gave him the victory.

EPIDEMIC IS GAINING.

New Record for Fatalities Is Set in Philadelphia.

Philadelphia, Aug. 19.—Infantile paralysis made a new record for fatalities in Philadelphia when reports to the health bureau showed eight deaths and three new cases from midnight to noon today.

Dr. Samuel G. Dixon today placed a ban on the shipment of bodies of infantile paralysis victims through or into Pennsylvania from other states.

Sends for Burroughs Officials to Take Look at Suspects.

Cleveland, O., Aug. 19.—Detective Rick, of the Detroit police department, today failed to identify three men taken from the freighter Indus this morning as the auto bandits who three weeks ago robbed the Burroughs Adding Machine company pay automobile of $32,000. Rick was not satisfied with his own conclusions, however, and sent for Burroughs officials to come and see the prisoners.

JUDGE NORTONI AT WORK.

Progressive Takes Charge of Bureau for Democrats.

Chicago, Aug. 19.—Judge Albert D. Nortoni, of St. Louis, formerly one of the leaders of the progressive party in Missouri, and who recently announced his intention of supporting President Wilson, was named today to take charge of the bureau at the western democratic campaign headquarters which will direct the work among the progressives. Judge Nortoni began his new duties here today.

ADAIR TALKS TO THE DEMOCRATIC EDITORS

Short Meeting Follows the Lunch at Anthony Hotel at Noon Hour.

State democracy's keynote preliminary to the barbecue address of John A. M. Adair, of Portland, was sounded on Saturday noon at the Hotel Anthony, when democratic editors of the Twelfth district and the state, democratic state candidates and prominent party workers of Allen and counties in the district sat at dinner. There were 150 democrats at tables and after-dinner speaking was featured by John A. M. Adair, of Portland, candidate for governor; George A. Bittler, state treasurer; Carl Gerner, editor of the Auburn Courier, and J. W. Adams, editor of the Columbia City Post. E. G. Hoffman, democratic national committeeman, presided.

"Democracy can only win in the state this fall if the democratic editors throw themselves into the campaign," declared Mr. Adair. He said the editors and precinct committeemen would swing the election from state officers down.

"When I was asked where I wanted the democratic campaign opened I had no hesitancy in saying Fort Wayne," asserted the candidate for the governorship. Mr. Adair praised the work done so far by the editorial chair and asked a continuation of it.

Bittler Speaks.

"We are going to continue to give the state the kind of legislation it wants," declared Mr. Bittler. "We will re-elect Woodrow Wilson president with all the state and county officers." He asserted the party was pledged to economy and that it was keeping that pledge.

Mr. Adams complimented the work done by the democratic editors and characterized the Hughes campaign as an act of "belly-aching." Mr. Gerner lauded the hospitality of Fort Wayne democrats and said the keynote sounding in this city was notable for democracy.

The state candidates were called into Berry street in front of the Hotel Anthony following the editors' meeting while their pictures were taken. The editors and party workers left at the Harrison street door formed in line and marched to the transfer corner, where Robison park cars were in waiting to transport them to the park.

District Editors.

Democratic editors of the Twelfth district in attendance at the meeting were the following: Lew Ellingham, Fort Wayne Journal-Gazette; Herman Mackwitz, Fort Wayne Freie Presse; John D. Allegar, Monroeville Breeze; Ira D. Rohrer, Grabill Review; Clyde F. Moon, Woodburn News; W. E. James, Harlan Herald; O. H. Ellwood, Lagrange Democrat-Call; Charles W. Manning, Topeka Journal; C. B. OLIVE BRANCH GROWS FROM PITCHFORK GRAVE

Senator Tillman Speaks in Reply to Charges Made by Mr. Hughes.

Washington, Aug. 19.—Senator Tillman, of South Carolina, one of the southern veterans in congress, today made a speech replying to Charles E. Hughes' campaign references to southern domination of congress, and as the vehicle of expression of unity and good will between north and south referred to his sobriquet, "Pitchfork Ben."

"If I ever did hate the northern people—and I confessed to that the last time I spoke here," said he, "that hatred and partisanship have died out of my heart, and the pitchfork, if it was considered the emblem of it, has long since been buried. From its grave an olive branch has grown and I am tendering the olive branch, claiming to represent the south in doing so, to all northern people.

"I did not earn the name of 'Pitchfork' on account of my partisanship. It was due to the bluntness and frankness with which I spoke."

MORE SPEED RECORDS WERE DUE FOR A FALL

Chicago, Aug. 19.—Nine auto racers are this afternoon to start in the Grand Prix at the Chicago speedway. The race will be run in five twenty-five mile heats with a fifty mile final and $10,000 will be divided among the winning drivers.

Speedway officials, basing their claims on the results of the elimination trial yesterday, declared they expected to see several world records broken.

Louis Chevrolet was forced to withdraw from the race because a connecting rod in his car was broken during a practice spin.

Conference Between Manager Hedley and Employes is Fruitless.

New York, Aug. 19.—The breach between the street car men's union and the New York railways company, threatening a renewal of the recent trolley strike widened today when a conference between General Manager Frank Hadley, of the traction company, and union leaders adjourned without result. The conference was to have taken up various demands of the men, but Louis Fridigervaty, of the union, insisted that it was useless to proceed until the matter of the discharge of fourteen employes over the recent strike was disposed of. This the company yesterday announced its willingness to arbitrate, but the union leaders refused to accept the proposition.

The conference adjourned until next Tuesday. Telegrams were sent today by General Organizer Fitzgerald of the union, to Chairman Straus of the public service commission, and Mayor Mitchell requesting them to return, as the "situation is very serious."

NEGRO STABBED IN FIGHT NEAR DEATH

Man Slashed With Large Knife is in Critical Condition at Hospital.

James McKee, 30, colored, is at the point of death in St. Joseph hospital as the result of a battle with John Dolar and Earl Collins, two negroes, over a ten-cent debt. A fractured skull, as the result of a blow from a brick, and a rent across his abdomen, inflicted with a knife, are the extent of McKee's hurts. He may die, hospital attendants say.

Police were called to the corner of Lafayette and Wallace streets shortly ported that a man had been hurt. They ported that a man had ben hurt. They found McKee reclining in a chair in a drugstore at the corner. He was in a semi-conscious state. He was rushed to the hospital.

From people living in the neighborhood police gathered information of the fight between the men, which took place in an alley off Lafayette street. One of the men hit McKee with a brick, police learned. The two men ran when they learned that McKee was hurt, neighbors said. Collins and Dolan were arrested in a Lafayette street saloon. They denied all knowledge of the battle at first. They are held in jail charged with assault and battery with intent to kill.

ESCHBACH TO SPEAK IN CITY WEDNESDAY

Harry G. Hogan, republican Twelfth district chairman, has announced that Harry Eschbach, of Warsaw, chairman of the state republican speakers' committee, will be in Fort Wayne, Wednesday, to attend the Watson dinner to be held at the Commercial club.

The republicans will virtually open the campaign in this city with the holding of this dinner. James E. Watson, republican senatorial nominee, will share the speaking program with Mr. Eschbach, and arrangements are being made for one of the most important meetings of the campaign on Wednesday.

SIZE IS WAIVED.

The United States Navy Will Waive a Point or Two.

J. C. King, chief petty officer in charge of the Fort Wayne navy recruiting station, has received the following order from Lieut. L. H. Comfort, head of navy recruiting for Indiana: "Minors who are desirable for service and are five pounds underweight or one inch under height may be sent in. But they must be very desirable and in perfect physical condition otherwise."

ANOTHER CLUB.

Young Republicans of Marion Township Organize for Campaign.

At a meeting held Friday evening at the Center schoolhouse a young men's republican club of Marion township was organized with the election of the following officers:

A. O. Hadley, president; William Thompson, vice president; William Kaiser, secretary. Lucius Summers was made an honorary member. The club was organized by Lee Hartzell, of this city, who delivered a short address.

ATTEND RELATIVE'S FUNERAL.

Mr. and Mrs. Urban Bett, of 1202 Broadway, went to Peru Saturday morning to attend the funeral of a relative, Mrs. Fred Hufsell. The husband of the deceased is well known in Fort Wayne.

Paul U. Cooksey has left the employ of Monroe W. Fitch and Sons.

Mrs. F. E. Kimmell and daughter, Fern, of Chicago, are visiting Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Reed, of 119 Monroe street.

BASEBALL ATHLETICS

EVERYTHING SET FOR SEASON'S BIGGEST GAME

Nate James Coming With Big Collection of League Stars.

Everything is ready for the biggest game of the season when the Fort Wayne City team take on the fast Portland tossers for a nine round go Sunday. The Clearyites fully realize that the team Sunday is the best bunch of players they have had to tackle so far this season and are all primed to the limit.

Nate James is a wise one when it comes to baseball and is showing it by bringing along with him three of the best pitchers in the state. Byrd, a former Chicago Federal pitcher, who is as good as he ever was, is expected to start for the visitors. Just as good as the former leaguer are Walls and Biersdorfer. Biersdorfer is a former Fort Wayne pitcher, playing one season with Babe Meyer's Central league team. He is a pitcher above the average and can be called on at any time to take the game out of the fire if the case is such as it is necessary. Wall is also a Central leaguer, playing at one time with the Dayton club.

Behind these boys will be one of the best infields that can be found around these parts, rivaling Mart Cleary's Devilbiss, Nill, Speedy Weberus and Dornick combination, one of the best semi-pro infields in the country.

Bill Hillinger is taking no chances and is sending in his best to play the invaders. Another attraction will be the popular prices that have made such a hit with the fans this season. Game called promptly at 3 o'clock.

The lineups of the two teams are as follows:

WILL RACE AGAINST TIME.

Columbus, O., Aug. 19.—Among the special attractions at North Randall next week will be a trial against the watch by Directum I, 1:58, the fastest horse in the world, on Monday.

Thomas W. Murphy will drive the horse in an attempt to beat Carl Wilkes' time of 2:20 for one and one-eighth miles, made in 1902. He may start against another mark later in the week.

SMITH GOES TO THE SENATORS.

New York, Aug. 19.—Secretary McRoy, of the Cleveland Indians, Friday announced the trade of Elmer Smith and Joe Leonard to Washington for Joe Boehling, the Senators' southpaw, and Danny Moeller. No cash was involved in the deal. The Cleveland players will report to Washington and the latter's men to the Indians immediately.

ONE OF THESE STARS IS ALMOST SURE TO WIN 1916 ALL-COMERS' TENNIS CHAMPIONSHIP.

(By Harold Johnson.)

Can the Comet come back?

Tennis devotees are pondering this question on the eve of the all-comers' championship at Forest Hills, N. Y., starting Aug. 28.

With William M. Johnston, present title holder, and two former champs, Maurice E. McLoughlin and Richard Norris Williams, in fine physical trim students of the courts game are stumped in their efforts to predict the 1916 national master of play.

Wherever the net game thrives the impression prevails that a three-cornered battle royal is certain to follow in the big tourney which will bring together all the leading racquet wielders in the United States. Maybe the aggressive Karl Behr or the sensational George Church may come through—other enthusiasts argue.

In grappling the dope on McLoughlin the wiseacres are stymied by a colossal if. The Comet, if in shape, they contend, will give both Johnston and Williams a tough battle. This anxiety about the Californian's condition dates back to last year in the finals for the national title when young Johnston outlasted the conqueror of Wilding, who finished the match on sheer pluck.

McLoughlin simply burned himself up the previous year in defense of the Davis cup.

Johnston stands a great chance of pulling through with another victory. This slim, boyish looking Californian has a wonderful assortment of strokes, particularly a forearm drive and half volley, knows how to play his opponent and never is flustered. His game this season has been up to his standard of 1915.

Williams, champion of 1914, who learned his tennis in England, is one player without a weak stroke. No one can approach his back court attack and his service goes over with a sizzling display of pep. His second ball is always as speedy as his first.

However, Williams with all his playing skill is erratic, a weakness that makes his supporters hesitate about picking him as the next title holder.

SAYS WHITE WILL WIN.

Denver, Col., Aug. 19.—"If Freddie Welsh stays ten rounds he will get the worst lacing he ever got in his life for the next ten from Charley White," declared Nate Lewis, White's manager, Friday. Lewis thus takes exception to the general opinion among fight fans that if his man can win from the champion on Labor day at Colorado Springs, he will have to do it with a knockout.

"If the fight goes to a finish," added Lewis, "Welsh will finish so nearly out that there will be no argument as to who is the winner."

Welsh is a 6 to 5 favorite in the betting and there has been one wager of $60 to $20 that White will knock out Welsh.

AMERICAN PENNANT DRIVE CLOSING UP

New York, Aug. 19.—With their drive toward the American league pennant only started on the home grounds, the Boston Red Sox hooked up with the White Sox again Friday after falling Thursday before the bats of the Chicago crowd, who pounded Carl Mays for seven runs in four and a third innings, and won the third game of the series with the leaders. At the same time in New York, Cleveland was losing to the Yankees, and in Washington Detroit hammered the Senators for a double victory.

Cleveland's loss while Boston also was dropping a game did not lengthen the distance between the two leading clubs and they go back against the same clubs this afternoon with their status unchanged. Three games now separate them.

The remarkable teamplay of the Red Sox, coupled with the long experience under fire of every one of its players, is playing an important part in Boston's fight. Also Carrigan's pitching staff seems to have rounded into shape, and when those hurlers are going right there is little chance to beat them.

Cleveland probably will have the services of Chick Gandil, first baseman, and Bobby Roth, outfielder, again within a few days. Manager Lee Fohl said yesterday. Gandil has been out with a pair of bruised toes and Roth is under suspension. The loss of these two players is noticeable in the work of the Indians. Roth's long drives have been sorely missed and while Ivan Howard has been doing well at first, Manager Fohl declares the machine has been broken and will not be working right again until Gandil is in his accustomed place.

As a race, the tallest people in the world are the Bororos, of the southwest of Brazil. They average six feet four inches in height.

A YEAR TO TRY THEM

No house in the world has a more liberal offer: The satisfaction of first perfecting the testing of eyes and the making of glasses—of doing work so accurately that we could offer this "year to try them" belongs to the Meigs Optical Shop, 1012 Calhoun. It should be some satisfaction and safeguard to know that nearly 30,000 people are wearing Meigs' glasses. Whether it be headaches, poor vision, or misfitted glasses, let Meigs remedy the trouble.

One Minute Talks with Ballplayers

GEORGE DAUSS, DETROIT TIGERS:

"Catchers are often put on the pan for mistakes which cost their teams ball games but there are times when those mistakes are unavoidable. 'Red' McKee, of the Detroit club, made such a mistake recently and the slip-up let Cleveland win.

"Chapman was on first base, one out and Smith at bat at the time. Chapman made a bluff to steal and McKee tore off his mask to see better where he was throwing. In doing so he hit one eye with the mask and temporarily blinded himself.

"McKee made a perfect peg, had anyone been covering second, but as Chapman didn't go down no one was there and the ball sailed out to center field."

RAY CALDWELL, NEW YORK YANKEES:

"Ordinarily the steamy day is the day for the ball player. When a pitcher begins to grow old he needs the hot weather to get the old soup bone in shape. A young pitcher can get in there every day and get up speed but the veteran can't do it any more. I don't mind the hot weather if it isn't too hot. Sometimes in St. Louis the climate makes you wilt.

"Whom do I consider the most dangerous batter I face year in and year out? I'd pick Bobby Veach, of the Tigers. He always seems to have something on me. I'd rather face Cobb any time than Veach."

RELIGION, TEMPERANCE AND HEALTH

Fifth in List of Noted American Health Experts Tells How to Keep Well in Summer.

(United States government figures show disease steals $360,000,000 from the pay envelope of the nation's workers each year. You can help reduce this great theft by following simple rules of health. This is the fifth of five articles written by five of the country's highest health authorities, supplying these simple rules.—Editor.)

BY DR. J. S. M'BRIDE,
Commissioner of Health of Seattle, Wash.

overeating or undereating, and from a scientific point of view, are willing to follow the best possible advice obtainable.

The purpose of a select diet during the hot season is to invigorate the individual, to make him abstain from excesses, and particularly to increase the individual resistance to disease.

The first self-evident truth is: The amount of food during the summer months ought to be reduced. This is particularly applicable to albuminoid and carbohydrate foods.

If you eat meat, fish, eggs, etc., begin by REDUCING them for dinner, and leave them out entirely for breakfast and luncheon. These are BODY BUILDING FOODS, but during the summer months there are better ones for that purpose.

Potatoes, sugars, cereals, etc.—HEAT PRODUCING FOODS—are not as necessary during hot weather as during winter. Use sparingly of these foods as well.

The second self-evident truth is: Food during the hot season must be fresh. Preserved or canned food should be reduced to a minimum. Summer is the only season when rich and poor alike have access to fresh milk and milk products, vegetables and fruits. These should be the principal summer foods.

Vegetables, if grown in infected soil, may serve as carriers for typhoid fever germs if not properly washed, and these germs may endure for thirty days under favorable conditions. It is obvious, then, that the greatest care should be taken in the treatment of soils used for production of such foods. Thorough cleansing by the housewife of all uncooked foods used on the table is necessary.

Any person handling these foods either as producer, distributer or preparer, who has ever had typhoid fever, should by a medical examination determine whether or not he is a carrier of this or other communicable disease.

Milk, one of our very best foods, especially in summer requires close scrutiny, and assurance that the manner of handling it has been carried out according to up-to-date methods.

Drink more good, wholesome milk and pure water, with less of the so-called "soft drinks" on the market today.

Careful attention should be give to your diet on summer vacations or picnics. Many an illness can be traced to carelessness in food or drink on these trips.

do not agree on one ideal, infallible diet convenient for all alike.

It is possible, however, to select a diet which will keep in physiologic equilibrium, during the trying summer months, the great majority of people who are willing to avoid the mistakes of

Mr. J. E. Taylor, a well known evangelist, whilst journeying homeward by train became deeply interested in two young men in the carriage who were being taken to Aylesbury prison in charge of a policeman. The younger man, whose name was Saunders, had been sentenced to four weeks' imprisonment for stealing apples, with the alternative of a fine of £1 18s. 4d. Mr. Taylor spoke kindly to the prisoners, who felt keenly their position. On arriving at Aylesbury station the evangelist asked Saunders if he would like to be liberated. "I cannot pay the fine; I have not even fourpence in the world, and I don't know any one that would lend it or get it for me," was his sad reply. "I did not ask that," said Mr. Taylor; "I asked you if you would like to be set free?" "I don't know anyone that I could get the money from, and I have not a friend in the world," replied the prisoner. "That was not what I asked," continued the evangelist; "I asked you if you would like to be free?" Bursting into tears the young man exclaimed, "I would, sir." "Very well, then," said Mr. Taylor, "I will be at the prison within half an hour and have you liberated." The policeman, who was listening to the conversation, seemed sceptical about an entire stranger paying a prisoner's fine, and remarked, "I have often heard of such a thing, but never saw it done."

Meantime Mr. Taylor went home, and shortly afterwards returning with the money went to the prison and asked to see the governor. On his appearance Mr. Taylor said that he wished to see the prisoner Saunders. The governor replied that he could not be seen by a stranger. "I am particularly desirous of seeing him." "No prisoner is allowed to be visited who is only here a month." "But I have come to liberate him." "Then you must pay the fine," said the representative of law. The fine being paid, an officer was despatched to the cell, and on the prisoner appearing the governor said to him, "Walk out; you are free." There was no mistaking the gratitude that Saunders felt toward his liberator. He gave expression to it by laughing and crying and jumping for joy. Seeing a group of persons outside the prison gate, he said to them: "I was sent to prison for four weeks, and could not pay the fine, but this gentleman, whom I never saw before, paid it, and I am free." This incident is a striking illustration of man's state as a sinner, and of God's provision to meet his need. Scripture reveals the fact that we are sinners by nature and practice. "There is none righteous, no, not one." (Rom. 3, 10.) "There is not a just man upon the earth that doeth good, and sinneth not." (Eccles. 7, 20.) Granted at once that some are greater sinners than others. In God's reckoning there are fifty pence debtors, five hundred pence debtors and ten thousand talent debtors. Yet all of us were in the same predicament—we were debtors who had nothing to pay. What, then, is to become of us? There is no use imitating one of old who said to his creditors, "Lord, have patience with me, and I will pay thee all." (Matt. 18, 26.) We cannot pay a farthing of our indebtedness to God; and, besides, future good conduct cannot blot out the past. God's Holy Word declares that "Whosoever shall keep the whole law, and yet offend in one point, he is guilty of all." (James 2, 10.) Many are endeavoring to "turn over new leaves" on the page of their life's history, forgetting or ignoring the fact that it is too late in the day to talk in that way. Everyone of us has been found guilty. (Rom. 3, 19,) and "God requireth that which is past." (Eccles. 3, 15.) Must we, then, receive the wages of sin, which is eternal separation from God in conscious punishment? Thank God, there is no need that anyone should do so, for He has "devised means whereby His banished be not expelled from Him." (2 Sam. 14, 14.) What, then, are the "means" by which a holy and righteous God can justify the ungodly? "Deliver him (the sinner) from going down to the pit; I have found a ransom," (Job 33, 24,) is the message from the throne of the Eternal. What was the ransom of God's provision? "There is one God and one Mediator between God and men, the Man Christ Jesus, who gave Himself a ransom for all." (1 Tim. 2, 4, 6.) Because of what the Lord Jesus did and suffered for us, God can righteously bestow a free and full salvation upon everyone who believes the gospel of His grace.

Saunders was not afraid of spending his term of imprisonment in Aylesbury jail when he knew that his fine was paid by Mr. Taylor. Knowing that the claims of justice had been met, he rejoiced in the liberty that was his. The believer is not afraid of spending eternity in the abyss of woe. The language of his heart is expressed in the familiar lines:

"I want no other argument,
I seek no other plea;
It is enough that Jesus died,
And that He died for me."

If I were called at this moment into God's holy presence, and were asked what reason I could give why I should not be punished for my innumerable sins, the only answer that I could give would be the fact that Christ paid my ransom with His precious blood. God is satisfied with the ransom of His own provision, and I am satisfied with that which satisfies Him.

One remarkable fact regarding the prisoner Saunders is worth mentioning. When he was locked up in the cell he said to the jailer, "You won't have me long here; I shall very soon be off your hands. In half an hour the gentleman will be here to pay the fine, and I will be free." "Will you be free?" queried the jailer; "we shall take care of you for twenty-eight days." Saunders' faith that Mr. Taylor would pay his fine made him happy. Knowing that the Lord Jesus paid his ransom with His precious blood makes the believer rejoice with joy unspeakable. Sinners are not saved through faith in a work to be done by Christ, but through faith in a work already accomplished by Him. The gospel is "good news" regarding Christ's glorious atoning sacrifice. It makes known the blessed fact that "Christ died for our sins, * * * was buried and rose again." (1 Cor. 15, 1-4.) This was the gospel which the apostle Paul proclaimed to Corinthian sinners, by believing which they were saved and justified. Why not now believe "the glad and glorious gospel," which is God's power to the salvation of all who believe it? (Rom. 1, 16.)

On learning that his fine was paid by Mr. Taylor Saunders abundantly expressed his gratitude to his deliverer. Why not now do the same to the Lord Jesus Christ, who at an infinite cost paid the ransom for your deliverance? Don't try to forget your accountability to God. Whether you desire it or not there is a day of reckoning. "It is appointed unto men once to die, but after this the judgment." (Heb. 9, 27.) The ground of a sinner's condemnation is the fact that he does not believe on the Lord Jesus Christ. (John 3, 18.) May you now be enabled to say from your heart, "Thanks be unto God for His unspeakable gift!" When you do so you will be able to join in the grand old lines:

"I do believe it! I do believe it!
I am saved through the Blood of the Lamb;
My happy soul is free, for the Lord has pardoned me,

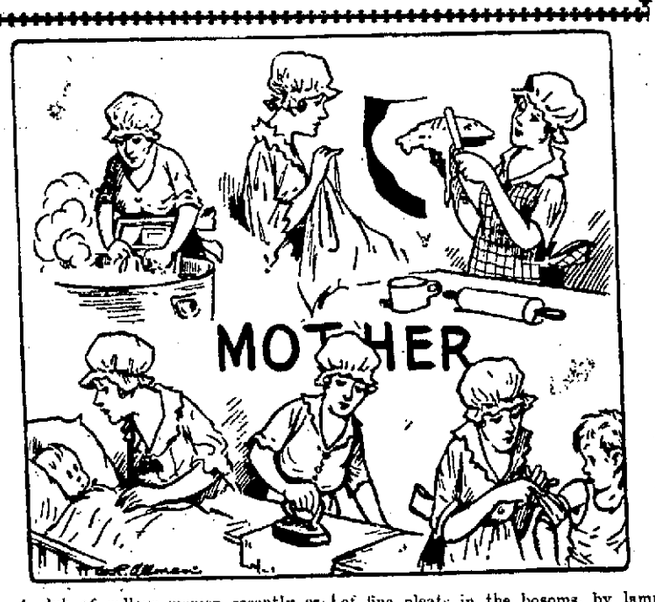
"TRAINED WOMEN."



A club of college women recently established a "bureau of occupations for trained women," meaning a place where college grads could apply for work.

Are we not getting a bit careless in the way we use the words "trained women?" We speak of trained nurses, trained office girls, trained maids as if the rest of our women folks were not of much consequence. We laud the women who train in khaki uniforms.

By all this are we not implying that the untrained woman is a very inferior person?

Now the best trained woman we ever saw was Mother. We used to think that she could do more kinds of things and do them better than any other woman on earth.

But she said Grandmother had her beaten. You could hardly count Grandmother's daily occupations, but she was an expert at them all, as well as at endless small jobs such as smoking bacon, making the boys' shirts with lots of fine pleats in the bosoms, by lamplight, and going to take care of the neighbor woman when the stork came too soon, and the doctor was fifteen miles away, in a time minus telephones and autos. She could quote the classics and teach school to support the small fry while Grandmother and the big boys fought the battles of the civil war.

That was some real training for preparedness!

And then there's our own Little Wife. You just ought to count——

But probably you have a Little Wife of your own. So just check off her claims as a "trained woman."

Life today is about as much of a strain on a woman as was the life of pioneer times. Little Wife doesn't have to "run her own candles," but you'll probably notice that her general training is pretty nearly as strenuous as that of Mother and Grandmother, and quite as valuable an asset as the culture of the modern woman having a special education in one line.

An Allowance for the Husband.

(BY THOMAS L. MASSON.)

Considering the importance of the object to be gained, it seems singular that there has been no general agitation in favor of permitting wives, not only to keep all the household accounts, but to take charge of the entire income and place the husband on an allowance. The objections to this are entirely superficial and not grounded deeply in human experience. It is, in the first place, assumed that because the husband earns the money he is entitled to control it. This would, or might be so if he likewise controlled all of the expenditures. But the reverse of this is true. In every normal family, the husband actually spends very little. Most of this is comprehended under the titles of transportation, lunches and clothes. Most of his recreations, if he is a proper husband and father, are spent with his family.

There is—by some we may admit considered unfortunately—no way in which the husband can buy all the things. This is of necessity a function that must be performed by the wife. As a matter of business, therefore, she should also control the income. The husband should be the consulting partner.

It may be contended that this is derogatory to a man's dignity. Why? On the contrary it is a distinctly undignified proceedings for a man to place his partner in a false position. It may also be argued that women are not competent to control the income. That is pure nonsense. Some women are not competent, just as some men are not. If a woman is not competent, be sure that making her responsible for nine-tenths of all of a household expenditure and then putting her on an allowance, will not tend to make her any more competent. And how about a woman's dignity?

Putting a husband on an allowance sounds rather strange, but that is only because we are not used to it. Besides, it must be remembered that the husband himself would naturally have something to say about the amount. It would be merely an affair not necessarily of arbitration but of sympathetic agreement. There is always a danger of money being considered over important. Its function is purely automatic. It should never obtrude itself. When its automatic action is properly controlled by the only one who can control it properly, then it will not be a source of contention and family embarrassment.—Physical Culture.

"I Have Missed It."

A friend of mine was preaching in a town in New Jersey, and there was a young fellow there, cashier in a bank, whom they tried to get to give his heart to God. He made the excuse that he had to go to New York.

It was in 1888, when they had that famous snowstorm, snow twelve feet deep. He had no other excuse to go than to get away from the meeting.

He was hours and hours floundering his way through the slush and the snow to his armpits to reach his hotel, and when he arrived at the old Astor House, down on Broadway, he was wet and chilled and he could hardly stand.

They summoned a physician. One glance and he said to him: "Have you a mother alive?"

"Yes, sir."

"Wife alive?"

"Yes."

"In—New Jersey."

"I'll send for them."

He looked at the doctor and said: "My, God, you don't think it's that bad?"

"Yes, it's bad. Get them here quickly. It's pneumonia. I don't think I can help you."

He turned his face to the wall and said: "I have missed it. I have missed it. I have missed it."

The doctor said: "What do you mean?"

He said: "I had nothing to bring me here. I merely did it to get away from the meeting, and judgment followed me."

His wife and his mother hurried to his bedside, and as they entered the room he faintly whispered, "I have missed it."

They begged, they pleaded, they prayed, and after every entreaty he would respond faintly, "I have missed it." The lamp of life flickered, and as it went out, the last words that fell from his lips were, "I have missed it; I have—" and he gasped and was no more.

It is not necessary to commit some great sin to be lost; just neglect it. Let the merchant neglect his business and he is bankrupt. Let the one who is sick neglect to send for a physician and he will die.—William A. Sunday.

EIGHT LESSONS FROM THE BEE.

1. Bees are early risers.
2. They delight in fresh air.
3. They teach us to be industrious. No bee ever shirks his work.
4. They teach us to be clean. Nothing can be cleaner than the home of the bee.
5. They are very peaceful, and seldom quarrel or fight among themselves.
6. They teach us to be fond of our homes. No bee leaves his home except for a time, if he can help it.
7. They show much sympathy or kind fellow-feeling for each other in distress and will never leave a friend in trouble without trying to help him.

ONLY FOOLS ARE UNAFRAID.

An advertisement of whisky in a New York paper says: "Total abstinence is a form of fear, and fear is the cause of failure."

The New York Tribune suggests that this might be carried a step or two further and applied to smoking opium, snuffing cocaine, looking down the muzzle of a loaded gun, etc.

One of Richard Harding Davis' novel heroes sneers at an experienced old filibuster because he flinches before a leveled revolver.

"Son," said the old man, "when you have smelled as much powder as I have you will have sense enough to be afraid of a gun, too."

Two Young Men

One day recently a young man was recommended by a friend for a position that offered much for the future.

He looked good for that particular job and both his friend and his new employer were glad.

Two weeks later he was summarily sent to the office to get his money. He was fired.

He couldn't put through a morning without slipping out behind the factory to smoke cigarettes and he was caught at it.

Another young man was recommended by the same man for another job.

It was in the office of a large corporation. The man was more cautious this time about making the recommendation too strong.

This young man had only been at work one week when the office manager called up the man who had recommended him and said:

"If you have any more men like the one you sent me, I want them. He is clean cut, attends strictly to business and is WHOLLY DEPENDABLE."

The employing agent at a local automobile factory said the other day that he passes by the applicants with the tell-tale yellow stains on their fingers.

All along the line, business is looking for DEPENDABLE YOUNG MEN today.

The cigarette smoker is not included in the dependable class.

HE HAS PROMISED.

Do you believe you are a lost sinner?

Do you believe you cannot save yourself?

Do you believe Jesus Christ can save you?

If these questions are answered affirmatively, very well, then give yourself to Christ, just as you are, and believe that he will receive you and save you, because he has promised to do it.

Family Worship —An Incident

Ten years ago I boarded in the family of a pious woman whose husband was not a Christian. There was a daughter of 19, another of 14 and a son of 10. Every morning I heard that humble woman gather her family in the kitchen and read with them a chapter, verse about, in the Bible. Then, as I could not help listening, there was a peculiarity of service that mystified me.

At last I asked one day if I might remain. She hesitated; her daughter blushed, but she said I could do so if I really desired it. So I sat down with the rest. They gave me a Testament, and we read a verse in turn. Then kneeling on the floor, that mother began her prayer audibly, for her dear ones there, her husband and herself; and then pausing a moment, as if to gather energy or wing her faith, uttered a tender, affectionate supplication for me.

She closed and her daughter began to pray. Poor girl; she was afraid of me. I was from college; I was her teacher; but she tremulously asked for a blessing as usual. Then came the other daughter, and at last the son, the youngest of that circle, who only repeated the Lord's prayer, with one petition of his own.

His "Amen" was said, but no one arose. I knew on the instant they were waiting for me. And I, poor prayerless I, had no word to say. It almost broke my heart. I hurried from the room, desolate and guilty.

A few weeks only passed, when I asked their permission to come in once more, and then I prayed, too, and thanked my dear, patient Savior for the hope in my heart and the new song on my lips.—Selected.

Federal Law's Effect on State Liquor Laws.

Somehow I hate to be found agreeing with Cyclone Davis, of Texas. I am, however, willing to be with him when he is right.

Davis has introduced a bill to prohibit the United States commissioner of internal revenue from issuing liquor licenses to bootleggers, blind pig keepers and other violators of the liquor laws.

Why should the United States government issue liquor licenses authorizing people to sell whisky in Kansas or Maine or West Virginia?

Everybody concerned knows that these licenses cannot be used except for criminal purposes.

Everybody knows that in taking these license fees the United States government is taking a bribe not to interfere with the violation of state laws.

It becomes an accomplice in the local crimes.

It sells its favor to law breakers.

It does what it would put an individual in jail for.

It compounds felony.

Let us suppose that the government collected a tax on revolvers when carried by private individuals, as it might easily decide some time to do. It would have revenue officers out all over the country to arrest and punish violators of the gun-license law. Suppose that the city of New York, suffering from the murderous activities of its organized gunmen, should pass a law absolutely prohibiting the carrying of revolvers—and that other states were to do the same thing, as they have.

The gunmen would not like to violate the federal revolver license law, any more than they do the federal liquor license law. Being a gunman in violation of state laws is a precarious business—as it should be.

Being a rum seller in violation of state law is precarious and risky—as it should be.

Would it be right, would it even be decent, would it comport with the duty of our government to its people, for the United States government to continue to sell gun licenses in anti-gun-toting states?

"We have the police force with which we might help the states to enforce this law which you desire to violate," says the United States. "Pay us money and we won't help the states!"

Whatever may be one's views on prohibition, no candid mind can deny that this policy is unspeakably shameful!

THE BIBLE.

The Bible is the begetter of life; the uprooter of sin; the revealer of God; the guide of history; the fashioner of law; the friend of science; the comfort in sorrow; the foe to superstition; the text-book of ethics; the star of death's night; the light of the intellect; the enemy of oppression; the strength in weakness; the promise of the future; the pathway in perplexity; the illuminator of darkness; the escape from temptation; the forerunner of civilization; the charter of all true liberty; the inspiration of philosophies, the secret of national progress, the soul of all strong heart life; the steadier in the day of power, the embodiment of all lofty ideals; the guide and hope and inspiration of man; the ornament and mainspring of literature; the molder of institutions and governments; the regulator of all high and worthy standards; the answer to the deepest human heart hungerings.—Bishop William F. Anderson.

LOOK TWICE.

Impulses are immensely valuable assets—some of them. But we can afford to hold them in abeyance long enough to look twice at them. A good impulse will bear looking at twice, and will not suffer seriously by the delay of a few seconds. A bad impulse, on the other hand, needs, ordinarily, only a second look to declare itself unworthy of being indulged. Our trouble is that we are apt to treat all impulses (except, perhaps, certain religious ones) as worthy of prompt obedience. At least we are quick to obey the impulse to speak harshly, to pass ungenerous judgment, to "get even," as we say. We are apt to honor such impulses almost before they are born. Most of them have no right to be honored thus; and comparatively few of them would be, if we looked at them twice. He must be a pretty mean man who can calmly look a mean impulse in the face and not be ashamed of it.—George Clarke Peck.

Meet Me in Heaven

(Rev. Joseph Wardle, Eighty-two years young.)

I am so glad that I am growing old. I was eighty-two years old May 1, 1916. Each day brings me nearer heaven, and I have blessings now that I never enjoyed before.

After I had prayed at "Billy" Sunday's meeting at Philadelphia, an old soldier rushed up to me and said:

"I must shake hands with you. It is the greatest sermon I ever heard."

"Yes, 'Billy' Sunday preached a great sermon," I replied.

"But it was not what 'Billy' Sunday preached, but what you said in prayer, 'I am so glad I'm growing old,' that struck me. I am now a changed man. Hallelujah!"

The old soldier had shaken hands with God.

I envy no young man. I have safely passed precipices where thousands have fallen over. I do not want to try life over.

I graduated at Garrett Biblical institute in 1861 with Bishop Fowler and Dr. Chadwick.

Oliver, Frances Willard's brother, called on me at college and called me a walking ghost and said I would not live five years, and then would be in heaven.

"I have always greeted the inevitable with joy and am ready for old age and death," I said. "There is a crown on every cross, a sunrise in every tomb, and I hear marriage bells when death invites to God's palace."

I am not rich, but am sending treasures each day and asking everybody to meet me in heaven.

Presidents Grant, Harrison, Cleveland, McKinley, Roosevelt, Taft and Wilson have answered "Yes" to my question, "Will you meet me in heaven?" Many of my darlings are in heaven and I am looking daily over the Lamb's Book of Life and see there recorded these promises and rejoice. Yonder hosts are calling, loved ones beckoning, God and His Son welcome to eternal sunshine, cross, glory and reunions. Meet me there. Yours for heaven. Pray for me.

BASEBALL ATHLETICS

EVERYTHING SET FOR SEASON'S BIGGEST GAME

Nate James Coming With Big Collection of League Stars.

Everything is ready for the biggest game of the season when the Fort Wayne City team take on the fast Portland tossers for a nine round go Sunday. The Clearyites fully realize that the team Sunday is the best bunch of players they have had to tackle so far this season and are all primed to the limit.

Nate James is a wise one when it comes to baseball and is showing it by bringing along with him three of the best pitchers in the state. Byrd, a former Chicago Federal pitcher, who is as good as he ever was, is expected to start for the visitors. Just as good as the former leaguer are Walls and Biersdorfer. Biersdorfer is a former Fort Wayne pitcher, playing one season with Babe Meyer's Central league team. He is a pitcher above the average and can be called on at any time to take the game out of the fire if the case is such as it is necessary. Wall is also a Central leaguer, playing at one time with the Dayton club.

Behind these boys will be one of the best infields that can be found around these parts, rivaling Mart Cleary's Devilbiss, Nill, Speedy Weberus and Dornick combination, one of the best semi-pro infields in the country.

Bill Hillinger is taking no chances and is sending in his best to play the invaders. Another attraction will be the popular prices that have made such a hit with the fans this season. Game called promptly at 3 o'clock.

The lineups of the two teams are as follows:

WILL RACE AGAINST TIME.

Columbus, O., Aug. 19.—Among the special attractions at North Randall next week will be a trial against the watch by Directum I, 1:58, the fastest horse in the world, on Monday.

Thomas W. Murphy will drive the horse in an attempt to beat Carl Wilkes' time of 2:20 for one and one-eighth miles, made in 1902. He may start against another mark later in the week.

SMITH GOES TO THE SENATORS.

New York, Aug. 19.—Secretary McRoy, of the Cleveland Indians, Friday announced the trade of Elmer Smith and Joe Leonard to Washington for Joe Boehling, the Senators' southpaw, and Danny Moeller. No cash was involved in the deal. The Cleveland players will report to Washington and the latter's men to the Indians immediately.

SAYS WHITE WILL WIN.

Denver, Col., Aug. 19.—"If Freddie Welsh stays ten rounds he will get the worst lacing he ever got in his life for the next ten from Charley White," declared Nate Lewis, White's manager, Friday. Lewis thus takes exception to the general opinion among fight fans that if his man can win from the champion on Labor day at Colorado Springs, he will have to do it with a knockout.

"If the fight goes to a finish," added Lewis, "Welsh will finish so nearly out that there will be no argument as to who is the winner."

Welsh is a 6 to 5 favorite in the betting and there has been one wager of $60 to $20 that White will knock out Welsh.

(By Harold Johnson.)

Can the Comet come back?

Tennis devotees are pondering this question on the eve of the all-comers' championship at Forest Hills, N. Y., starting Aug. 28.

With William M. Johnston, present title holder, and two former champs, Maurice E. McLoughlin and Richard Norris Williams, in fine physical trim students of the courts game are stumped in their efforts to predict the 1916 national master of play.

Wherever the net game thrives the impression prevails that a three-cornered battle royal is certain to follow in the big tourney which will bring together all the leading racquet wielders in the United States. Maybe the aggressive Karl Behr or the sensational George Church may come through—other enthusiasts argue.

In grappling the dope on McLoughlin the wiseacres are stymied by a colossal if. The Comet, if in shape, they contend, will give both Johnston and Williams a tough battle. This anxiety about the Californian's condition dates back to last year in the finals for the national title when young Johnston outlasted the conqueror of Wilding, who finished the match on sheer pluck.

McLoughlin simply burned himself up the previous year in defense of the Davis cup.

Johnston stands a great chance of pulling through with another victory. This slim, boyish looking Californian has a wonderful assortment of strokes, particularly a forearm drive and half volley, knows how to play his opponent and never is flustered. His game this season has been up to his standard of 1915.

Williams, champion of 1914, who learned his tennis in England, is one player without a weak stroke. No one can approach his back court attack and his service goes over with a sizzling display of pep. His second ball is always as speedy as his first.

AMERICAN PENNANT DRIVE CLOSING UP

New York, Aug. 19.—With their drive toward the American league pennant only started on the home grounds, the Boston Red Sox booked up with the White Sox again Friday after falling Thursday before the bats of the Chicago crowd, who pounded Carl Mays for seven runs in four and a third innings, and won the third game of the series with the leaders. At the same time in New York, Cleveland was losing to the Yankees, and in Washington Detroit hammered the Senators for a double victory.

Cleveland's loss while Boston also was dropping a game did not lengthen the distance between the two leading clubs and they go back against the same clubs this afternoon with their status unchanged. Three games now separate them.

The remarkable teamplay of the Red Sox, coupled with the long experience under fire of every one of its players, is playing an important part in Boston's fight. Also Carrigan's pitching staff seems to have rounded into shape, and when those hurlers are going right there is little chance to beat them.

Cleveland probably will have the services of Chick Gandil, first baseman, and Bobby Roth, outfielder, again within a few days. Manager Lee Fohl said yesterday. Gandil has been out with a pair of bruised toes and Roth is under suspension. The loss of these two players is noticeable in the work of the Indians. Roth's long drives have been sorely missed and while Ivan Howard has been doing well at first, Manager Fohl declares the machine has been broken and will not be working right again until Gandil is in his accustomed place.

Get-Away Card at Columbus is Tamest of the Week's Racing.

Columbus, O., Aug. 19.—Withdrawals took half the scheduled events of Friday's Grand circuit racing card and the get-away program was limited to the 2:18 pace, won by Miss Rejected in straight heats, and the 2:15 trot that Lindsey won in a five heat contest with Baby Doll. Charles Valentine was the driver of both original favorites.

Linsey, the winner, was the second choice and the only victor of the week for the McDonald stable. Judges unseated Driver Durfee and put Baby Doll in charge of Valentine in the fifth heat. She made the pace for more than half the distance, but tired early in the final quarter. Summaries:

One Minute Talks with Ballplayers

GEORGE DAUSS, DETROIT TIGERS:

"Catchers are often put on the pan for mistakes which cost their teams ball games but there are times when these mistakes are unavoidable. 'Red' McKee, of the Detroit club, made such a mistake recently and the slip-up let Cleveland win.

"Chapman was on first base, one out and Smith at bat at the time. Chapman made a bluff to steal and McKee tore off his mask to see better where he was throwing. In doing so he hit one eye with the mask and temporarily blinded himself.

"McKee made a perfect peg, had anyone been covering second, but as Chapman didn't go down no one was there and the ball sailed out to center field."

RAY CALDWELL, NEW YORK YANKEES:

"Ordinarily the steamy day is the day for the ball player. When a pitcher begins to grow old he needs the hot weather to get the old soup bone in shape. A young pitcher can get in there every day and get up speed but the veteran can't do it any more. I don't mind the hot weather if it isn't too hot. Sometimes in St. Louis the climate makes you wilt.

"Whom do I consider the most dangerous batter I face year in and year out? I'd pick Bobby Veach, of the Tigers. He always seems to have something on me. I'd rather face Cobb any time than Veach."

RELIGION, TEMPERANCE AND HEALTH

Fifth in List of Noted American Health Experts Tells How to Keep Well in Summer.

(United States government figures show disease steals $360,000,000 from the pay envelope of the nation's workers each year. You can help reduce this great theft by following simple rules of health. This is the fifth of five articles written by five of the country's highest health authorities, supplying these simple rules.—Editor.)

overeating or undereating, and from a scientific point of view, are willing to follow the best possible advice obtainable.

The purpose of a select diet during the hot season is to invigorate the individual, to make him abstain from excesses, and particularly to increase the individual resistance to disease.

The first self-evident truth is: The amount of food during the summer months ought to be reduced. This is particularly applicable to albuminoid and carbohydrate foods.

If you eat meat, fish, eggs, etc., begin by REDUCING them for dinner, and leave them out entirely for breakfast and luncheon. These are BODY BUILDING FOODS, but during the summer months there are better ones for that purpose.

Potatoes, sugars, cereals, etc.—HEAT PRODUCING FOODS—are not as necessary during hot weather as during winter. Use sparingly of these foods as well.

The second self-evident truth is: Food during the hot season must be fresh. Preserved or canned food should be reduced to a minimum. Summer is the only season when rich and poor alike have access to fresh milk and milk products, vegetables and fruits. These should be the principal summer foods.

Vegetables, if grown in infected soil, may serve as carriers for typhoid fever germs if not properly washed, and these germs may endure for thirty days under favorable conditions. It is obvious, then, that the greatest care should be taken in the treatment of soils used for production of such foods. Thorough cleansing by the housewife of all uncooked foods used on the table is necessary.

Any person handling these foods either as producer, distributer or preparer, who has ever had typhoid fever, should by a medical examination determine whether or not he is a carrier of this or other communicable disease.

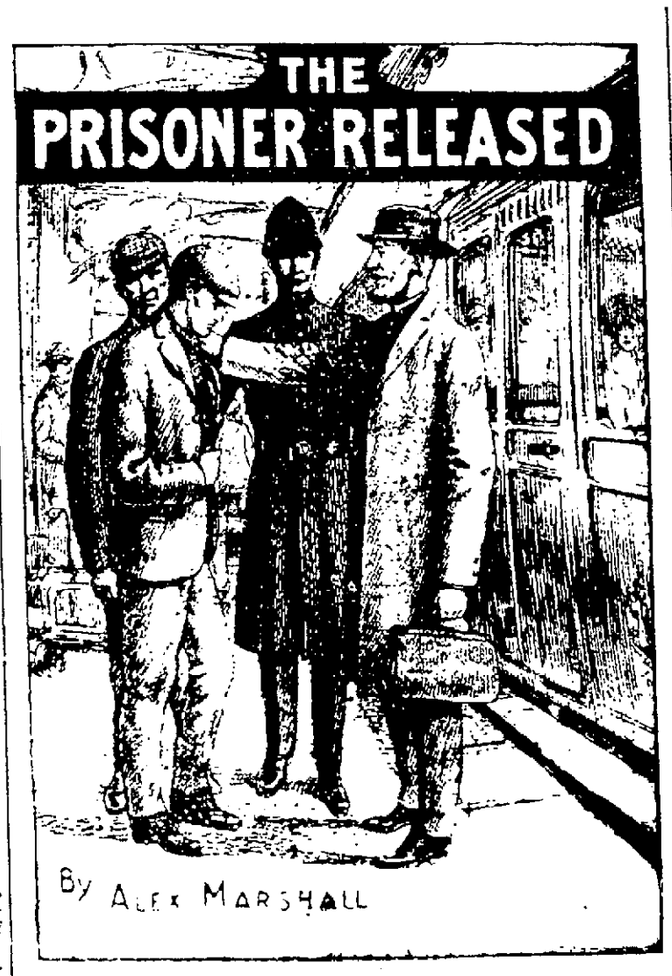
Milk, one of our very best foods, especially in summer requires close scrutiny, and assurance that the manner of handling it has been carried out according to up-to-date methods.

Drink more good, wholesome milk and pure water, with less of the so-called "soft drinks" on the market today.

Careful attention should be give to your diet on summer vacations or picnics. Many an illness can be traced to carelessness in food or drink on these trips.

do not agree on one ideal, infallible diet convenient for all alike.

It is possible, however, to select a diet which will keep in physiologic equilibrium, during the trying summer months, the great majority of people who are willing to avoid the mistakes of



Mr. J. E. Taylor, a well known evangelist, whilst journeying homeward by train became deeply interested in two young men in the carriage who were being taken to Aylesbury prison in charge of a policeman. The younger man, whose name was Saunders, had been sentenced to four weeks' imprisonment for stealing apples, with the alternative of a fine of £1 18s. 4d. Mr. Taylor spoke kindly to the prisoners, who felt keenly their position. On arriving at Aylesbury station the evangelist asked Saunders if he would like to be liberated. "I cannot pay the fine; I have not even fourpence in the world, and I don't know any one that would lend it or get it for me," was his sad reply. "I did not ask that," said Mr. Taylor; "I asked you if you would like to be set free?" "I don't know anyone that I could get the money from, and I have not a friend in the world," replied the prisoner. "That was not what I asked," continued the evangelist; "I asked you if you would like to be free?" Bursting into tears the young man exclaimed, "I would, sir." "Very well, then," said Mr. Taylor, "I will be at the prison within half an hour and have you liberated." The policeman, who was listening to the conversation, seemed sceptical about an entire stranger paying a prisoner's fine, and remarked, "I have often heard of such a thing, but never saw it done."

Meantime Mr. Taylor went home, and shortly afterwards returning with the money went to the prison and asked to see the governor. On his appearance Mr. Taylor said that he wished to see the prisoner Saunders. The governor replied that he could not be seen by a stranger. "I am particularly desirous of seeing him." "No prisoner is allowed to be visited who is only here a month." "But I have come to liberate him." "Then you must pay the fine," said the representative of law. The fine being paid, an officer was despatched to the cell, and on the prisoner appearing the governor said to him, "Walk out; you are free." There was no mistaking the gratitude that Saunders felt toward his liberator. He gave expression to it by laughing and crying and jumping for joy. Seeing a group of persons outside the prison gate, he said to them: "I was sent to prison for four weeks, and could not pay the fine, but this gentleman, whom I never saw before, paid it, and I am free." This incident is a striking illustration of man's state as a sinner, and of God's provision to meet his need. Scripture reveals the fact that we are sinners by nature and practice. "There is none righteous, no, not one." (Rom. 3, 10.) "There is not a just man upon the earth that doeth good, and sinneth not." (Eccles. 7, 20.) Granted at once that some are greater sinners than others. In God's reckoning there are fifty pence debtors, five hundred pence debtors and ten thousand talent debtors. Yet all of us were in the same predicament—we were debtors who had nothing to pay. What, then, is to become of us? There is no use imitating one of old who said to his creditors, "Lord, have patience with me, and I will pay thee all." (Matt. 18, 26.) We cannot pay a farthing of our indebtedness to God; and, besides, future good conduct cannot blot out the past. God's Holy Word declares that "Whosoever shall keep the whole law, and yet offend in one point, he is guilty of all." (James 2, 10.) Many are endeavoring to "turn over new leaves" on the page of their life's history, forgetting or ignoring the fact that it is too late in the day to talk in that way. Everyone of us has been found guilty. (Rom. 3, 19.) and "God requireth that which is past." (Eccles. 3, 15.) Must we, then, receive the wages of sin, which is eternal separation from God in conscious punishment? Thank God, there is no need that anyone should do so, for He has "devised means whereby His banished be not expelled from Him." (2 Sam. 14, 14.) What, then, are the "means" by which a holy and righteous God can justify the ungodly? "Deliver him (the sinner) from going down to the pit: I have found a ransom," (Job 33, 24.) is the message from the throne of the Eternal. What was the ransom of God's provision? "There is one God and one Mediator between God and men, the Man Christ Jesus, who gave Himself a ransom for all." (1 Tim. 2, 4, 6.) Because of what the Lord Jesus did and suffered for us, God can righteously bestow a free and full salvation upon everyone who believes the gospel of His grace.

Saunders was not afraid of spending his term of imprisonment in Aylesbury jail when he knew that his fine was paid by Mr. Taylor. Knowing that the claims of justice had been met, he rejoiced in the liberty that was his. The believer is not afraid of spending eternity in the abyss of woe. The language of his heart is expressed in the familiar lines:

"I want no other argument,
I seek no other plea;
It is enough that Jesus died,
And that He died for me."

If I were called at this moment into God's holy presence, and were asked what reason I could give why I should not be punished for my innumerable sins, the only answer that I could give would be the fact that Christ paid my ransom with His precious blood. God is satisfied with the ransom of His own provision, and I am satisfied with that which satisfies Him.

One remarkable fact regarding the prisoner Saunders is worth mentioning. When he was locked up in the cell he said to the jailer, "You won't have me long here; I shall very soon be off your hands. In half an hour the gentleman will be here to pay the fine, and I will be free." "Will you be free?" queried the jailer; "we shall take care of you for twenty-eight days." Saunders' faith that Mr. Taylor would pay his fine made him happy. Knowing that the Lord Jesus paid his ransom with His precious blood makes the believer rejoice with joy unspeakable. Sinners are not saved through faith in a work to be done by Christ, but through faith in a work already accomplished by Him. The gospel is "good news" regarding Christ's glorious atoning sacrifice. It makes known the blessed fact that "Christ died for our sins, * * * was buried and rose again." (1 Cor. 15, 1-4.) This was the gospel which the apostle Paul proclaimed to Corinthian sinners, by believing which they were saved and justified. Why not now believe "the glad and glorious gospel," which is God's power to the salvation of all who believe it? (Rom. 1, 16.)

On learning that his fine was paid by Mr. Taylor Saunders abundantly expressed his gratitude to his deliverer. Why not now do the same to the Lord Jesus Christ, who at an infinite cost paid the ransom for your deliverance? Don't try to forget your accountability to God. Whether you desire it or not there is a day of reckoning. "It is appointed unto men once to die, but after this the judgment." (Heb. 9, 27.) The ground of a sinner's condemnation is the fact that he does not believe on the Lord Jesus Christ. (John 3, 18.) May you now be enabled to say from your heart, "Thanks be unto God for His unspeakable gift!" When you do so you will be able to join in the grand old lines:

"I do believe it! I do believe it!
I am saved through the Blood of the Lamb;
My happy soul is free, for the Lord has pardoned me,

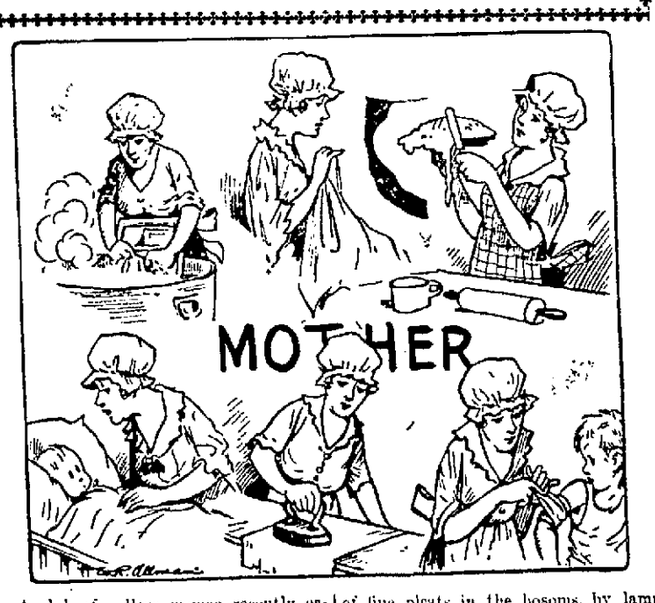
"TRAINED WOMEN."



A club of college women recently established a "bureau of occupations for trained women," meaning a place where college grads could apply for work.

Are we not getting a bit careless in the way we use the words "trained women?" We speak of trained nurses, trained office girls, trained maids as if the rest of our women folks were not of much consequence. We laud the women who train in khaki uniforms.

By all this are we not implying that the untrained woman is a very inferior person?

Now the best trained woman we ever saw was Mother. We used to think that she could do more kinds of things and do them better than any other woman on earth.

But she said Grandmother had her beaten. You could hardly count Grandmother's daily occupations, but she was an expert at them all, as well as at endless small jobs such as smoking bacon, making the boys' shirts with lots of fine pleats in the bosoms, by lamplight, and going to take care of the neighbor woman when the stork came too soon, and the doctor was fifteen miles away, in a time minus telephones and autos. She could quote the classics and teach school to support the small fry while Grandmother and the big boys fought the battles of the civil war.

That was some real training for preparedness!

And then there's our own Little Wife. You just ought to count——

But probably you have a Little Wife of your own. So just check off her claims as a "trained woman."

Life today is about as much of a strain on a woman as was the life of pioneer times. Little Wife doesn't have to "run her own candles," but you'll probably notice that her general training is pretty nearly as strenuous as that of Mother and Grandmother, and quite as valuable an asset as the culture of the modern woman having a special education in one line.

An Allowance for the Husband.

(BY THOMAS L. MASSON.)

Considering the importance of the object to be gained, it seems singular that there has been no general agitation in favor of permitting wives, not only to keep all the household accounts, but to take charge of the entire income and place the husband on an allowance. The objections to this are entirely superficial and not grounded deeply in human experience. It is, in the first place, assumed that because the husband earns the money he is entitled to control it. This would, or might be so if he likewise controlled all of the expenditures. But the reverse of this is true. In every normal family, the husband actually spends very little. Most of this is comprehended under the titles of transportation, lunches and clothes. Most of his recreations, if he is a proper husband and father, are spent with his family.

There is—by some we may admit considered unfortunately—no way in which the husband can buy all the things. This is of necessity a function that must be performed by the wife. As a matter of business, therefore, she should also control the income. The husband should be the consulting partner.

It may be contended that this is derogatory to a man's dignity. Why? On the contrary it is a distinctly undignified proceedings for a man to place his partner in a false position. It may also be argued that women are not competent to control the income. That is pure nonsense. Some women are not competent, just as some men are not. If a woman is not competent, be sure that making her responsible for nine-tenths of all of a household expenditure and then putting her on an allowance, will not tend to make her any more competent. And how about a woman's dignity?

Putting a husband on an allowance sounds rather strange, but that is only because we are not used to it. Besides, it must be remembered that the husband himself would naturally have something to say about the amount. It would be merely an affair not necessarily of arbitration but of sympathetic agreement. There is always a danger of money being considered over important. Its function is purely automatic. It should never obtrude itself. When its automatic action is properly controlled by the only one who can control it properly, then it will not be a source of contention and family embarrassment. —Physical Culture.

"I Have Missed It."

A friend of mine was preaching in a town in New Jersey, and there was a young fellow there, cashier in a bank, whom they tried to get to give his heart to God. He made the excuse that he had to go to New York.

It was in 1888, when they had that famous snowstorm, snow twelve feet deep. He had no other excuse to go than to get away from the meeting.

He was hours and hours floundering his way through the slush and the snow to his armpits to reach his hotel, and when he arrived at the old Astor House, down on Broadway, he was wet and chilled and he could hardly stand.

They summoned a physician. One glance and he said to him: "Have you a mother alive?"

"Yes, sir."

"Wife alive?"

"Yes."

"In—New Jersey."

"I'll send for them."

He looked at the doctor and said: "My God, you don't think it's that bad?"

"Yes, it's bad. Get them here quickly. It's pneumonia. I don't think I can help you."

He turned his face to the wall and said: "I have missed it. I have missed it. I have missed it."

The doctor said: "What do you mean?"

He said: "I had nothing to bring me here. I merely did it to get away from the meeting, and judgment followed me."

His wife and his mother hurried to his bedside, and as they entered the room he faintly whispered, "I have missed it."

They begged, they pleaded, they prayed, and after every entreaty he would respond faintly, "I have missed it." The lamp of life flickered, and as it went out, the last words that fell from his lips were, "I have missed it; I have—" and he gasped and was no more.

It is not necessary to commit some great sin to be lost; just neglect it. Let the merchant neglect his business and he is bankrupt. Let the one who is sick neglect to send for a physician and he will die.—William A. Sunday.

EIGHT LESSONS FROM THE BEE.

1. Bees are early risers.
2. They delight in fresh air.
3. They teach us to be industrious. No bee ever shirks his work.
4. They teach us to be clean. Nothing can be cleaner than the home of the bee.
5. They are very peaceful, and seldom quarrel or fight among themselves.
6. They teach us to be fond of our homes. No bee leaves his home except for a time, if he can help it.
7. They show much sympathy or kind fellow-feeling for each other in distress and will never leave a friend in trouble without trying to help him.

ONLY FOOLS ARE UNAFRAID.

An advertisement of whisky in a New York paper says: "Total abstinence is a form of fear, and fear is the cause of failure."

The New York Tribune suggests that this might be carried a step or two further and applied to smoking opium, snuffing cocaine, looking down the muzzle of a loaded gun, etc.

One of Richard Harding Davis' novel heroes sneers at an experienced old filibuster because he flinches before a leveled revolver.

"Son," said the old man, "when you have smelled as much powder as I have you will have sense enough to be afraid of a gun, too."

Two Young Men

One day recently a young man was recommended by a friend for a position that offered much for the future.

He looked good for that particular job and both his friend and his new employer were glad.

Two weeks later he was summarily sent to the office to get his money. He was fired.

He couldn't put through a morning without slipping out behind the factory to smoke cigarettes and he was caught at it.

Another young man was recommended by the same man for another job.

It was in the office of a large corporation. The man was more cautious this time about making the recommendation too strong.

This young man had only been at work one week when the office manager called up the man who had recommended him and said:

"If you have any more men like the one you sent me, I want them. He is clean cut, attends strictly to business and is WHOLLY DEPENDABLE."

The employing agent at a local automobile factory said the other day that he passes by the applicants with the telltale yellow stains on their fingers.

All along the line, business is looking for DEPENDABLE YOUNG MEN today.

HE HAS PROMISED.

Do you believe you are a lost sinner?

Do you believe you cannot save yourself?

Do you believe Jesus Christ can save you?

If these questions are answered affirmatively, very well, then give yourself to Christ, just as you are, and believe that he will receive you and save you, because he has promised to do it.

Family Worship —An Incident

Ten years ago I boarded in the family of a pious woman whose husband was not a Christian. There was a daughter of 19, another of 14 and a son of 10. Every morning I heard that humble woman gather her family in the kitchen and read with them a chapter, verse about, in the Bible. Then, as I could not help listening, there was a peculiarity of service that mystified me.

At last I asked one day if I might remain. She hesitated; her daughter blushed, but she said I could do so if I really desired it. So I sat down with the rest. They gave me a Testament, and we read a verse in turn. Then kneeling on the floor, that mother began her prayer audibly, for her dear ones there, her husband and herself; and then pausing a moment, as if to gather energy or wing her faith, uttered a tender, affectionate supplication for me.

She closed and her daughter began to pray. Poor girl; she was afraid of me, I was from college; I was her teacher; but she tremulously asked for a blessing as usual. Then came the other daughter, and at last the son, the youngest of that circle, who only repeated the Lord's prayer, with one petition of his own.

His "Amen" was said, but no one arose. I knew on the instant they were waiting for me. And I, poor prayerless I, had no word to say. It almost broke my heart. I hurried from the room, desolate and guilty.

A few weeks only passed, when I asked their permission to come in once more; and then I prayed, too, and thanked my dear, patient Savior for the hope in my heart and the new song on my lips.—Selected.

Federal Law's Effect on State Liquor Laws.

Somehow I hate to be found agreeing with Cyclone Davis, of Texas. I am, however, willing to be with him when he is right.

Davis has introduced a bill to prohibit the United States commissioner of internal revenue from issuing liquor licenses to bootleggers, blind pig keepers and other violators of the liquor laws.

Why should the United States government issue liquor licenses authorizing people to sell whisky in Kansas or Maine or West Virginia?

Everybody concerned knows that these licenses cannot be used except for criminal purposes.

Everybody knows that in taking these license fees the United States government is taking a bribe not to interfere with the violation of state laws.

It becomes an accomplice in the local crimes.

It sells its favor to law breakers.

It does what it would put an individual in jail for.

It compounds felony.

Let us suppose that the government collected a tax on revolvers when carried by private individuals, as it might easily decide some time to do. It would have revenue officers out all over the country to arrest and punish violators of the gun-license law. Suppose that the city of New York, suffering from the murderous activities of its organized gunmen, should pass a law absolutely prohibiting the carrying of revolvers—and that other states were to do the same thing, as they have.

The gunmen would not like to violate the federal revolver license law, any more than they do the federal liquor license law. Being a gunman in violation of state laws is a precarious business—as it should be.

Being a rum seller in violation of state law is precarious and risky—as it should be.

Would it be right, would it even be decent, would it comport with the duty of our government to its people, for the United States government to continue to sell gun licenses in anti-gun-toting states?

"We have the police force with which we might help the states to enforce this law which you desire to violate," says the United States. "Pay us money and we won't help the states!"

Whatever may be one's views on prohibition, no candid mind can deny that this policy is unspeakably shameful!

THE BIBLE.

The Bible is the begetter of life; the uprooter of sin; the revealer of God; the guide of history; the fashioner of law; the friend of science; the comfort in sorrow; the foe to superstition; the text-book of ethics; the star of death's night; the light of the intellect; the enemy of oppression; the strength in weakness; the promise of the future; the pathway in perplexity; the illuminator of darkness; the escape from temptation; the forerunner of civilization; the charter of all true liberty; the inspiration of philosophies, the secret of national progress, the soul of all strong heart life; the steadier in the day of power, the embodiment of all lofty ideals; the guide and hope and inspiration of man; the ornament and mainspring of literature; the molder of institutions and governments; the regulator of all high and worthy standards; the answer to the deepest human heart hungerings.—Bishop William F. Anderson.

LOOK TWICE.

Impulses are immensely valuable assets—some of them. But we can afford to hold them in abeyance long enough to look twice at them. A good impulse will bear looking at twice and will not suffer seriously by the delay of a few seconds. A bad impulse, on the other hand, needs, ordinarily, only a second look to decrare itself unworthy of being indulged. Our trouble is that we are apt to treat all impulses (except, perhaps, certain religious ones) as worthy of prompt obedience. At least we are quick to obey the impulse to speak harshly, to pass ungenerous judgment, to "get even," as we say. We are apt to honor such impulses almost before they are born. Most of them have no right to be honored thus; and comparatively few of them would be, if we looked at them twice. He must be a pretty mean man who can calmly look a mean impulse in the face and not be ashamed of it.—George Clarke Peck.

Meet Me in Heaven

(Rev. Joseph Wardle, Eighty-two years young.)

I am so glad that I am growing old. I was eighty-two years old May 1, 1916. Each day brings me nearer heaven, and I have blessings now that I never enjoyed before.

After I had prayed at "Billy" Sunday's meeting at Philadelphia, an old soldier rushed up to me and said:

"I must shake hands with you. It is the greatest sermon I ever heard."

"Yes, 'Billy' Sunday preached a great sermon," I replied.

"But it was not what 'Billy' Sunday preached, but what you said in prayer, 'I am so glad I'm growing old,' that struck me. I am now a changed man. Hallelujah!"

The old soldier had shaken hands with God.

I envy no young man. I have safely passed precipices where thousands have fallen over. I do not want to try life over.

I graduated at Garrett Biblical institute in 1861 with Bishop Fowler and Dr. Chadwick.

Oliver, Frances Willard's brother, called on me at college and called me a walking ghost and said I would not live five years, and then would be in heaven.

"I have always greeted the inevitable with joy and am ready for old age and death," I said. "There is a crown on every cross, a sunrise in every tomb, and I hear marriage bells when death invites to God's palace."

I am not rich, but am sending treasures each day and asking everybody to meet me in heaven.

Presidents Grant, Harrison, Cleveland, McKinley, Roosevelt, Taft and Wilson have answered "Yes" to my question, "Will you meet me in heaven?" Many of my darlings are in heaven and I am looking daily over the Lamb's Book of Life and see there recorded these promises and rejoice. Yonder hosts are calling, loved ones beckoning, God and His Son welcome to eternal sunshine, cross, glory and reunions. Meet me there. Yours for heaven. Pray for me.

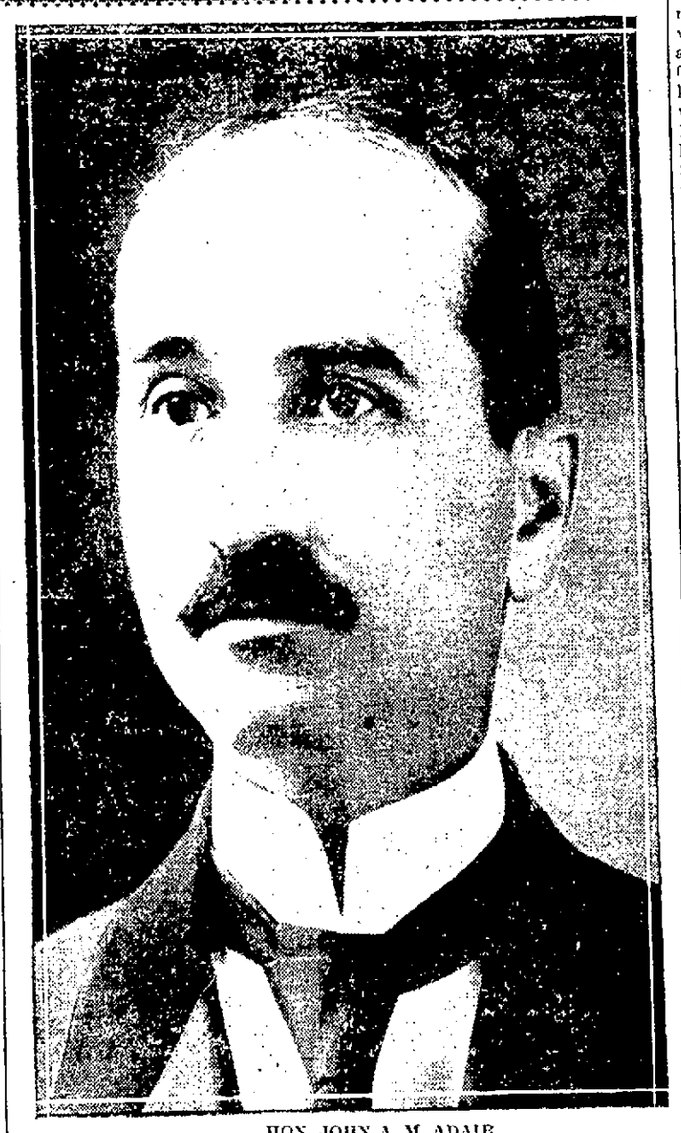
Keynote Address of Hon. John A. M. Adair Democratic Nominee for Governor of Indiana

COMES TO FORT WAYNE TO FORMALLY OPEN HIS CAMPAIGN.



HON. JOHN A. M. ADAIR.

The keynote address of Hon. John A. M. Adair, democratic nominee for governor of Indiana, delivered at Robison park Saturday afternoon, was as follows:

"I am not vain enough to believe this tremendous outpouring of the people of this beautiful, progressive and prosperous city of Fort Wayne, together with the multitude who are here from all parts of the Twelfth congressional district, is due to my presence, or that you came for the sole purpose of hearing me deliver the keynote speech of the coming campaign. On the contrary, I know your attendance here today is due to your deep appreciation of the manifold blessings you now enjoy under democratic rule and your willingness to contribute what you may toward the success of the democratic party, to the end that America may remain at peace with all the world and that prosperity may continue from one end of the country to the other.

Success Already Assured.

"My friends, the success of the democratic party is already assured. Our party has been tried under the most unfavorable conditions and has made good both in state and nation. There can be no question about the result in November. I predict now, when the campaign is over and the ballots are counted, Woodrow Wilson and Thomas R. Marshall will be re-elected by the largest popular vote ever given candidates for president and vice president in the history of this republic; John W. Kern and Thomas Taggart will be returned to the senate of the United States; all of our splendid state officials will be re-elected to their present positions, and if you want to see me during the next four years come to the governor's office of Indiana.

"The capacity and the ability of the democratic party to legislate for the people, both in state and nation, has been clearly demonstrated during the past four years. We have merited an endorsement by the people and that endorsement will be freely given at the ballot box next November. If there ever was a doubt of our success, that doubt was removed by the action of the republican national convention held in Chicago a few weeks ago. It was a humiliating spectacle to see the party of Lincoln, unable to point with pride or view with alarm. The marvelous achievements of the Wilson administration having left the republican party without a single issue upon which to wage a successful campaign, that party in its dire distress found it necessary to lay aside its patriotism and its Americanism, while it sought to make an issue out of the foreign relations of the government—an act which will be resented and repudiated by all loyal, patriotic citizens regardless of party.

Contrast at St. Louis.

"How different were the conditions confronting the democratic convention held in St. Louis. What a pleasure it was for our party to point with pride to the constructive legislation in the interest of the American people, passed by the Wilson administration; legislation that the republican party did not dare mention, let alone criticise. What a pleasure it was for our party to point to the fact that peace, plenty, happiness and prosperity prevails from one end of the country to the other and what a genuine pleasure it was for our party to nominate for our standard bearers in the coming campaign the men who made these blessings possible—Woodrow Wilson and Thomas R. Marshall.

Means Much to People.

"My friends, the coming campaign means more to the American people than any contest in which we have entered in a quarter of a century. Our rights, liberties and opportunities are at stake. We must determine at the ballot box in November whether the people are to continue to rule or whether we are to go back to the day of special privileges and be led and controlled by those who look upon government as the means of securing special privileges which will enable them to build up colossal fortunes, wrongfully taken from the people. We must decide in November whether we will go back to the republican panics of 1873, 1893 and 1907, when factories were closed, workingmen were idle and business was paralyzed, or whether we will continue to enjoy, under Woodrow Wilson, the greatest degree of prosperity our nation has ever known. Let us not under-estimate the strength of our opposition. The republican party has within its ranks the multi-millionaires of the country and the special privilege class, who will place at the command of that party powerful trust-owned newspapers and funds without limit, to carry on a campaign for a return of the special privileges they once enjoyed under republican rule. My friends, it is the duty we owe to ourselves, yes, a duty we owe to our state and our nation to put forth every possible effort to bring about the re-election of Woodrow Wilson, to the end that peace and prosperity may continue, the rights of the American people may be protected, both upon land and sea, and that this government may remain what our party has made it—a government by and for the people.

Democracy Meets Responsibility.

"Our party came into power less than four years ago confronted by the greatest responsibilities ever faced by any party in the history of the republic. We have met these responsibilities and solved the difficult problems in a way that has won the admiration of all those who place the welfare of the country above and beyond party success. No man can offer a plausible or sensible reason why our party should not be continued in power both in state and nation. The most remarkable thing in connection with state and national politics is the fact that neither of the keynote speakers of the republican state convention or the republican national convention offered any criticism of the constructive legislation passed by our party either in state or nation—legislation under which we are more prosperous than ever before, and legislation no party would dare repeal.

State Administration.

Every citizen of Indiana, regardless of party, has words of praise for Governor Ralston, for all of our splendid state officials and for the excellent legislation placed upon our statute books by the democratic party. No party would dare propose a repeal of the many constructive measures passed by the democratic legislatures of 1913 and 1915. We have given to the state a public service commission law, which protects the people from the greed and selfishness of mankind; a constructive measure of far-reaching importance. Already under this law several hundred thousand dollars have been saved to the people of the state. We have enacted a vocational education law which is of inestimable value to the boys and girls of Indiana, and is conceded to be one of the most important pieces of legislation passed in the history of the state. We have enacted a workman's compensation law, which is working a great benefit to both employer and employe. Up to this time under this law nearly 5,000 cases have been settled and injured employes are now drawing over $8,000 per week. Working people could not secure this legislation under republican rule and they are not now going to give that party a chance to repeal the law. We have given you a fire marshal law, which no party would dare to repeal—a law under which the number of fires have been reduced throughout the state and the rates of insurance lowered. We have given you a public printing law, which saves annually for the state many thousands of dollars. We have given you a child labor law for the protection of the children of the state; a bureau of inspection law, for the inspection of buildings, factories, mines, etc., for the safety of employes; an inheritance tax law; a registration law; an arbitration law and many other constructive measures, all of which are approved by the people regardless of party; and as a matter of course everybody is pleased over the payment of the state debt, incurred by a republican administration and paid off by a democratic administration under Governor Ralston. The first time in eighty-four long years Indiana has been entirely out of debt and this was accomplished without raising the state tax levy for general purposes. The work of Governor Ralston and all of our state officials has been so good, so wholesome and so far above criticism, that there will be no issues so far as state affairs are concerned. Why should any one, except a republican officeseeker, want a change of administration in Indiana? The fact is, the entire citizenship of Indiana has confidence in the democratic party and that confidence will ripen and grow as our party continues to give the people good, wholesome and progressive legislation.

National Administration.

"We are not only proud of our state administration, but we are likewise proud of the work of our national administration. Woodrow Wilson will go down in history as one of the greatest of presidents. During his administration more constructive legislation in the interest of the American people has been enacted into law than in any other like period in the history of the nation. How thankful we should be that during this period of world-wide war and destruction of life and property we had at the head of this government a man who has kept the rudder true in the perils of a stormy sea. In the midst of universal war he has kept America at peace with all the world. In the midst of universal confusion his brain has been clear, his nerve steady, his heart unshaken from its faith in humanity. Other nations have their heroes of death and destruction; our hero of life and construction is Woodrow Wilson. He has labored to preserve and build up, while others have fought to tear down and destroy. He has striven for peace, but refused to purchase peace at the price of injustice or dishonor. The hope of the world, the hope or democracy, the hope of liberty everywhere, is resting upon America and under Woodrow Wilson this hope will be realized.

Cannonism Destroyed.

"My friends, let me briefly call your attention to conditions as we found them after 16 years of republican rule and the remedies we applied. When we came into power, the House was under the complete control of Cannonism—a vicious system under which no legislation could be considered or voted upon unless the speaker was willing—a one-man power subservient to the dictation of Wall street. Over in the senate we found 38 millionaires and a large number of near millionaires led by an eastern senator who represented the special-privilege class in the United States senate for thirty years. Both branches of government were absolutely controlled by predatory wealth and the beneficiaries of the system were dictating and controlling the legislation of the country. The overthrow of the republican party and the restoration to power of the democratic party has resulted in a complete reformation both in the house and the senate. Now these bodies are made up of men whose hearts beat in unison with the plain people. Cannonism and Aldrichism have been destroyed and both branches of the government are now responsive to the people's will.

Election of Senators.

"For fourteen years under republican rule the people had insisted upon the right to vote direct for United States senators, but the party in power has steadfastly refused their appeal. The rank and file of the republican party wanted this right the same as we democrats wanted it, but under republican control they could not obtain it. This was due to the fact that the wealth of the country had found shelter under the wings of the republican party, was dictating and controlling its policies, and, as these interests knew it was easier to purchase a seat in the senate of a legislature, than it was of all the people, they were opposed to electing senators in that way. The leaders of the republican party were under the complete control of these interests and therefore the people were denied the legislation they wanted. Just as soon as you gave the democratic party a chance to legislate we gave you the right to vote direct for your senators. By so doing we have made it impossible in the future for trusts and combinations to control legislation by purchasing seats in the senate of the United States for their direct representatives.

Income Tax.

"During the sixteen years of republican rule the people regardless of party, insisted upon the enactment of an income tax law that would equalize the burdens of taxations—that would compel the wealth of the country to contribute a fair proportion toward paying the running expenses of the government. This legislation was denied by the party in power and why? Why, because Wall street was opposed to it. The millionaires of the east were escaping taxation under the old republican system and as these gentlemen had been putting up the campaign funds to prepetuate the republican party in power, that party paid them back by shifting the burden of taxation on those least able to bear it. The democratic party said that wealth should bear its share of this burden and as soon as you gave us the power we gave you an income tax law that lifts a burden of over $100,000,000 annually off the shoulders of the average man and places it on the shoulders of those more able to bear it.

The Tariff.

"The republican party fastened on the people a system of tariff taxation which was a burden and an outrage. It enabled a favored few to accumulate tremendous fortunes off the sweat and toil of the plundered millions. Under this vicious system the wealth of the country drifted into the hands of a few men. It was alarming to know that 51 men owned 1-35 of all the wealth of the United States. The democratic party had denounced the system for years, but it was not until 1908 that the people awoke to the robbing that was going on. That year every party in existence declared in their platforms for a revision of the tariff downward. The republican party was successful at the polls, but instead of redeeming its pledge made to the people by revising the tariff downward it violated its promise by revising it upward, thereby adding to the burdens of the people instead of relieving them.

"Men of all parties were outraged by this willful violation of a sacred pledge and at the ballot box in 1910 the people answered President Taft and his party by changing a republican house of representatives with over a hundred republican majority into a democratic house with about 140 majority—the greatest change ever made at any election in the nation's history. Then two years later the republican party was driven from power in all branches of government because of its complete surrender to those who were enjoying a special privilege under the Payne-Aldrich tariff law. As soon as we were delegated with power, we proceeded at once to relieve the people of these high tariff burdens, by enacting the Underwood tariff law, which has been a success from every standpoint. Our republican friends have charged that our tariff law is a failure as a revenue producer, but this statement is not borne out by the facts. Statistics show that the Underwood law is a better revenue producer than the Payne-Aldrich law or the Dingley law, which preceded it. During the first year of its existence it produced more revenue than was needed to run the government and had it not been for the breaking out of the European war, which cut off imports, it would now be producing a surplus of revenue. From October 1, 1913, when the bill became a law, to August 1, 1914, when the European war broke out, it produced revenue amounting to $10,000,000 more than the Payne law produced for the ten months from October 1, 1912, to August 1, 1913. Or take the seven months from January 1, 1914, when all the rates became effective, to August 1, 1914, when the war broke out, it produced $17,000,000 more revenue than the Payne law produced the identical same seven months of the preceding year. Therefore the charge that it is not a revenue producer is absolutely false. Our republican friends also charged that if we revised the tariff downward we would close the mills and factories and throw millions of men out of employment. Their prediction has not come true and they knew it would not when they made it. On the contrary mills and factories are running everywhere, unable to get a sufficient number of men to make the goods demanded for home consumption and foreign trade. The first time in the nation's history there has been a shortage of men to meet the demand for labor. Men are employed everywhere at the highest wages and shortest hours ever received. More than 20,000,000 wage earners have had their wages increased during the past year and more than 5,000,000 workingmen have had their wages raised a second time during the past 120 days. Farmers are getting the highest prices for their products and are more prosperous than ever before. Banks are overflowing with money and our merchants are selling more goods and making more money than ever before. Railway earnings have increased over $60,000,000; the total wealth of the country increased 20 per cent.; our manufactured products have increased 40 per cent.; capital has increased 43 per cent.; wages have increased 54 per cent.; bank deposits have increased over $2,000,000,000 and the balance of trade last year in favor of the United States amounted to the enormous sum of $2,136,000,000. A great wave of prosperity is sweeping over the country from one end to the other, all of which is due to the wisdom of democratic legislation. Who is dissatisfied with this administration? Why should any one seek a change? The manufacturer is not dissatisfied, he is making more goods and more money than he ever made before; laboring men are not dissatisfied, they are receiving the highest wages and working the shortest hours; farmers are not dissatisfied, they are receiving the highest prices for their products they ever received; bankers are not dissatisfied, they have the largest deposits they ever had; merchants are not dissatisfied, they are selling more goods and making more money than ever before; who is dissatisfied? Nobody, except republican politicians who are out of office and want in. Yes, our republican friends admit that prosperity is here, but they say it is due to the war. The fact is, we have lost more business because of the war than we have gained by reason of the war. The International Harvester company and many other manufacturers have lost millions of dollars worth of business because of European conditions. Only 2 2-3 per cent. of all goods now being manufactured is war material and you can eliminate this entirely and still we are making more goods than was ever made before in the history of the country. You can eliminate all the wages being paid to labor for making war material and still we are paying more money to workingmen than was ever paid before. Instead of the European war being a benefit to business, it has been a handicap. Had it not been for the war, business would be still better. Again, our republican friends tell you that depression will follow when the war closes. They say Europe will dump a lot of cheap goods on us to the detriment of our manufacturers.

"The facts are we have successfully competed with Europe when she was at her best. For years we have been exporting about $3,000,000,000 worth of manufactured goods annually, going into all the markets of the world in direct competition with Europe. You can not travel anywhere on earth without coming in contact with American made goods. Go down in Egypt where they are building railroads and you will find the steel rails used were made in Pittsburg, Pa. Go down in the wheat fields of India and there you will find the American self-binder. Go into Europe anywhere and you will find the American made sewing machine, the American made watch, and every well dressed man and woman wears an American made shoe. Let us remember that 94 per cent of everything made in America is made for less money than in any other nation in the world. When Europe was the strongest we have been able to successfuly meet her in all the markets of the world. Now when the war is over and many of her factories are dismantled and destroyed; when 15,000,000 of her best men have been killed and wounded; when 5,000,000 women have been made widows; when 12,000,000 little children have been made homeless and fatherless; when a debt of $30,000,000,000 has been piled upon them for which they will be taxed to pay; when every doorstep in Europe has been covered with blood; when there is no one to compete with except old men and boys, then to say that we will be at their mercy is the plea of the demagogue, an insult to the intelligence of the American people. We now have the markets of the world and we will hold them when the war is over. No nation on earth can compete with us with or without a tariff. The Underwood law is not a free trade measure. It is a protective tariff measure as it now stands. You could go through it and lower the rate from 10 to 20 per cent on practically every item and still it would be a protective measure. It is without doubt the best tariff law ever enacted and no party will dare repeal it.

Non-Partisan Tariff Commission.

"For many years the people have been insisting on the passage of a law creating a non-partisan tariff commission. While the republican party pretended to favor such a law, yet during the sixteen years that party was in control of the government no non-partisan tariff commission was created. This was due to the fact that the beneficiaries of the high protective tariff system were against a tariff commission and this special privilege class controlled the leaders of the republican party. It remained for the democratic party to carry out the wishes of the people by giving them a non-partisan tariff commission. This commission will make investigations and report its findings to congress, so the rates in the Underwood bill can be changed from time to time to suit changed conditions. This legislation practically takes the tariff question out of politics and therefore our republican friends can not make the tariff an issue in the coming campaign. We have settled the tariff question to the satisfaction of all the people regardless of party, and have settled it the way the people wanted it settled.

Currency Reform.

"During the sixteen years of republican rule the people were insisting upon a change in our financial system that would protect them against the methods employed by Wall street gamblers and speculators, who were in control of the money of the country, and who had the power under the old system to bring on panics when it suited them to do so, to fix interest rates and practically control the price of farm and factory products. The republican party promised relief and expended almost one million dollars in making investigations, but gave the country no legislation. This was due to the fact that the old republican system suited the Wall street speculators, and as these gentlemen were in control of the leaders of the republican party, no legislation was enacted. Under the old system the reserves of the banks throughout the country found their way into the Wall street banks and in addition these banks had the deposits of government funds and these two deposits were the source of great profit. They enjoyed a special privilege under the old system which they did not want to give up, and they tried in every conceivable way to prevent the passage of the new currency law, but the democratic party, true to its pledge, proceeded at once to pass a currency law which protects the people against the greed and selfishness of Wall street, has forever made anics impossible and made ample provision for legitimate business to secure all the funds necessary to carry on business for the benefit of those engaged in it as well as for the people generally.

"Under the law Wall street can no longer control the money of the country, fix interest rates and depress the price of farm and factory products. Money panics in the future are impossible under this law. Without doubt the new currency law is the greatest piece of constructive legislation passed in a hundred years and if our party had done nothing else it would deserve to be continued in power by reason of the enactment of this law.

Labor Legislation.

"The just and fair recognition of the rights and demands of labor were completely ignored by the trust-controlled republican party during the sixteen years, it held undisputed way. When I first went to congress ten years ago I saw piled upon the speaker's desk petitions said to have been signed by more than 1,000,000 workingmen, pleading and begging for legislation in the interest of those who earn their bread by the sweat of their faces, and session after session I saw these petitions presented only to go to the waste basket with no consideration given them. The party in power was so busy legislating for those who furnished the money to finance their campaigns that they had no time to consider anything in the interest of labor. Just as soon as you gave our party an opportunity we immediately took up and passed the legislation petitioned for by the workingmen of the country and gave to them all the legislation they had been trying to get for sixteen years under republican rule. In fact, the records show that our party has done more for labor, both in state and nation, during the past four years, than was done during the entire history of the republican party. Labor has been unshackled, the toiler no longer made a criminal because he dares protest against injustice—the workman no longer dragged to jail by the iron grip of injunction as a penalty for merely asking for the privilege of living and revolting against the persecution of oppression, the hunger of his home and the starvation of his children. Under democratic rule the rights of labor have been vitalized into law and no longer on the soil of free America is human labor to be treated as a mere commodity. We have earned and deserved the support of every workingman in the country and I believe we will get it when the time comes to vote in November.

Pensions.

"The republican party has charged that if the democratic party came into power the old soldiers could not secure increase of pensions. For sixteen years while the republicans were in control the men who fought the battles of '61 to '65 tried in every possible way to secure justice, but failed. Just as soon as you gave us a democratic house we immediately reported out of the committee on invalid pensions, of which I was a member, and passed through the house the most liberal pension bill ever enacted into law in the history of the country. I had charge of the bill on the floor of the house and also served on the conference committee, which reported the bill as it was finally passed. It increased the pension roll $42,000,000 the first year. Following the passage of this law the national encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic, meeting in Los Angeles, California, passed a resolution thanking me for the service I rendered in securing that legislation, and by a vote of that great convention instructed the national commander, Mr. Beers, and the secretary to present a lithographed copy of the resolution to me, which they did at the door of the house of representatives. I speak of this not for the purpose of leading any soldier to believe he owes me anything for the service I rendered in his behalf, but for the purpose of showing that the charges made by our republican friends were false. Now we are increasing the pensions of soldiers' widows from $12 to $20 per month. The facts are, the democratic party has been the real friend of the soldiers. The republican party, in their national convention at Chicago, a few weeks ago, did not even mention the old soldier in the platform adopted at that convention and neither did Justice Hughes mention them in his speech of acceptance. Their love for the soldier is only noticeable on the day of election.

Clayton Anti-Trust Bill.

"During the administration of Theodore Roosevelt and William Howard Taft more than a thousand trusts were formed and all of these trusts were extorting from the American people. No effort was made by the republican party to protect the people against their operations, but as soon as you gave the democratic party a chance to legislate, we passed the Clayton anti-trust bill, which has given the people the relief to which they were entitled. It prevents the creation of illegal trusts, conspiracies and monopolies in their incipiency and before consummation.

"It makes unlawful all discrimination in prices for the purpose of wrongfully injuring or destroying the business of competition. It makes unlawful various monopoly-promoting contracts, holding companies and interlocking directorates. It removes labor from the commodity class and gives the American laboring man the greater measure of industrial freedom for which he has long strived. The republican party stood against this legislation and made every effort it could to prevent the democratic party from giving this relief to the people.

The Federal Trade Commission.

"The federal trade commission act was passed for the purpose of helping business both big and little. It is already rendering a valuable service. The purpose of this law is to bring quick relief against unfair practices, to protect the small business man and the small enterprise against the ruinous, cut-throat competition of the big fellow against the little fellow, and provide a convenient administrative agency to stop unfair practices and to advise business men, and to help them in legitimate enterprise as against predatory and vicious practices. This law is helping bring about the great prosperity we now enjoy and the republican party is on record as having opposed it.

Preparedness.

"Our republican friends were in control of the government for sixteen years and during all of this time made no provision for our national defense. Our army and navy grew weaker under both Roosevelt and Taft. Then as soon as Wilson became president, they began to complain because we were not prepared. If we were not prepared whose fault was it? Theodore Roosevelt has said that it will take ten years to build our army and navy sufficiently to protect us from foreign aggression. If this be true why did he not begin ten years ago while he was president? The fact is our national defense was criminally neglected under republican rule and the task of preparing America to meet aggression from any quarter was left to the democratic party. That task has been met to the satisfaction of the American people. We are building the army and the navy to a necessary strength to properly defend America. We have remedied the wrongs of republican administrations by rehabilitating our national defenses, but the democratic party will not listen to those who would convert this republic into a military camp or into military imperialism. The democratic party will see that America is prepared, but it will be an American preparedness, not European militarism. The question of preparedness, like all other great problems of government, was ignored and neglected by the republican party, but our party has met the responsibility fearlessly and successfully.

The American Farmer.

"The Wilson administration has been a godsend to the American farmer. Agriculture has not been overlooked in our legislative program. The Smith-Lever agricultural extension act, for the systematic promotion of agricultural development, providing demonstrators who go upon the farm teaching methods and farm economies, is proving a great benefit to agriculture. The rural credits law just passed will enable our farmers to borrow money on long time and at a low rate of interest. The new road law giving federal aid in building and maintaining roads means much to the farmer. The agricultural department under new legislation is doing splendid work in the interest of both production and distribution. I shall not take the time to enumerate all the legislation passed by the Wilson administration for the benefit of agriculture, but will content myself with the brief reference to the fact that as a result of this legislation farmers are more prosperous than ever before. We have built up both a home and a foreign market for farm products and I see that they are now quoted as follows: Wheat, $1.38 per bushel; oats, 38c per bushel; corn, 80c per bushel; hogs, 9 to 10c per pound; cattle, 10c per pound; $80@100 for milch cows; $8@10 for sheep; lambs, 9c per pound; calves, $18@23; wool, 40c per pound; butter, eggs and chickens, the highest they have ever been this time of the year, and everything else in proportion. Under such conditions no farmer in his right mind would want a change of administration.

Republicans Without an Issue.

"My friends, I shall not have the time to take up and discuss the many other constructive measures passed by the Wilson administration, but I think I have already gone far enough to convince any fair-minded man that the republican party will not have a single issue in the coming campaign. Let me ask my republican friends here and now what republican candidate for congress would dare stand here and say to you that if elected he would vote to repeal the income tax law? Would he dare say if elected he would vote to take away from you the right to vote direct for United States senators?

"Would he dare say to you that he would vote to repeal the new currency law? Would he dare tell you that he would vote to take away from labor the twenty-four bills we passed in their behalf? Would he dare say to the old soldier that he would vote to take away the increase of pension we gave him? Would he dare say to you that he would vote to re-enact the Payne-Aldrich tariff law? Why, certainly not. No candidate would dare to propose a repeal of this legislation and ask for the suffrage of the people. What on earth will they say? God only knows. They are without an issue and without a candidate who will appeal to the people.

Justice Hughes.

"The first statement made by Justice Hughes, following his nomination at Chicago, shows conclusively that he is not big enough and broad enough for the presidency. In less than three hours after his nomination he issued a statement in which he demonstrated clearly that he placed the success of his party above the welfare of his country. He laid aside his patriotism and Americanism while he found fault with Wilson's policy in Mexico. He offered no remedy or suggested no solution. He did not say that had he been president, he would have done different from what Wilson has done. He did not point out a single specific act of President Wilson which he said was wrong. He only criticized in a general way purely for political purposes. It is unfortunate indeed, that a candidate for president of one of the leading parties would descend to such unpatriotic methods. Such statements coming from the republican candidate for president makes the task for Wilson much harder in Mexico. Mexican newspapers print such statements and, as a majority of the Mexican people are ignorant, they are led to believe, and do believe, that the American people are not united—that half of the people of this country are in sympathy with Mexico and this belief encourages them in their hatred of Americans and their desire to destroy American lives and American property. If President Wilson can have the loyal support of the American people he will be able to handle the Mexican situation without involving us in a war, but if Justice Hughes and other republican leaders keep on trying to make a political issue out of Mexico, they will lend sufficient encouragement to Mexican bandits to make peace impossible. If we are finally driven into a war with Mexico the responsibility of that war and the blood of our boys will rest upon partisan republicans who are willing to sacrifice the country's welfare for party success. Justice Hughes was nominated on Saturday and on the following Monday went to New York City, held a conference with leaders there, and the following day Wall street offered to bet large sums of money on his election. It took sixteen long years to break loose from Wall street control and I do not now believe the American people are quite ready to turn this country over once more to these speculators and gamblers. Justice Hughes will not command the vote of the conservative thinking people. His statement that he and Theodore Roosevelt are in hearty accord upon all questions has shaken the confidence of the people in him and has driven away from him the German-American vote. The German-Americans look upon Theodore Roosevelt as their worst enemy and they will not support any candidate who will admit that he and the Colonel are agreed upon all questions. The German-Americans do not want to see Roosevelt made secretary of state, as he is likely to be, if Hughes is elected. Moreover, his opposition to an income tax law and his attitude toward labor while he was governor of New York, shows conclusively that his heart does not beat in unison with the average man and under no consideration will the labor vote of the country rally to his support. The people are satisfied with Wilson: they know he is safe; they know he is fair and conservative; they are not going to change a certainty for an uncertainty.

Foreign Relations.

"My friends, our opposition will try in every possible way to divert your minds from the great achievements of this democratic administration by criticising the foreign policy of President Wilson. It is but natural that we should differ on policies relating to our domestic affairs, but when it comes to our relations with foreign governments, we should lay aside all differences on internal matters, join together as patriots, and, forgetting our partisanship, give loyal support to the president in the maintenance of the honor and sovereignity of our beloved country. I believe the great mass of the American people, regardless of party, share in this national spirit, except those who place party success and personal ambition above the nation's welfare.

"While all of Europe is red with the blood of millions of brave men, her cities filled with cripples, widows and

fatherless children, while misery and sorrow have taken the place of happiness and contentment throughout all the belligerent countries, here we are in America, enjoying peace, plenty, happiness and prosperity, and this is due to the patience, the wisdom and foresight of Woodrow Wilson. He has met the responsibilities thrust upon him, not as the president of any political party, but as the chief executive of the American people. How fortunate we are during these trying times to have at the head of this government a man with the clearness of vision, the love of humanity, the tenderness of heart and the unswerving fidelity to America and American institutions possessed by Woodrow Wilson. And yet, Justice Hughes and other republican leaders, without any knowledge of the facts, and without the secret information before the state department, purely for political purposes, lays aside their patriotism and their Americanism long enough to bitterly attack the man who has preserved peace, saved the blood of our boys and made America the home of a happy and contented people. The task of the president is made more difficult by such utterances. Let us hope the American people will rise above partisanship and vie with each other in their loyalty and devotion to America, American institutions and the American flag. I am not here to say whether any mistakes in our foreign policy have been made or not. I do know that none of us are infallible. If you were to ask me whether any mistakes have been made in dealing with foreign nations I would not be able to give you an intelligent answer. While I have been a member of congress for ten years, and believe I am as close to the president as the average member, the facts are nine-tenths of all the information upon which the president and the state department bases their action is secret information that does not come to me, neither does it go to you, and without that information I cannot say, and you cannot say, whether any mistakes have been made or not. But I will tell you what I do know. I do know under Woodrow Wilson we do not have in this country 5,000,000 widows as a result of war; I do know that 7,000,000 of our men have not lost their lives on the battlefield and 8,000,000 of our citizens have not been wounded; I do know that 12,000,000 of our children have not been made homeless and fatherless; I do know that our factories have not been dismantled and destroyed; I do know that a debt of $30,000,000,000 has not been piled upon us; I do know that our cities have not been shot to pieces and destroyed; I do know that peace prevails in this country and that is what I want and that is what you want. I do know that Woodrow Wilson has met the responsibilities in a way which has resulted in peace, contentment, happiness and prospecity. As long as the result is satisfactory why should we quibble about the question as to whether or not any mistakes have been made. The real question to consider is whether or not a change of administration during this time of world-wide war might not involve us in the struggle and bring about conditions in this country similar to those in Europe. No president in the history of this republic ever faced such responsibilities or had to deal with such trying and perplexing problems as has Woodrow Wilson, and who could have solved them better? He has been charged with the responsibility of maintaining peace and at the same time protecting the rights of American citizens both upon land and sea, and up to this time he has met these conditions to the satisfaction of the great mass of the American people.

Mexico.

"President Wilson has maintained a firm and fixed policy toward Mexico. A policy based upon three considerations. First, that the United States does not covet any Mexican territory and should not wage a war of aggression upon that unfortunate country. Second, that the people of Mexico should be given the utmost opportunity to restore order and establish civil government within their own borders. Third, that the people of the United States are opposed to intervention unless it is clearly evident that no other alternative exists. The president has adhered to these principles with a firmness characteristic of the man. He has not wavered in the slightest degree from his patriotic duty from the first day his responsibility began. Notwithstanding the fact, that his task has been made exceedingly difficult, through the unjust and unfair criticism of unpatriotic politicians and selfish, grasping millionaire investors in Mexico, yet he has met the situation successfully, compelling Mexico to respect our rights and acquiesce in our just demands. Woodrow Wilson's foreign policy has won the admiration of the world and has added to the statesmanship and glory of our republic.

"The criticism of Wilson's policy in Mexico was first started by three American multi-millionaires who went down into that country during the Madero administration, and through bribery and fraud secured possession of millions of acres of rich and productive lands and a large number of valuable mines and then hurried back to the United States, and through their powerful newspapers tried to force Wilson into a war with Mexico. What for? Not because of their love of the Mexicans. Not because of their interest in America—but for the sole purpose of putting value into their stolen investment and to give them title to property they really did not own. They were willing to sacrifice the lives of 100,000 American boys and incur a debt of millions of dollars for which you would be taxed to pay, in order that they might add value to their questionable investments. Woodrow Wilson had the courage to stand out against these selfish Americans and by so doing our rights have been safe-guarded, our boys have been saved and today the American flag commands greater respect the world over than ever before. It is almost unthinkable that even a republican office seeker would undertake to make a political issue out of the Mexican situation. In doing so he brands himself unfit for public office.

German-Americans.

"Our republican friends are claiming that German-Americans will not vote for Woodrow Wilson. I do not believe it. I can see no reason why he should not have their support. There have been no differences between Germany and the United States except the one question of submarine warfare, and that question was taken up by President Wilson with Germany, following the sinking of the Lusitania. Germany accepted the position taken by President Wilson as being wholly and fully within the law and agreed that thereafter submarine warfare would be conducted accordingly. Wilson accepted in good faith the promise made by Germany and the matter was thought to be closed. A few weeks later another ship was sunk by Germany in violation of international law and in violation of the sacred pledge made to the United States. President Wilson again took up the matter with Germany, and the imperial German government disavowed the act, and once more promised President Wilson that she would abide by the law. Again the president accepted in good faith the pledge made by Germany. Then a few weeks later another ship was sunk in violation of law and again Germany expressed regret and promised President Wilson it would not happen again. The president once more accepted in good faith the pledge made to the United States. Then later on other ships were sunk in violation of law and finally when the little cross steamer Sussex was sunk, which was purely a ferry boat and could not have been used for war purposes under any circumstances, then the president felt that his patience was entirely exhausted. He had given the German government a full year to keep its promises and pledges made to the United States and the president felt that the time had come when he must say to Germany once and for all, that if she did not keep her pledge made to the United States and conduct her submarine warfare within the law, he would be required to sever diplomatic relations. In answer to this ultimatum Germany has again promised to abide by the law and keep her word, and again Woodrow Wilson has accepted in good faith Germany's promise and the matter for the present is closed. While Wilson was exhibiting the greatest degree of patience with Germany, Theodore Roosevelt, a progressive candidate for the presidency; Senator Elihu Root, a republican candidate for the presidency, and practically all of the republican leaders in the house and senate, were severely criticising President Wilson because he did not declare war on Germany. Some of them went so far as to say he should have declared war on Germany almost two years ago when Germany violated the neutrality of Belgium. Had Woodrow Wilson followed the advice of these republican leaders, we would have been in a war with Germany many months ago, and if the United States had entered the war against Germany, that nation could not have held out against the allies for six months. The fact is, Woodrow Wilson is the man who stood between the United States and war with Germany. His refusal to follow the advice of the republican leaders has made it possible for Germany to successfully hold out against her enemies. It seems to me that the German-Americans should feel very kindly toward Woodrow Wilson because of his refusal to follow republican advice and compel them to take up arms against their fatherland.

I do not blame any man of foreign birth for sympathizing with his native land and wanting the country from which he came to win in the great struggle going on across the sea. If I had been born in Germany I would sympathize with Germany and want Germany to win. If I had been born in France I would sympathize with France because it was my native land.

"Or if I had been born in any of the belligerent nations I would want the nation from which I came to be successful in the war in which it was engaged. But, my friends, I do not question the loyalty or the patriotism of any American citizen of foreign birth. I know if we were to become involved in a war with any nation on earth that every German, every Frenchman and every other citizen of foreign birth would rally as one man under the Stars and Stripes and stand shoulder to shoulder in defense of the country and our flag. The facts are, the foreign relations of our government should never be made a political issue. In such matters every American citizen should give loyal support to the president of the United States no matter from which party he comes. Let me remind you that George Washington was severely criticised in his day and no man up to the present time was ever criticised as was Abraham Lincoln in 1864. Even republicans were bitter in their denunciation of his administration, saying it had been a failure—that he had made one blunder after another, etc. But where would you now find a man who would criticise George Washington or Abraham Lincoln and after the 7th day of November, you might search this country over from one end to the other and you would not find a man who would admit that he ever criticised Woodrow Wilson. All of this criticism is for political purposes only and should not be taken seriously by anyone.

Progressives.

"Our republican friends are claiming the progressives are all going to vote with them this year. I do not believe it. The progressives left the republican party four years ago, not because they did not love the party of Lincoln, but because they believed the leaders of that party were controlled by the interests and because they could not secure the progressive legislation they desired. Who were the republican leaders four years ago? I answer, Barnes, Penrose, Cannon, Smoot, Fairbanks, Watson, New and Goodrich. Who are the republican leaders now? Why, the same gentlemen and all of them, except two, are candidates for office. These gentlemen drove you out of the party four years ago and no one can make me believe an honest progressive in Indiana, who was sincere in his declaration four years ago and two years ago, will now go back and take orders from Fairbanks, Watson, New and Goodrich. No, gentlemen, I have too much faith in the honesty and sincerity of Indiana progressives to believe they will do anything of the kind. They are men of conviction and they have the courage of their convictions. They will vote a progressive ticket or they will vote with us. Our policies and principles are nearer and dearer to them than those advocated by the republican party. They wanted an income tax law and we gave it to them; they wanted currency reform and we gave it to them; they wanted the right to vote direct for United States senators and we gave it to them; they wanted legislation giving relief to labor and we gave it to them; they wanted more liberal pension for union soldiers and we gave it to them; they wanted a tariff law embodying the principle of protection but opposed to extortion and we gave it to them. In fact, there is but little difference between us and these differences can be harmonized. The treatment of progressives by Fairbanks, Watson, New and Goodrich at Chicago four years ago has not been forgotten. Then at the recent convention held at Chicago by these same republicans insult was added to injury. In the face of these facts what progressive could vote the republican ticket and maintain his self-respect?

Candidacy for Governor.

"Now, gentlemen, a word about my candidacy for governor. I want to be your governor, because I believe I can render for you and for the state of Indiana a valuable service. I am basing my campaign for governor on my record as a citizen of Indiana, on my record in the legislature of the state and on my ten years' service in the national congress. When I went to congress ten years ago, I began a fight on the commercial vampires of Wall street, who hung around Washington dictating and controlling our legislation while the republican party was in power. I have contributed my part toward driving them from the nation's capital and taken an active part in all the constructive legislation which has brought so much relief to the American people. Let me assure you here and now that if I am your governor, I will make the same fight against greed and robbery in the state of Indiana, that I have made against it in the national congress. I will protect your rights and give to the people an honest, economical administration of the affairs of state. My highest ambition will be to render a service that will merit for me the endorsement, the confidence and the respect of all the people regardless of party. The laws of the state shall be and will be enforced to the letter. I shall give the subject of taxation special study and consideration, to the end that taxes may be equalized and the burden of taxation reduced to the lowest possible limit. I shall see that our charitable, benevolent and correctional institutions are properly managed and that the unfortunate inmates are cared for in a way that will be creditable to the state. Having in mind the welfare of those who earn their bread by daily toil, I shall urge legislation that will do justice to both capital and labor, to the end that the strong may not trample on the rights of the weak, but that every man may have a square deal and an equal opportunity under the law. I shall oppose special privilege in every form and shall insist on such progressive legislation as the people will demand. I shall stand for clean government and the advancement of civic righteousness in all parts of the state. I shall strive to make Indiana, the model state of the union, where our boys and girls can be reared into manhood and womanhood and sent out in life to bless the world and mankind.

Going to Win.

"We are going to win because we deserve to win. We are united as never before. Our party is closer to the hearts of the American peope than ever before. We enjoy the confidence of very voter in the land who is not blinded with partisanship or controlled by a selfish desire to hold office. If you believe in America, American institutions and the American flag; if you believe in peace with honor and war only when necessary to maintain the rights of America, and American citizens both upon land and sea; if you believe in the sanctity of the home and the liberties of the people; if you want peace to prevail and prosperity to continue vote for Woodrow Wilson, and the democratic ticket.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. George Wass, whose death occurred Saturday evening, August 5, at the Lutheran hospital, was born in this city September 17, 1893. She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. H. Noll, of 1607 East Creighton avenue, who survive her with the husband, two sisters and five brothers, she being the first of the family of eight children summoned from this earth. She was married to Mr. Geo. Wass August 18, 1915, her married life being very brief, but one of much happiness. The deceased was one of earth's noble young ladies; to know her was to love her; she was possessed of moral worth and high ambitions. Her home was one of the prides of her life, having a great desire to constitute one of earth's happy homes. She was a kind daughter and loving wife. She will be remembered by the loving deeds which she hath done. She was a member of the Calvary U. B. church and of the different organizations of that congregation. The funeral services were held at the U. B. church Aug. 8, conducted by Revs. Borkert and Olmstead; interment at Lindenwood, where she was laid to rest beneath a bed of flowers.

Thy will, O God, not ours, be done
Not now but in the coming years,
It may be in a better land,
We'll read the meaning of our tears:

"GARDEN SASS" EDDYTORIUL

Tother day after we had returnd to the Buggle office after we had been down town trying to skeer up a few items for publicashion in this ishue of the Bugle (P. S.—We diddent skeer up enny) we was rejoiced to find on our desk 2 doz ears of green corn on the cob or roasting ears whitch our friend & naber Simon Cooper had left on our desk outen the goodness of his hart with his complyments during our absents.

We tuk the 2 doz ears home and our wife biled the corn for supper whitch constitooted our evg meel almost excloosive as we might say. We are a great hand for corn on the cob & as we set there with our ft under the table acrost from our wife gnawing the corn offen one cob after another with great gusto until we had et 16 ears to our wifes eight ears until we like to bust it ockurd to us that we would dash off a eddytoriul on the important subjeck of "Garden Sass."

Bingville is now right in the most proliffick "Garden Sass" period of the entire yr as we might put it. "Garden Sass" vegetables of all descripshions has matoored & are now at their best so while they last we ort to make the best of em. Most Bingville folks is now livin almost excloosive offen their gardens and as a result they don't haft to lay out mutch if enny money on their tables like what they haft to do during the winter whitch is a great boon.

There is times when the food problem in Bingville is a awful hard one to solve espeshially during the spring of the yr when folks hereabouts has consoomed most of the things they raised for use during the winter and are what you might call "et up close." In other words at that time of the yr we are jest betwixt hay and grass as you might say and its turrible hard scratchin to scratch up three square meels per day.

Therefore we ort to be thankful that our garden crops turnd out so propishus this fall and take advantage of the sitooashion while "Garden Sass" lasts by consooming as mutch as possibil of same.

Some Bingville folks we know is inclined to turn up their noses at a vegytable diet. Take Hank Dewberry for instants. When we told Hank that we had et 16 ears of corn offen the cob at one setting Hank told us hed be ashamed to tell it being as corn on the cob was only fit for horses & cows to ete and as for him hed perfer bacon and eggs or somethink like that. Whitch only goes to show what a tarnashion fool Hank Dewberry is.

SPESHIAL NOTIS TO SIMON COOPER—Thanks exceeding for the 2 doz ears of corn on the cob, Simon. Enny further contribushions of this nachure will be received by us gratis with great cheer.—EDITOR BUGLE.

Lokal Jottings

If you happen to hear of enny "Lokal Jottings" bring them to the Bugle offis and get yourself liberally thanked. "Lokal Jottings" recd by us with great cheer.

A rainfall wouldnt do no partickler harm at this writing. In fackt we need rain, being as we aint had none of same now for quite a spell & as a result the roads is turrible dusty.

Hi Henderson and Anse Smiley got to argyin down to Hen Weathersbys store tother evn as to who could jump the highest, so they went out into the road in front of the store to prove it. Hi sprained his ankel while Anse busted his suspenders and each one maintained that he jumped highern tother one, so they stand right where they was before both neerly busted theirselfs.

Lem Perkins stood in front the lookin glass last Sunday and tride to cut his own hair with the shears so as to avoid paying Harve Hines, our tonsorial barber, a quarter for doing the job. Lem got along first rate until he got about haff through the job when he suddintly & axidentally cut off the edge of his ear whitch bled like everythink so Lem quit in disgust. Lem looks ridicklus with his hair only haff cut, but Harve says it serves him right for being sitch a titewad.

Miss Almira Hobbs, leader of the Bingville church quoir, called at the Bugle offis to have us a nounce that she will sing a speshial solo at next Sunday morning service entiteld "Jerusalem." We are glad to make this a nouncement in advance becuz it will give a opportunity for them who dont desire to have their ear-drums busted and headakes brung on by loud screechin & hollerin to go to service after Almira has sang her speshial solo. We have heard Almira sing speshial solos before now and we know what we be talkin about.

Mrs. Ab Skinner was turrible put out last bake day when she had a jelly cake to fall on her. When she took it outen the oven it was flattern a pancake. Mrs. Skinner says she dont know what made it fall unless it was the jar of her letting the teakettle fall on the kitchen floor when the cake was in the oven.

Hez Andrews says he is expectin a addishion to his fambily of stock out at the barn, being as he is looking for one of his cows to come in fresh now enny time. Hez says after this happy event takes place he will be in a posishion to furnish butter milk and cream to a few families in Bingville who aint got no cow.

Brad Tucker says the intrust on the morgage whitch Cy Hoskins holds aginst his farm comes due now in a few days and being as Brad aint got the necessary funds to pay the morgage he is in a awful swet. As for Cy Hoskins we perdick he will jest let Brad swet and also we perdickt it wont be long before Cy will own Brads farm. Cy Hoskins has akwired quite a number of farms in this manner.

These is all the "Lokal Jottings" we can think of at this writing. If we think of enny more before we go to press look elsewhere for em in this ishue of the Bugle and if you fail to find em youll know we diddent think of enny. That ort to be plain enuff for ennybuddy.

While driving home from the co seat last Satterday sometime during the night I went and lost a brand new buggy whip in some manner unknowd to me, or else it dropped outen my hand when I wassent lookin. I dont know jest whereabouts on the road home I lost said whip—if I knowd that I would go and get it. The road all looked alike to me as I druv home last Satterday and to tell the truth I dont know where I lost it. Some fiend in human form might of stole it outen the buggy at the co seat but if so I didnt notis it after I started to drive home. In fackt I diddent discuvver that my buggywhip was lost until last Monday morning. I was sick in bed all day Sunday with a splittin headake and diddent git a chanst to discuvver ennythink until Monday. Whoever returns said buggywhip to me will be liberally thanked and no questshions asked.

Handsome Improovement

Simon Cooper, one of Bingvilles most respeckted cittizens, has spunked up and as a result he has made much improvement in his property whitch stands very conspickuous right on the Main st of the town.

For several yrs past there has been several pickets missing offen Simons front fence but he has been to bizzy or dilatory to repair same and they become a turrible eyesore to the entire communitty. Tother day Simon got his saw and hatchet and he made some new pickets and put em on to take the place of the missing ones and not satisfide with that he then jumpd in and whitewarshed the whole entire front fence. Every buddy who goes past now congratulates Simon who sets on his front piazzer on the great improovement whitch he has made and remarks how mutch it adds to this porshion of the residenchial districkt of Bingville. It gives us great pleashure to oolygize Simon on his improovements and we will be glad to speak about other improovements elsewhere in town if our attenshion is cald to same.

Personal Mention

Dad Henderson went squirl hunting one day last wk. but it began to rain and being as there wassent enny cork in Dads powder flask his powder got wet and wouldnt go off in his ole muzzle loader shotgun. After Dad had snapped at 4 squirls without the gun going off he returned home in disgust.

Ben Wade of Snake Bend was a Bingville visiter one day last wk and cald at the Bugle offis to pay us his compliments. Wed a good eal ruther Ben had paid us a doller or two on back subscripshion than his compliments. If compliments was dollers & cents we would be rich beyond the fondest dreams of avyrice.

Hen Weathersby prop of our general store wishes us to inform the general publick that he has laid in a box of fresh salt smoked herring for human consumpshion. Hen says these herrings is very delishus and make a nise lunch with a few crackers to go along with em and a gal or two of water.

Bale Hawkins wore a new pr of boots to church last Sunday and one boot on whitch foot Bale has a bunyon hurt him so that he was in mortal agony all through the sermon and set there with the cold swet runnin down offen his fase and whispern perfanity to hisself whitch was overheerd by them who set near him. After church Bale walkd home wearing the boot that diddent hurt on his foot and tother in his hand. Bale says he calkilates hell haft to git that boot stretchd or else cut a hole into it.

Wes Woodruff our expert hunter & trapper went over to Gootchic Pond last Sabbath fishin and had his foot to slip and fell into the pond & mite of drownd if he haddent been able to swim. As it was he broke his fish pole and got wet to the skin. Well, what can a person expeckt who vilates the Sabbath by fishin on Sunday? This ort to be a sollum warning to Wes.

Eph Higgins our accommodating p. M. informs us that this sticky muggy wether we have been having is awful hard on the stamps he has on hands being as he has to watch em like a hawk to keep em from all gumming up & sticking together. Eph says its a awful chore to haft to see that each stamp is kep alone by itself to pervent it stickin to some other stamp & hell be glad when dogdays is went & gone.

Hoke Smiley says he wishes to goodness that somebuddy would give him a reseat for remooving a wart from his nose. Hoke has been pesterd by a wart on his nose for menny yrs and being as its right in front of his fase & eyes as we might say he says he almost went cross-eyed lookin at the blamed thing. If enny person knows how to remove a wart from the human nose kindly confer with Hoke.

Little Sammy Jones was tuk turrible sick with vilent pains to his stummick and Doc Livermore our human speshialist & veternary had to be sent for. Sammy admitted that he had spent 15 cts whitch he had ernd by running ernds for Granny Simpson for a lb of candy at Hen Weathersbys store and had et every bit of same hisself. No wonder Sammy was sick. A lb of candy would make a growd up person sick let alone a 10 yr old boy. Sammy is better at this writing.

Subscribe for the Bingville (paying cash strickly in advance) Bugle and if you do that you will have the satisfackshion of knowing that you are helping along a good cause—in fackt we might say you would be helping along a almost lost cause and still be telling the truth.

SNAKE BEND

Bill Hinckley says he dont calkilate his potater crop is a going to amount to mutch. Bill says that the gorrammed potater bugs not only et offen the tops of his potaters as fast as they come up but not satisfide with that they dug down and et the potaters also. As a result Bill says his potaters is small and exceedding few to the hill. If Bill had of kep bizzy pickin potater bugs instid of setting in the shade and restin whilst they was eating his potaters he would of had a bigger crop praps.

Sam Henderson while bilding fence last wk near stepd on a black snake four ft long and kild it but the experients made Sam so nervus that he stopd bilding fense and went home in deep disgust. Sam says he hates snakes so bad that hed go five miles outen his way to avoid one or walk 10 miles to git a chanst to kill one.

Hiram Butterworth of Bingville who is also one of the Deacons and a stanch piller in the Bingville church was a visitter here tother day and stayed to dinner with his old friend Phin Wilkins. Phin and Hiram spent most of the day in Phins celler where it was cool beside a barl of hard cider and as a result when Hiram started to drive home he diddent drive enny too straight.

Mrs. Gideon Small had quite a calamitty to happen to her recent. Mrs. Gid was biling off some soft soap in a kettle outen doors when the kettle upset and spilt all the soap whitch was a total loss. Mrs. Gid was turrible put out being as she had been saving up fat to make that soap with for several munths. SCRIBBLER.

OLD TYPE FOR SALE

How are you off for old tipe? The reason we ask this questshion is that whilst rummaging around in the Bugle offis tother day we suddintly come acrost a box containing about 50 lbs or more of odds & ends of old tipe whitch we had throwd into it from time to time during the past several yrs.

Being as this old tipe aint of enny use to us we have desided to sell it to the general publick inclooding them as might desire old tipe for enny purpose whatever.

There is a great menny uses we can think of to whitch you could put this old tipe. For instants you could melt it up into rifle bullets if you so desired. And if you diddent so desire then you could melt it into paper weights, or door weights. There aint nothink will do quite so good a job at holdin down vallybie papers on a windy day as a chunk of lead. On tother hand you might make it into weppings of self defense which would come in handy when you woke up and found a burgular in the house.

We will let this tipe go at the rate of 5 cts per lb as long as it lasts. 1st come 1st served. It cost us several times this mutch per lb and we dont know of nothink that weighs so heavy to the lb as a lb of tipe. If you buy this tipe youll haft to carry it home yourself.

NEWS AND VIEWS OF THE FARMER

Mr. H. L. Kempster, of the Missouri College of Agriculture, Gives Some Very Valuable Suggestions as to the Care of Chickens During Warm Weather—A Ration That Pays.

H. L. KEMPSTER
Missouri College of Agriculture.

If, for no apparent reason, there is a lack of thrift among your young chicks, perhaps the cause is lice, or worms in the intestines. Examine the chicks about the head for head lice. Lice are more likely to be present on hen-raised chicks. If lice are found, grease the heads of the chicks with lard which is free from salt. Do not use lard and sulphur. Apply the lard with the finger, rubbing the head, neck, under the wings and around the vent. The brooding hen should also be treated. One of the best methods of exterminating lice on the mature fowls is to rub a piece of blue ointment, the size of a pea, into the skin just beneath the vent, and also under each wing. Do not daub it on, but rub it well into the skin, as blue ointment is very poisonous and will kill the hen if she gets some of it into her mouth.

If no lice are found, carefully examine the intestines of a dead chick for intestinal parasites, such as tapeworms or round worms. If worms of any kind are found, the chicks should be treated and removed to fresh ground where there are no worms in the soil. As long as the chicks remain on the old runs the danger of contamination is always present.

To treat for intestinal parasites feed should be withheld for twelve hours, and one of the following remedies given:

Powdered areca nut, 30 to 45 grains for an adult bird.

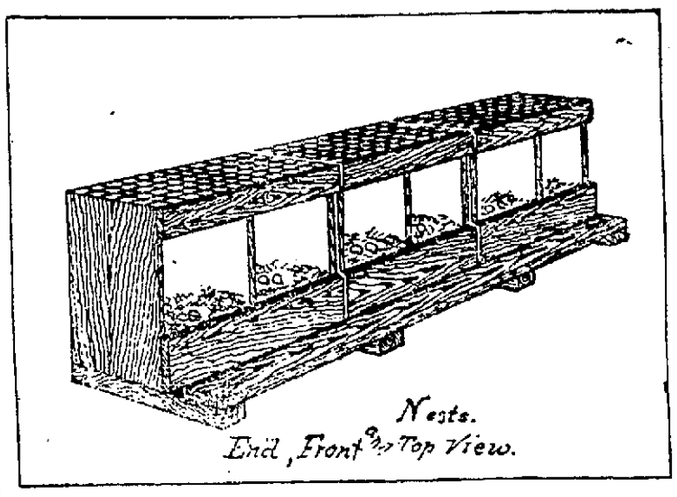
Powdered areca nut, 15 grains for immature chicks.

This can be mixed in a wet mash and fed so that each gets an equal amount. It can be fed to older birds in capsules which can be forced down the gullet.

Turpentine, 1 to 3 teaspoonfuls, depending upon the age of the bird, is also effective. It can be made less severe by mixing with an equal amount of cottonseed oil, but if ineffective, should be used full strength. The best method of giving turpentine is by forcing it through a small flexible catheter that has been oiled and is passed through the throat into the crop.

Good results have been reported also with the use of tobacco dust, using 5 to 10 grains to a bird. This can also be fed in a wet mash.

The droppings containing the worms should be burned or buried deep to prevent the chickens from picking them up.



Good Open Nest, Built in Pairs. The Runway in Front of the Nests and the Bracket or Frame Which Supports the Nests Are Built Separate and Apart from the Nests. The Nests Simply Slide in on the Bracket. Each Nest Is About 14 Inches Square.

A Dollar-and-a-Half Hen.

There is profit in keeping a good poultry flock. This was shown by a flock of White Leghorn pullets at the University of Missouri. From 50 to 60 birds were housed in an open front poultry house with a yard 100 feet square which was sowed to wheat in the fall. This furnished green food in the late fall and early spring and was not charged against their feed bill.

In a year's time the fowls consumed 2,693 pounds of grain and 962 pounds of mash. The total cost of the feed was $66.27. In estimating this cost the following prices per 100 pounds were used: Wheat, $1.66; corn, $1.60; bran, $1.20; cornmeal, $1.75; shorts, $1.40; and beef scraps, $3.25. These prices are higher than the feed would bring if sold by the farmer, but at that the flock returned a good profit. They produced a total of 8,057 eggs at a food cost of 10½ cents a dozen. At the prevailing prices the eggs sold for $157.17, thus giving a total profit of $90.90.

At an average price of 23.4 cents a dozen the hens returned a profit of a dollar and a half apiece above the cost of feed. Even at an average price of 20 cents a dozen the hens doubled the value of the feed.

They were fed as a scratch food a mixture of two parts cracked corn and one part wheat. The mash consisted of equal parts of bran, shorts, cornmeal and beef scrap. Grit, oyster shell and water were kept before the birds all the time.

Warm Weather Hints.

As the chicks grow they need more room. It does not pay to let them crowd.

Beware of musty, mouldy, sour or decayed food. It is sure to cause trouble.

Tough grass is of no value as a green food. Better sow some quick growing crop.

Feed hoppers greatly reduce the work. If they are kept filled, the chicks will never go hungry.

If your chicks are not doing well something is wrong. Look out for lice and for worms in the intestines.

Two-year-old hens had better be sent to the market. They seldom pay for their feed if kept over a third season.

Grit and oyster shell should be included in the ration for both young and old. To neglect this would be poor economy.

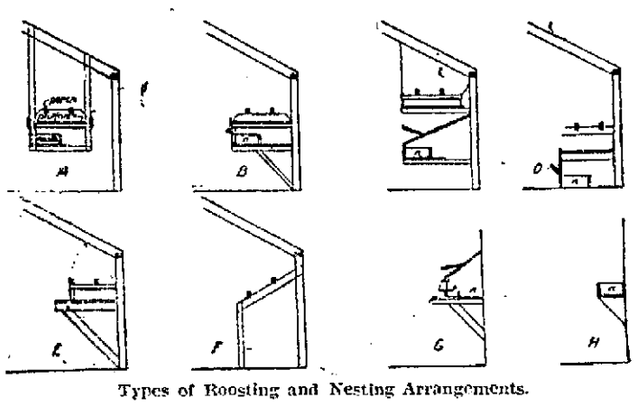
Young stock will do better if not compelled to pick their living with the old. There will also be less trouble from lice.

Shade is one of the most important essentials during the hot months. Get the chicks into the orchard and cornfield. It is not too late to plant sunflowers.

A growing chick will not thrive on short rations. If the right kind of food is fed, there is little danger of overfeeding, especially if they are given plenty of range.

Supplement the regular feeds with a wet mash—fed crumbly. Feed all the chicks will clean up before going to roost, but none should be left in the trough, for it will sour.

Mark the pullets this fall so that you will know just how old your hens are. A leg band on the right leg one year and on the left leg the next will assist in culling the flock. A hog ring will serve the purpose.



Types of Roosting and Nesting Arrangements.

"Titanic" Wheat

The Department of Agriculture has recently been advised by a correspondent in California that a variety of wheat is being advertised under the name "Titanic." The assertion is made that it is a new variety of wheat discovered in England about four years ago, and that a small quantity of seed was brought to the United States by one of the survivors of the ill-fated Titanic. The wheat is represented as having extremely high yielding power, the returns reaching as high as 7,000-fold. A photograph sent by this correspondent shows a head identical in appearance with the widely exploited "Alaska" wheat. Five acres of the wheat are said to be growing in the State of Washington, and the seed, it is believed, will be offered at high prices after harvest. The Department has no further or more definite information concerning this variety, but farmers and dealers are cautioned to be on their guard concerning this new exploitation.

COMFORTABLE HOMES HELP.

The better farm home is not a panacea for all ills of dissatisfaction with farm life. There will be farm boys and farm girls who will want to take up other professions than tilling the soil. The problem, says the Department of Agriculture, is not to force them to stay on the farm, but to make conditions good enough there that they may make an intelligent choice.

Careful tests show that thinned trees produce as large a quantity of fruit as trees not thinned.

Because of the Soft, Perishable, Character of This Fruit, It Is Most Successfully Harvested By Hand Picking—In the Evaporation Process Great Care Also Is Necessary in Handling.

Raspberries are harvested in two ways. For consumption as fresh fruit they are always hand picked. In fact, many of the commercial growers of raspberries which are intended for evaporation or drying prefer to hand pick rather than to "bat" the fruit. There are perhaps about as many advocates of hand picking as of "batting," and a grower must decide for himself which, under his circumstances, is most economical.

Raspberry Harvesters at Work "Batting."

Hand picking does not require any description, but there are a great many people who do not know what "batting" means.

In this method of picking the berries the bushes are bent over a device covered with muslin and the fruit is beaten into these tray-like receptacles by the use of a very light paddle. The bushes are drawn over by a short wire hook, and with a light, somewhat curved bat, the well-ripened fruits are knocked from the plants up against the muslin and roll gently to the lower end of the tray, where the wider portions of the frame form a receptacle.

With a device of this kind one man is capable of picking from 5 to 8 bushels of fruit daily, while the most expert hand pickers can pick only about 100 quarts, or 3 bushels. It will thus be seen that this device is of considerable advantage in that it shortens the period of harvest. The drawback is that a small percentage of the berries is lost by bouncing out of the tray as they are forced against the muslin by the stroke of the paddle. This loss however, is not very great, amounting, perhaps to not more than one-half of one per cent in extreme cases.

The batting of raspberries is never practiced except upon fruits which are to be evaporated. After being dried, they must be looked over carefully by hand, as are beans, so as to remove any small leaves which have been batted into the trays with the fruit.

The use of heat, either from the sun or from some artificial source, for the purpose of drying the fruits has made the raspberry an important commercial product in certain sections of the United States. Regions which could not profitably engage in the growing of this fruit were its sole use to be found as a fresh fruit upon the market can now safely undertake its cultivation. While the sun drying of raspberries has been practiced as long as the raspberry has been used for culinary purposes, the art of drying it with artificial heat is a comparatively recent commercial development.

The artificial process of drying under a high heat has an advantage over sun drying in that the product can be obtained much sooner and is of a more desirable quality. Evaporated fruit of the highest quality loses only a small percentage of its juices. The heat is sufficient to sear the outside of the fruit by breaking down its cellular structure and giving it a dry, somewhat resistant surface, which has a tendency to keep the interior portion much more moist and palatable than is possible under the slow process of sun drying.

With partially ripened fruits such as peaches, apricots, prunes, apples, etc., which are dried under high heats, the process becomes one of transforming the starches into sugar, or, in other words, a quickening of the ripening process. This to a certain extent is accomplished with the raspberry, but, as its fruits are usually thoroughly matured when they go to the evaporator, it is likely that there is much less chemical change in the raspberry than in the case of the apple. The improved quality of the product from the evaporator not only adds to its commercial value, but increases the income of the producer, because there is less loss in weight in evaporated than in sun-dried fruit. In other words, the yield from a given area in evaporated fruit is somewhat greater than the yield from the same area in sun-dried fruit. These features, together with the rapidity with which the operation can be carried on, are considered of sufficient advantage to warrant growers of raspberries in erecting evaporators even at considerable cost.

The drying of berries on racks exposed to the sun is a practice largely in vogue in many of the raspberry growing regions, and was, up to comparatively recent times, the only method of curing and caring for the fruits of the raspberry. The method of sun curing is more or less inconvenient in that it requires a great deal of attention and provision for sheltering the fruit in case of showers, as well as coverings for the racks at night to protect them from rain or dew.

An astonishing number of stock are killed each season by lightning, and not a few human beings, and in almost every case the dead stock is found near a wire fence. There is no doubt but that a large portion of this stock and human life could be saved by grounding the wires of the fence, but as this calls for a large-sized, rather expensive, wire or iron rod, it is seldom done.

An effective safety device may be easily constructed as follows: Any ordinary, smooth fence wire may be driven four or five feet deep in the hardest soil—at either depth the wire is sure to be in damp, wet soil at all seasons of the year. Two 1x12-inch boards, four or five feet long, are shaped like a flight of steep steps (as shown in the accompanying illustration).

The step-shaped notches should be about six inches in height and one and one-half inches deep; in the top center of each step a small groove is cut (as shown by the darts leading to B). These should be one-fourth inch wide and about one-eighth of an inch deep so that when the two pieces are fastened together each step has a one-fourth-inch hole its entire length.

The grooves should be as smooth and straight as possible but can be cut with an ordinary pocket-knife if no other tool is at hand.

Lightning Arrestor.

In this manner a very small wire may be driven in the ground without bending, and only six inches of same is above the wood at one time. Splice the ground wire and connect same to each wire of the fence and you will have a first-class lightning arrestor.

The distance apart these ground wires should be placed is a question—the writer places them every eight or ten rods.—J. Bridgeman.

BUILD THE FENCE PROPERLY.

To get the maximum of service out of a fence it is absolutely necessary that it should be well built. The corner posts must be placed solidly in the ground in such a manner that they can not be heaved by frost or drawn loose by the pull of the fence. The fabric should be strung tightly to the end posts, but it ought not to be tightly stapled to the line posts. It should be fastened to line posts in such manner that the wires may move in a horizontal direction to take care of the contraction and expansion due to changes in temperature, and to distribute the force of a blow along the fence line so that the strain will not come entirely on any one or two posts or any one point of the wire. A barbed wire should be placed a short distance above the top of the woven wire to prevent cattle and horses from crowding it down when reaching over or rubbing against the fence.

HOW TO GET THE BEST PRICES.

Because of our poor market for second grade butter the farmers in every community should compel their creamery to grade the cream, and should do all in their power to see that every farmer produces only first grade cream. Then and only then will that creamery be able to pay top prices for cream.

INSECTS' HABITS.

Hessian fly grubs feed between the leaf sheath and the stalk at the crown and lower joints of the plant. Destroy the "flax seeds" which produce next year's crop by disking and plowing stubble as soon after harvesting as possible. Keep down all volunteer wheat, sow late in the fall and get your neighbors to do the same.

The chinch bug sucks the juices of corn, wheat, sorghums, and other plants of the grass family. They may be trapped in dusty ditches if they go from wheat to corn, or in rainy weather an oil or tar barrier may be necessary. If they get to the corn, spray it with soapsuds, emulsion, or tobacco solutions. The clump forming grasses by roadsides and in waste lands may be burned in late fall and early winter to kill chinch bugs which collect there for the winter.—T. J. Talbert, Mo. College of Agriculture.

MULBERRIES WILL SAVE YOUR FRUIT.

Probably the chief value of the mulberry is as a food for the birds. Robins, jays, catbirds and many others prefer it to cherries, raspberries and the fruits which they eat where no mulberries are available. Plant plenty of mulberries and you will have very little cause for complaint regarding the damage done by birds.

Butter Tree of Tropics

Mr. Yerby, the United States Consul at Sierra Leone, tells of a wonderful tropical tree called the shea, or butter tree. It furnishes the natives not only with nuts, which they highly prize, but with butter, which may become an article of commerce of importance, since it is already exported to Europe, where it is used in making artificial butter. This tree produces a nut covered with a soft pulp which is in turn covered with a smooth skin, easily removable when the nut ripens. This pulp is sweet and wholesome. About sixty per cent. of the nut is butter, which is edible. The tree begins to bear when it is fifteen years old, and reaches its full capacity in twenty-five years. Barring jungle fires a butter plantation is a long time and profitable investment. Chocolate manufacturers could easily absorb the product. Candles and soap can also be made of it. Trees that can produce butter, soap and candles are worth cultivating.

SUNSHINE IN THE DAIRY STABLE.

A farmer, whose cattle have always been kept in a stable on the north side of the barn, well lighted and ventilated, had occasion to enlarge his stable building the extension with a southern exposure, into which the direct rays of the sun were permitted to enter with no obstruction. He discovered by accident, what he subsequently demonstrated by repeated experience, that the same creature in the sunlight took on flesh more readily, ate less and produced more than when kept in the stable where the direct sunlight never entered. More than this, he proved conclusively that creatures suffering with various diseases, or reduced physical condition from divers causes, recovered more readily when afforded the energizing influences of the sunshine.

SHALLOW CULTIVATION FOR CORN.

Shallow cultivation in a good seed bed can be done well with a narrow-shoveled cultivator or a light harrow, the teeth of which slant backward. In a field in which there are loose sods that may prevent the young plants from reaching the surface, the cultivator is to be preferred to the harrow. Harrowing corn after it is up always reduces the stand somewhat, but in many cases it is a good method of saving labor. The harrowing should be done on a bright afternoon when the plants are somewhat wilted. They are less easily broken then.

ECONOMIZING GARDEN SPACE.

If one desires to grow only a few cucumbers the plants may be grown upon a trellis, or planted around the outside of the poultry yard and allowed to climb on the wire netting. A few stakes driven around each hill will protect the plants from the chickens.

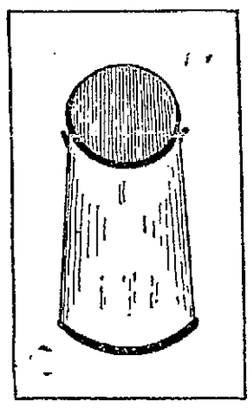
Constructing Cement Piers

Cement piers for granaries and other buildings that should set above the ground can be cheaply and evenly made.

A galvanized iron cone is made of sheet-iron, the size and length of the pier to be built, which is supported by an iron band at either end (as shown in the illustration).

Two handles are riveted to opposite sides, and the mold is ready for business. The cone should be at least two inches larger at the lower end than it is at the top. The excavation is made for the piers the same as for building stone piers. The iron form or mold is placed in the excavation and filled with the cement mixture.

The piers may be made in two different ways. First, the cement may be rather thin and allowed to set in the form until sufficiently hardened to remove same, or the cement may be what is called a dry mixture, that is, mixed with as little water as possible, so that when the form is filled it may be removed with a twisting motion and the cement will hold its shape.



Mold for Making Cement Piers.

Bolts may be embedded in the top for holding down sills, while the form is in place.

In using the dry mixture have the same so mixed that when squeezed in the hand it will hold its shape, and it will be of the proper consistency for molding the piers. Long gate-posts may be made in the same manner, porch columns, etc.

WHEAT IN CALIFORNIA.

California, once an important wheat State and noted for large bonanza wheat farms, is no longer classed as a wheat-producing State. Twenty years ago it produced 43,000,000 bushels of wheat, shipping much of it to Europe. This year its production will probably be not much more than 4,000,000 bushels, and it will need to ship in from other States 10,000,000 bushels or more to meet its own food requirements.

How To Can Corn

Cut corn from cob when it is at the proper stage and in filling the cans or glass jars in which it is to be preserved put some corn in the bottom, mashing this down with a cob from which the corn has been cut until the milk comes out well. Put in another layer and mash again, and so on until the jar is full. The cans should be slightly heaping and the covers then screwed on tight. When the cans are filled and covers on they should be put in the boiler and set on a crate or frame so that they will not touch the bottom. And they should be so arranged that they will not touch each other. The boiler should then be filled with cold water, brought to a boil and allowed to boil for four hours. Let stand until water is cool; then remove cans and try covers to see if they are tight. The cans should be kept covered with water while boiling, and this may be done by keeping a kettle of boiling water handy. This method of canning is recommended by the department of agriculture as the most satisfactory for preserving corn, beans, peas and other vegetables.

FOR SUMMER FEEDING.

The summer silo is gaining favor rapidly as a supply source of a sufficient amount of succulent feed. Many dairy farmers feed silage every day in the year and especially when pasture is not to be had. A small silo built and filled in the fall to be opened in July is the most economical method of supplying a succulent ration during short pastures. Silage left over from winter feeding may be kept with very little loss until midsummer. Cows should be fed from 40 to 50 pounds of silage each day. Silage alone does not furnish a balanced ration so some grain should be fed, especially to the cows that give the most milk. At least one pound of cottonseed meal should be included in the daily grain ration.

HIGH GRADE—HIGH PRICE.

First grade butter is still in big demand in this country and the producers of good butter are realizing a nice margin in price over the producers of second grade butter. Because of foreign competition with our second grade butter the difference in price between first grade and second grade is wide. Foreign competition has not materially increased the supply of first grades, while the supply of seconds has been increased tremendously.

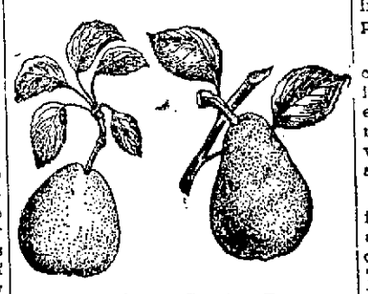
MAKE THE COLLAR FIT.

Horses' necks differ in shape and it is wrong to make them wear a collar that was fitted to another horse. You would have galled feet if you wore other than your own shoes. Much worse for the horse that pulls a load with a misfit collar.

THE PEAR VARIETIES ARE NUMEROUS

By G. B. BRACKETT.

The pear has long been regarded as one of the most luscious of the many kinds of fruit brought under cultivation. The choice varieties excel most apples in rich, juicy texture and delicacy of flavor, and for both dessert and culinary purposes, either canned or in the fresh state, the pear is considered a great acquisition. With a proper selection of varieties and with careful handling and storing of the fruit its season of use may be extended from midsummer to late winter without resorting to artificial means of preservation.



Seckel Pear. Bartlett Pear.

Two distinct classes or types of the pear are now grown in this country: (1) the European and (2) the Asiatic, or oriental.

The European type is a native of Europe: from it most of our domestic varieties have sprung. Pears of this class are well adapted to the New England States, New York, Pennsylvania and other States southward and westward to California, Washington, Oregon and Idaho. In the States named beyond the Rocky Mountains extensive commercial orchards have been planted with choice varieties of this class of pears, the Bartlett leading all other varieties in commercial plantings.

The Asiatic, or oriental, type is of comparatively recent introduction. In its natural condition it is scarcely an edible fruit and must receive an admixture of our improved European varieties in order to render it at all acceptable.

The more important varieties grown in America are hybrids, the results of artificial or accidental crossing with our domestic pears of European origin. To this class belong the Le Conte, Kieffer, Garber, Smith and other hybrids. While these are not considered as valuable for dessert use in the fresh state as varieties of the European type they are much esteemed for canning and culinary purposes. These hybrids are very productive and well adapted to a wide range of country extending from New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland and Virginia southward to Florida and Texas. In some of these States the industry has grown to large proportions. The Kieffer and Le Conte are the varieties of the oriental type that have gained the greatest commercial prominence.

BREAKAGE OF JARS IN CANNING.

When breakage of jars occurs it is due to such causes as—

(1) Overpacking jars. Corn, pumpkin, peas, lima beans and sweet potatoes swell or expand in processing. Do not fill the jars quite full of these products.

(2) Placing cold jars in hot water, or vice versa. As soon as the jars are filled with hot sirup or hot water, place immediately in the canner.

(3.) If top cracks during sterilization the wire bail was too tight.

(4) In steam canner, having too much water in the canner. Water should not come above the platform.

(5) Allowing cold draft to strike the jars when they are removed from the canner.

(6) Having wire bail too tight, thus breaking the jars or glass tops when lever is forced down.

BLACKBERRIES.

Grow blackberries for home use; there is no healthier fruit.

Grow blackberries for profit; there is no other berry that will yield greater returns for the time spent on it.

FIRE BLIGHT HARD TO CHECK.

The only known means of checking fire blight is to cut and burn all the affected parts before the disease is carried to the rest of the orchard by bees and other insects, or has a chance to spread through the twigs themselves. The pruning tools may carry the germs if not carefully disinfected by either dipping them into a 1 to 1000 solution of corrosive sublimate, or wiping them with a rag or sponge which has been dampened with such a solution carried in a small bottle for this purpose. Corrosive sublimate—also called bichloride of mercury—may be purchased at any drug store in small bottles containing about twenty-five tablets apiece with directions for dissolving these tablets and making solutions of any desired strength.

PREVENT FLIES FROM BREEDING.

The housekeeper should insist that not a drop of slop of any kind be thrown about the door, and that all sink-drains and cesspools be securely covered and that no open slop pails be allowed to stand near the house, inviting a congregation of these summer pests.

MAYOR HOSEY DEFINES JITNEY STAND AGAIN

Says He Has No Grudge Against Traction Co. But He Wants Service.

"Service for the people of Fort Wayne is my only reason for fighting the bond for jitneys," Mayor Hosey said Saturday. "A bond will drive out the taxis. It would rob thousands of people of needed service.

"This is not a new fight for me. 'Hoseyism' is not a new term. In 1901 and 1902, when the council forced the street railway company to extend its lines all over the city, I was in the thick of the fight. They used 'Hoseyism' then. The street car people used all their stock arguments against me. I was dead politically, they said. Finally, the people understood that some of us were fighting for them.

"The extended lines were a great help to Fort Wayne. They caused the city to grow wherever the car lines went. Where some of the editors now live was waving corn fields. The extension of the lines did not break up the street car company then. It would not injure them now to extend lines.

"That is one of the things we have been after. The street car company ignores us. We especially wanted more lines in Bloomingdale and were told that 'it wouldn't pay.' They refused to run bus lines in that region. They would rather people would walk six squares to take a car.

"The jitneys are giving service to those people. Jitneys are running into other parts of town where the street car does not penetrate. Jitneys are helping workmen to leave the factories earlier in the evening. They should not be put out of business by the council.

"Back of all the fight to ruin the jitney business is the street car officials. They have been kicking all the time about the unfair competition. They are putting out the argument about respecting the capital they have invested here. They say we are trying to scare capital away. That is rot. A picture show manager who invests his capital here does not expect us to close all other picture shows. He expects competition.

"I have no grudge against the street car people, except that they have not made service their watchword in Fort Wayne. They look only to the easiest nickles. The matter of the biggest per cent. on their investment is foremost.

"I will not oppose a license for jitneys. I do not oppose their being regulated. I think they are operated by responsible men. I want them to have to be run right. I do not want them choked out of business when they are supplying a city need."

OSSIAN NEWS.

Ossian, Ind., Aug. 19.—George Hatfield, of Caldwell, Mo., arrived in Ossian Thursday afternoon for a visit with his mother, Mrs. Ann Hatfield, and with other relatives.

Miss Nan Johnston left yesterday for Beaver, Pa., to spend several weeks visiting in the home of her nieces. Misses Clara and Flora Slentz, and with her sister, Mrs. Melissa Galey, and other relatives.

Mrs. Ella Wolff and children, Robert and Jane, of Mishawaka, came Thursday to visit with Mrs. Wolff's parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. F. Chalfant.

Mrs. Steve Cotton and children and Mrs. Sarah Cotton, of Prospect, spent Thursday with the latter's son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. William Cotton.

Dr. and Mrs. A. G. Gorrell were motored to Winona Lake yesterday by the latter's brother, J. S. Burnett, accompanied by his grandson, Burnett Drueley. The Gorrells have gone to attend Bible conference and will have a cottage at the lake with their daughter, Mrs. G. G. Glass, and family. Mr. Burnett returned home Friday evening.

Miss Haidi Wasson returned Friday to her home in Montpelier after spending a week in the homes of Mrs. Will Woodward and Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Woodward.

Miss Mary Etta Weisell, a teacher of Bluffton, who has been spending her summer vacation in Ossian, left today for a week's visit at Winona Lake with Miss Mary Harter and Miss Dorcas Glass.

The members of the S. P. C. Square club were very delightfully entertained Thursday evening by Mrs. L. W. Kemper, of Fremont, at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Green. The ladies enjoyed a pleasant time with their fancy work and the hostess served a dainty lunch. Those attending were Mesdames E. D. Poffenberger, A. A. Melching, Walter Timbrook, Carl Wilson, Maude Swihart, Dallas Richey, Ernest Vananda, Sidney Swaim and Miss May Morton.

W. A. Woodward went to Fort Wayne today to attend the democratic barbecue.

Mrs. T. B. Hunter, accompanied by her daughter, Mrs. Nora Brickley, of Oberlin, O., went to Winona Lake Friday morning to attend the Bible conference. They will be gone about ten days.

Mrs. Sidney Swaim will go early Sunday morning to spend the day with her brother-in-law and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Chapman, near Economy. Mrs. John Shallenberger, of Richmond, and niece, Frances Swaim, who has been visiting with her, will also be guests of the Chapmans. Mrs. Swaim and Frances will return to Ossian that evening.

Mrs. Will Woodward went to Fort Wayne yesterday to spend the week-end with her son, Charles Woodward, and family.

Frank M. Thurber has recently sold a $900 bill of goods to Mr. and Mrs. Fred Dunham, of Chicago.

Mrs. Nate Weaver, Mrs. Evan Chalfant and Mrs. George Black, of Bluffton, who have been at Plymouth since Tuesday visiting in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Andy Glass, are expected home today. These ladies went especially to see Mr. and Mrs. Glass' daughter, Mrs. Edward Lautzenhiser, and small son, Paul, who have recently returned from the Philippines, where Mr. Lautzenhiser has been a teacher in the government schools.

Mrs. James Clark, who has been quite ill lately with heart and bronchial troubles, is reported some better.

Mr. and Mrs. S. L. Gorrell had as supper guests Thursday Mrs. I. A. Davis, of Gladstone, Mich., and Mrs Elsie Depew, of Marquette, Mich.

Mrs. W. A. Woodward went to Muncie today to make a two-day visit with Mrs. Wilson Hoot. She will return Sunday evening by auto with Mr. and Mrs. Emmett Rector and children.

Rev. L. W. Kemper, of Fremont, who has been visiting with his parents, Mr and Mrs. D. Kemper, of Stittsville Mich., came to Ossian Thursday to join his wife and children at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Green. They all leave today for Petroleum to spend the week-end with Mr. and Mrs Samuel Garrett, Mr. and Mrs. Monroe Courtney and Mr. and Mrs. William Watkins, the ladies all sisters of Rev. Kemper.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Garton had as Thursday guests the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Prestanf, also Mr. and Mrs. Jake Johnston, of Bluffton.

Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Prough returned Thursday evening from a week's visit with relatives at Goshen.

Mrs. James Beaty, of Bluffton, came Thursday for a visit with her sister, Mrs. Josephus Caston.

Mrs. Irvin Davis, of Gladstone, Mich., and daughter, Mrs. Elsie Depew, of Marquette, Mich., came Thursday and are guests of Mrs. Davis' brother-in-law, Charles Davis, and family. They came especially to see Miss Lucile Davis, who has been ill.

Mr. and Mrs. G. G. Glass and family motored to Winona Lake yesterday for Bible conference. Mr. Glass will return Monday, but the others will remain all week stopping at the same cottage with Dr. and Mrs. A. G. Gorrell.

Rev. Garfield Dawe, of the Ossian M. E. circuit, who has been spending a month's vacation in Chicago with his brother, E. Dawe, and wife, is expected to return to Ossian today.

CHICAGO GRAIN AND PROVISIONS.

Chicago, Aug. 19—Wheat shorts covered their contracts on a large scale today and early prices were up more than 3c, compared with yesterday's close. December opened 1½c to 3½c higher at $1.50½ to $1.48½ and sold at $1.50⅝. May advanced to $1.54, 3½c over yesterday.

Hot weather and the wheat strength sent corn up. December opened ¾c to ⅞c higher at 74½c to 74⅝c and sold to 74c. September advanced to 86c, a gain of 1¼c.

Oats were active and firm.

THE DAY ON WALL STREET.

New York, Aug. 19.—Today's session was mainly devoted to the usual week-end settlement of outstanding professional contracts, these being more numerous because of the recent activity in specialties. Marines and United Fruit were pressed for sale but increased strength was shown by allied issues. Atlantic, Gulf and West Indies making a new record. Few changes of note occurred in the investment group, rails being held in check, pending definite word from Washington. Leading industrials, munitions and motors were dull. The closing was irregular. Bonds were steady.

Shipping shares were under pressure at today's opening, the recent advance in those issues, coupled with adverse foreign advices inviting profit taking and short selling. Marine common and preferred yielded a point each with 2¼ for United Fruit, but Atlantic, Gulf and West Indies made a new high record at 72 before it reacted. Rails continued to reflect the shifting state of the labor controversy, although Reading was the only issue to manifest heaviness. U. S. Steel and other seasoned industrials were steady, with moderate recessions in motors and some equipments.

NEW YORK BANK STATEMENT.

New York, Aug. 19.—The statement of the actual codition of banks and trust companies for the week shows that they hold $127,593,220 reserve in excess of legal requirements. This is an increase of $24,508,080 over last week.

BABY BOND FOR FUTURER BUSINESS

"I am employed by a firm in which I believe I shall be able to purchase an interest some day," said a local young man, "and I see no better way of accumulating the necesary capital than to invest a portion of my salary each month in Baby Bonds."

Baby Bonds come in $10 denominations, are secured by first mortgages on local real estate, and bear six per cent. interest. There are also some $500 bonds with the same security and the same rate of interest. For further information, see the Wildwood Sales company, Shoaff building.—Advertisement.

NEW RECORD BY ALEXANDER.

Cincinnati, O., Aug. 19.—According to records in the hands of the national baseball commission a shutout game pitched by Alexander, of the Philadelphia Nationals, here yesterday establishes a new record for no-run games pitched by one pitcher during a major league season. Up to last year, according to these records, Mathewson, pitching for New York, held the honor with twelve shutout games during a season. Alexander equaled this last year and surpassed it yesterday, when he pitched his thirteenth shutout of this season.

MAYOR HOSEY DEFINES JITNEY STAND AGAIN

Says He Has No Grudge Against Traction Co. But He Wants Service.

"Service for the people of Fort Wayne is my only reason for fighting the bond for jitneys," Mayor Hosey said Saturday. "A bond will drive out the taxis. It would rob thousands of people of needed service.

"This is not a new fight for me. 'Hoseyism' is not a new term. In 1901 and 1902, when the council forced the street railway company to extend its lines all over the city, I was in the thick of the fight. They used 'Hoseyism' then. The street car people used all their stock arguments against me. I was dead politically, they said. Finally, the people understood that some of us were fighting for them.

"The extended lines were a great help to Fort Wayne. They caused the city to grow wherever the car lines went. Where some of the editors now live was waving corn fields. The extension of the lines did not break up the street car company then. It would not injure them now to extend lines.

"That is one of the things we have been after. The street car company ignores us. We especially wanted more lines in Bloomingdale and were told that 'it wouldn't pay.' They refused to run bus lines in that region. They would rather people would walk six squares to take a car.

"The jitneys are giving service to those people. Jitneys are running into other parts of town where the street car does not penetrate. Jitneys are helping workmen to leave the factories earlier in the evening. They should not be put out of business by the council.

"Back of all the fight to ruin the jitney business is the street car officials. They have been kicking all the time about the unfair competition. They are putting out the argument about respecting the capital they have invested here. They say we are trying to scare capital away. That is rot. A picture show manager who invests his capital here does not expect us to close all other picture shows. He expects competition.

"I have no grudge against the street car people, except that they have not made service their watchword in Fort Wayne. They look only to the easiest nickles. The matter of the biggest per cent. on their investment is foremost.

"I will not oppose a license for jitneys. I do not oppose their being regulated. I think they are operated by responsible men. I want them to have to be run right. I do not want them choked out of business when they are supplying a city need."

CHICAGO GRAIN AND PROVISIONS.

Chicago, Aug. 19—Wheat shorts covered their contracts on a large scale today and early prices were up more than 3c, compared with yesterday's close. December opened 1½c to 2½c higher at $1.50½ to $1.48½ and sold at $1.50⅝. May advanced to $1.51, 3½c over yesterday.

Hot weather and the wheat strength sent corn up. December opened ¾c to ⅞c higher at 74½c to 74⅝c and sold to 74c. September advanced to 86c, a gain of 1⅛c.

Oats were active and firm.

THE DAY ON WALL STREET.

New York, Aug. 19.—Today's session was mainly devoted to the usual week-end settlement of outstanding professional contracts, these being more numerous because of the recent activity in specialties. Marines and United Fruit were pressed for sale but increased strength was shown by allied issues. Atlantic, Gulf and West Indies making a new record. Few changes of note occurred in the investment group, rails being held in check, pending definite word from Washington. Leading industrials, munitions and motors were dull. The closing was irregular. Bonds were steady.

Shipping shares were under pressure at today's opening, the recent advance in those issues, coupled with adverse foreign advices inviting profit taking and short selling. Marine common and preferred yielded a point each with 2¼ for United Fruit, but Atlantic, Gulf and West Indies made a new high record at 72 before it reacted. Rails continued to reflect the shifting state of the labor controversy, although Reading was the only issue to manifest heaviness. U. S. Steel and other seasoned industrials were steady, with moderate recessions in motors and some equipments.

NEW YORK BANK STATEMENT.

New York, Aug. 19.—The statement of the actual codition of banks and trust companies for the week shows that they hold $127,593,220 reserve in excess of legal requirements. This is an increase of $24,508,080 over last week.

THE MONEY MARKET.

"I am employed by a firm in which I believe I shall be able to purchase an interest some day," said a local young man, "and I see no better way of accumulating the necessary capital than to invest a portion of my salary each month in Baby Bonds."

Baby Bonds come in $10 denominations, are secured by first mortgages on local real estate, and bear six per cent. interest. There are also some $500 bonds with the same security and the same rate of interest. For further information, see the Wildwood Sales company, Shoaff building.—Advertisement.

NEW RECORD BY ALEXANDER.

Cincinnati, O., Aug. 19.—According to records in the hands of the national baseball commission a shutout game pitched by Alexander, of the Philadelphia Nationals, here yesterday establishes a new record for no-run games pitched by one pitcher during a major league season. Up to last year, according to these records, Mathewson, pitching for New York, held the honor with twelve shutout games during a season. Alexander equaled this last year and surpassed it yesterday, when he pitched his thirteenth shutout of this season.
